SUMMARY.

The general unofficial opinion is much more hopeful in all the European capitals, except Vienna.

The more hopeful feeling, however, is not endorsed in official circles in Paris.

The French newspapers say that the question of peace or war rests with Germany.

British consols touched £71 on Monday, which is a record.

Important preparations are being completed in Vienna with a view to immediate military action.

A Berlin journal states that the Austrian army has already invaded Servia at Mitrovitza, and that the Servians retreated.

The Servians are reported to have blown up a bridge over the Danube, and opened fire near Temiskubin.

Diplomatic circles attach little importance to the encounters between Servian and Austrian troops on the Danube.

It is generally considered in Nish, the temporary Servian capital, that the situation is less critical than on Sunday.

The mobilisation of the Servian army is practically complete.

The Vienna evening newspapers state that the Servian reply shows that Servia is only seeking evasion.

It is considered impossible in Vienna for Austria to cease action.

Sir Edward Grey stated in the Commons that if the dispute were confined to Austria and Servia, Britain would not interfere.

The moment, however, that another Power became involved, the position would become critical.

Sir Edward added that France, Germany, and Italy had been asked to allow their Ambassadors to meet him in conference.

Mr. Birrell stated in the House that a full inquiry into the conduct of the military in the gun-running episode would be held.

Sir John Ross, Chief Commissioner of the Dublin police, has resigned.

Feeling in Dublin is intense, and all soldiers have been confined to barracks.

The Scottish Borderers have been ordered to the Curragh.

Sir John Ross dismissed two constables for refusing to obey orders to charge the Nationalists.

The other members of the Dublin police force threaten to strike unless the two men are reinstated.

An eye-witness declares that hundreds of Greeks are exterminating the villagers of Southern Albania.

The Greeks are said to have burnt the whole countryside to cover the traces of their atrocities.

A peace conference is proceeding at Saltillo between the Constitutionalists and Federals.

The object of the conference is to enable the Constitutionalists to take over the reins of government.

A decree has been issued at Nuevo Leon, a State in Mexico, forbidding Roman Catholic churches and colleges to open.

Trade between Australia and Canada showed a decline of £5000 during the past year.

A train from Hornsby ran into the deadend at Milson's Point yesterday morning, apparently through the brakes failing to act.

Two passengers were severely injured, and a number received a shaking.

The Premier appeared as a witness before the Boorahil Commission yesterday.

Mr. Holman denied that any influence was brought to bear on the Cabinet in connection with the purchase.

The Premier said he regarded the practice of members of Parliament acting as land agents as a bad one.

The Minister for Lands also gave evidence. He said he had the Cabinet's consent to bring in a bill dealing with land agents.

It had, however, been decided to allow the bill to stand over until they got the benefit of the Commissioner's report.

In the Industrial Court Mr. Justice Heydon said the law had fallen into contempt and disregard among the industrial classes.

He thought the Court would have to adopt a course to enable the law to be respected.

The Treasurer gave notice in the Assembly of the introduction of a Supply Bill.

A discussion took place upon a motion for a Royal Commission upon the administration of the police force.

It was stated that discontent prevailed in the force, while there was distrust in the public mind.

The system of tipping said to exist on the railways was referred to, and departmental action was urged.

A luncheon was held by the Congregational Union yesterday in honour of the Rev. J. D. Jones, the visiting commissioner.

Navvies from the sixth section of the North Coast railway are reported to be stranded at Wallerawang.

The Maitland miners are, it is said, more determined than ever to secure the abolition of the afternoon shift.

A reply is given by the miners to the published remarks concerning Pelaw Main.

Sanitary inspectors have made claims on the Local Government Association for increased wages.

Severe penalties have been inflicted upon certain players who were concerned in the Rugby seven-a-side fracas.

The schooner Tramp went ashore on the north beach at Urunga, Bellinger River.

A labourer has been arrested on a charge of having caused the death of Ethel Hougaton, at Broadmeadow.

Many cases of grave poverty are reported in Auckland.

The position is attributed to the late strike, which disorganised unskilled labour.

A six-horse team, with a waggon, fell 300 feet over a cliff near Paeroa, N.Z. The driver and four horses were killed.

The matinee performance tendered by the Actors' Association to Miss Ellen Terry, at Her Majesty's, was a great success.

Miss Essie Jenyns (Mrs. J. R. Wood) made her reappearance after an absence of 26 years from the stage.

The steamer Taiyuan, from Hongkong, left Thursday Island on Sunday morning in quarantine.

It is stated that after leaving Manila a man aboard was found to be suffering from plague. He was landed at Zamboanga.

The Board of Health impresses upon householders the need for maintaining a continuous crusade against rats.

Evidence of the dry season in Victoria is furnished by a serious falling off in the goods traffic on the railways.

The Marine Underwriters of Victoria have issued extra rates for war risk on steamers to and from the United Kingdom.

Claims for an award for monumental masons and their assistants have been filed.

A number of foreign buyers received cablegrams on Monday, cancelling their orders for wool.

The woolbrokers yesterday decided to hold the sales as usual, and about 10,000 bales will be submitted this afternoon.

War rumours had a disturbing effect on 'Change yesterday, and sales were mostly made at lower rates.

The mining market was still disturbed, the order of the day being small profits and quick returns.

The wheat market was not so excited as on the previous day, but sellers were more resolute.

Buyers were of opinion that wheat was not worth more than 4/.

A fair trade was done in all seasonable grocery lines. Prices in the distributing trade were unaltered.

Considerable business was done in tea, blenders taking advantage of the weakness of the market.

Supplies of eggs were heavy yesterday, and quotations were again reduced.

Forecast.—Generally fine in the eastern parts, with a cold, foggy night, but an unsettled change working over the southern half of the State; squally, northerly winds, and mildish.

THERE IS PHOTOGRAPHY
AND PHOTOGRAPHY.
WE ARE PROFESSORS IN PHOTOGRAPHY.

Photography is one of the professions which admit of all classes of aspirants. As sure as the various standards of Gold differ in value, so sure is there an equal difference to be found in Photographs. If a Photographer be not an artist he is but a mechanic, working by rule to obtain a given result. But the work of the artist appeals to the heart.

Photography in itself is not art any more than writing is literature, but an Artist behind the Camera ensures an Art Picture.

Our work is an incentive, and an ideal to every true lover of Art.

We have supplied the Public with Artistic Portraiture, and gained for ourselves the reputation of being the recognised Artists of Sydney.

A TRUTH.—We number among our staff of Artists Gentlemen of HIGHEST TALENT, Specialists in each Department, Producers of good Original Work.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.

BUY a Piano at the
BRITISH PIANOFORTE DEPOT'S SALE,
AND YOU WILL GET A PIANO OF SUPERB MERIT AT HALF THE ORIGINAL COST.
The original owners of these instruments wished to exchange them for Player Pianos, and the result is a very large variety of instruments by famed Masters. The Ruff, Bord, and Ronisch are included.
Each instrument has been thoroughly overhauled, and put into tip-top condition.
Any terms within reason that you suggest will be accepted.

BUILT TO WITHSTAND THE CLIMATE—
THE HOPKINSON PIANO.
THE HOPKINSON PIANO.
This piano is British-built, and is a veritable triumph in value. Due allowance for Australian climatic conditions has been made by its makers, and, as a result, the Hopkinson serves a lifetime in districts where more expensive European makes last comparatively a very short period. Many of the leading makes are unsuited for Australia. The Hopkinson is strongly recommended for any part of the Commonwealth.

IF we were to attempt to cut a FEW pounds off the price of THE "KRAUSS" PIANO
we should be forced to take MANY pounds off its musical value.
We have always taken the stand that people who want the best possible in music are willing to pay a fair price to get it.
And the wonderful success of the "Krauss" Piano proves us right.
We should like you to come in and try this magnificent instrument. We allow three years' terms without interest.
Liberal Discount for Cash. Your old Piano taken as part payment.

HOCKEY.

The results of Saturday's games place Pilgrims in a more secure position. They have secured 23 points out of a possible 24, and are 5 points ahead of any other team. They are the only eleven in either grade that have not been beaten this season. Bandits played a draw against them, the scores being 2 goals all. Several other teams have played the leaders very close games, and Sydneians, Corinthians, Bohemians, and University were each defeated by 1 goal.

With only six more competition games to play it is hardly possible for the Pilgrims to lose the premiership. The struggle for the runner's-up position is proving very keen; and at present Bandits, Corona, and Bohemians are level for second place with 18 points each, having lost two and drawn two games. For the greater part each of these three teams has been responsible for the other's loss of points. This fact makes the competition for second place still more interesting. The points gained by each club are as follow:—

First Grade.—Pilgrims, 23 points; Bandits, Bohemians, Corona, 18; Athenians, Buccaneers, 12; Sydneians, Corinthians, 11; H. A. College, 8; University, 5; Howitzer, Ramblers, 2.
Second Grade.—Bandits, 18; Corona, 17; H. A. College, 14; University, 13; Athenians, 10; Pilgrims, 8.

Several excellent games took place on Saturday, but perhaps the best was that between Bandits and Bohemians. The Bandits did a little more attacking than their opponents, but a draw was about the true reflex of the game. Other fine games were Buccaneers v Athenians, Corona v Sydneians, and Pilgrims v Corinthians. The first-mentioned was an extremely sportsmanlike struggle, in which clean play was a most pleasing feature. The Corona v Sydneians match, while being exciting and well contested, was a trifle scrappy at times, and the shooting was poor on both sides. The eight teams mentioned are left in the final round, as there is not time for a complete second round.

The New South Wales practice game was not a success. The team opposed to the State team was extremely weak, and in consequence the game was not taken seriously. The selectors should have had a strong 11 to meet the New South Wales team, as the more strenuous the practice games the greater the benefits derived. The State team will need all the practice it can get to defeat Victoria this season. Practice runs are to take place on Wednesdays and Thursdays until the team departs on Monday, August 10.

THE TURF.

NOTES.

The annual report and balance-sheet presented to the members of the Orange Jockey Club on the 15th instant, showed a very satisfactory state of affairs, the year's operations resulting in a credit balance of £681. Dr. N. R. Howse moved that 25 per cent. of the profits of each meeting be devoted to a reserve fund of £500 for the purpose of covering any losses caused by unforeseen happenings, with the proviso that in such cases the fund be again replenished by a similar process to the maximum amount. The president stated that the principle of the motion had already been adopted, and that £825 was available for that purpose. The motion was carried. A discussion took place relative to the number of race meetings held in Orange, as well as complaints from some of the district clubs, to the effect that the best dates were monopolised for the local fixtures; but the concensus of opinion was that the club did not desire that the race meetings of the Western District Association should be held in Orange, and preferred that such should take place in some other town. It was also stated that there was too much racing in Orange, especially in the early part of the year, when the fixtures were too close together; but some of the members expressed opposite views. The delegate to the W.D.R.A. was empowered to deal with the matter relative to the W.D.R.A. racing fixture. Suggestions were made that the Orange Cup should be endowed with £200. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:—Patron, Mr. J. C. L. Fitzpatrick; president, Mr. J. J. Dalton; vice-presidents, Messrs. W. C. Bowman, J. Kenna, M. F. Dalton, and L. N. Smith; committee, Messrs. F. J. Mulholland, L. Leeds, J. Dalton, junr., W. Edye, E. B. Dalton, C. T. Fleming, P. C. Weston, L. Heaton, G. W. Harding, V. H. Millard, D. Walker, R. C. Birkenhead, Dr. N. R. Howse, Dr. C. B. Howse, and Mr. W. S. Bellamy; treasurer, Mr. H. H. Lee; delegate to W.D.R.A., Mr. J. J. Dalton.

Recent cable messages from England show that the "doping" question has engaged the attention of the stewards of the Jockey Club at the Newmarket July meeting. The same question is also to the forefront in Austria, where the Jockey Club intends conducting a series of experiments with a view of obtaining some fixed knowledge of the working of dope, and its effect on the appearance of the horses. To that end two three-year-olds named Suskus and Hella have been purchased by the Jockey Club stewards on account of the club, and they are to be trained under the supervision of the club's veterinary surgeon. The two horses, duly doped (says the "Deutscher Sport") will run experimentally in races, carrying the colours of the senior steward. Doping being strictly "taboo" in Austria-Hungary, the dope fiends will, of course, not count even if they come in first. Equally, of course, they will not be regarded as runners at the "tote" office, and any bets inadvertently made on them with the "books" will naturally be void. The experiment seems well worth trying, and by the time the Jockey Club's vets. have been through the different brands of dope they should be in possession of useful data.

The committee of the Queensland Turf Club has decided that after August 31 next any person who nominates or enters, owns, trains, or rides, or undertakes the care, or management, or is otherwise interested in a horse entered or running at an unregistered meeting in Queensland, becomes ipso facto, a person disqualified within the meaning of the Australian Rules of Racing by the committee of the Q.T.C.; and similarly, a horse becomes automatically disqualified if it has been entered for or runs at any unregistered meeting in Queensland, or if it is owned or trained or is under the care or management, in Queensland, of a disqualified person.

The French sportsman M. J. Hennessy, who, it will be remembered, visited Sydney 10 years ago and took back with him the mares Haulette (by Haut Brion) and Beanba (by Wallace), had his colours borne to victory in the French Grand National—the Grand Steeplechase de Paris, four miles and half a furlong—by ch g Lord Loris, by Rabelais (son of St. Simon), from Lady Lilly, 6yrs., who carried 11st 6lb, and easily beat his 16 opponents, the journey occupying 8m 20s, and the stake was worth £7710 to M. Hennessy. Lord Loris started second favourite at 4½ to 1 against. M. Hennessy was also represented in the race by Ex Abrupto and Le Systemier. Inclusive of the stake for the Grand Steeplechase, M. Hennessy's winnings since the commencement of the current season amounts to £10,239.

Advices from Queensland are to the effect that Mr. J. P. Clarke, of Surat, has placed his two-year-old colt, Barley Bree, under the tuition of the Brisbane trainer, F. Johnson. This youngster, who has already been out under silk on four occasions, and filled second place in a race at Roma, was bred at the Widden stud and is by Maltster from Grand Dove, by Grand Flaneur from Turtle Dove, by Robinson Crusoe, and cost 200 guineas at the Randwick yearling sales. On the same station are a two-year-old full sister to My Giovanni, whose dam, Ultimatum, is owned by Mr. Clarke, and the two-year-old filly Lady Calah, by Sir Tristram (imp.) from Calah, by Splendor (imp.), and is three parts sister to Harpist. Lady Calah has not yet carried silk, but she holds Q.T.C. classic engagements for the coming season.

With the view of the better prevention of interference in races, the Dunedin Jockey Club has given notice of motion to be submitted to the N.Z. annual racing conference, the text of which is as under:—"Whenever in a race any horse shall be kicked, bumped, jostled, blocked, crossed, or interfered with in any way which affects its running in the race, it shall be the duty of the rider of such horse, immediately on returning to the scales, to report such interference to the secretary of the club, who shall thereupon cause the substance of such report to be posted on the notice board. If any such interference shall come to the knowledge of the owner or trainer of such horse, it shall be the duty of such owner or trainer to immediately report such interference in a similar manner."

Particulars of the race for the Sixty-first Triennial Stakes won by his Majesty's colt Sunny Lake, by Sundridge from Pearl of the Loch, the result of which was cabled at the time, are to hand. There were eight starters, with Polycrates a short-priced favourite, while 2 to 1 could be got about the King's representative, who made nearly all the running, and beat the favourite by a couple of lengths, covering the seven furlongs and 166 yards in 1m 39⅘s. The success of Sunny Lake evoked quite an ovation, which the King witnessed.

Malt Mark, who is mostly talked about in connection with the A.J.C. Epsom Handicap, is a three-year-old son of Maltster and Simper, the latter by imported Simmer from Gozoreina, by Gozo (imp.) from The Orphan, by Goldsbrough. Malt Mark was bred in the Surat district, Queensland, and was not raced as a two-year-old, but his recent success in the Stradbroke Handicap brought him prominently into notice in connection with the mile race at Randwick.

The Sydney lad, Frank Wootton, whose brilliant career in the saddle earned him the title of champion horseman in England, has made an auspicious commencement in his new vocation as trainer, for, just after receiving his license in that capacity, under the Jockey Club rules, he led in Kodak the winner of the High-weight Handicap at the Brighton June meeting. There were half a score starters, and Kodak, who was favourite, was piloted by W. Smyth.

COUNTRY WEEK.

THE CLUB COMPETITIONS.

Saturday's event which attracted most attention was the match between Bonnie Doon and Manly, in both "A" and "B" divisions, which was postponed from the 11th inst., owing to the death of Mr. T. J. Aldcorn, Bonnie Doon's hon. secretary. The matches had an important bearing on the inter-club competitions, as Bonnie Doon in the "A" grade and Manly in the "B" grade had unbeaten records, and the opponents in each case were recognised as having the best chances of success against them of any of the clubs. Several of the clubs would have liked Manly to win in the "A" grade and Bonnie Doon in the "B" division, and had this happened the competitions would have been left very much more open. However, Bonnie Doon beat Manly at Manly in the "A" grade match by 5 to 4, and Manly, journeying to Bonnie Doon, won by a similar margin in the "B" grade.

Bonnie Doon now heads the list in the "A" grade with 4 wins, without a loss, followed by Killara, with 3 wins and a bye in the third round, Dobroyde being third, with 2 wins and 2 defeats. Hunter's Hill follows with 1 win, 1 defeat, and a bye, and then Manly, with 1 win, 2 losses, and a bye. Parramatta has had 2 defeats and a bye, and Concord is whipper-in with 4 losses. The third round match between Parramatta and Hunter's Hill has not yet been played, but the result can scarcely affect the competition, which depends upon the next round match between Bonnie Doon and Killara, at Bonnie Doon. The winning side should eventually win the premiership, and as Bonnie Doon will be playing at home the odds are in their favour. Manly "B" team seems almost certain to win in the "B" grade.

Playing at Manly, J. B. Ferrier put up a good performance in defeating T. E. Howard, the Bonnie Doon crack. He won the first two holes, and was 3 up at the fourth, Howard winning the fifth in poor figures, but losing the sixth, Ferrier taking 4. The next two holes were divided, and Ferrier won the ninth with a good 3 to 4, turning 4 up. Coming home the first 3 holes were halved in bogey figures, Ferrier becoming 5 up at the thirteenth, with 3 to 4 by his opponent. It was only necessary for him to halve the fourteenth, and this he was somewhat fortunate to do in 7, winning by 5 and 4. Ferrier, who was out in 39, played fairly well, and had a few very good holes. Howard failed on the greens, although his long game was good.

H. W. M'Lelland (B.D.) and L. R. Oswald Sealy had an interesting match. The first hole was halved in well-played fours; but M'Lelland was in trouble at the second, and Sealy won in 6, and the latter also won the next two holes; but M'Lelland won the fifth, sixth, eighth, and ninth, and turned 1 up. The tenth and eleventh were halved, and Sealy won the twelfth with a nice 4, and drew level, only to see his opponent assume the lead again at the next hole with 3 to 4. A nice 3 at the fifteenth put M'Lelland further ahead; and the end came at the following hole, where M'Lelland was down in 4 to 5 to win by 3 and 2. The winner was not at all comfortable on the greens, but his long game was good, and Sealy did not display his usual brilliancy in putting.

D. G. Ferrier (M.) was out in 39, and was 1 up on O. H. O'Brien at the ninth, but the latter won the next 2 holes, Ferrier drawing level at the twelfth. The thirteenth was halved, and then O'Brien ran out by winning the next four holes, his card for the second half reading—3, 4, 5, 3, 7, 4, 5, 3—34 for 8 holes. P. Sydney Jones (B.D.) was in fine form against O. H. Wines (M.), and, going out in 38, established a fair lead, which he increased until he won on the fourteenth green by 6 and 4. A good game was that between P. Ellis (B.D.) and H. G. V. Adler (M.). Going out, each player required 40, and the match was all square at the turn, but Ellis played better coming home, running out a winner at the seventeenth, when he holed a good 2, by 3 and 1. He was back in 37, and played very well, especially with his irons.

G. S. Freeman (M.) was a little too strong for J. H. Brown, and, going out in 29, was 3 up at the turn, winning by 3 and 1. R. Gordon Craig (B.D.) was not at his best, and that promising Manly colt, R. Sayers, had no difficulty in scoring a win by 5 and 3. R. Aitken (B.D.) was 1 up on L. J. Osborne at the turn, but the latter evened matters at the tenth, and after alternate wins the position was still all square at the thirteenth. The next four holes were divided, and Osborne won the closest game of the match on the eighteenth green. J. Rowley (B.D.) found A. L. Potter not in his best form, and he won easily by 6 and 4.

In the B grade match N. S. Collie (B.D.) scored a very good win over E. Scott Scott by 3 and 1, this being the first defeat the latter has experienced this season. A. Gordon; F. W. Barker, and H. L. Tange also scored for Bonnie Doon; and those who assisted Manly to victory were H. O. Clissold, H. Maxwell, R. E. Hunt, A. Robey, and A. de R. Barclay.

Country week, the annual carnival of the Suburban and Country Golf Association, will commence to-morrow, and continue until next Tuesday. It is expected that between 80 and 100 country golfers will visit Sydney for the various events, and it seems that this year all previous records will be broken. There are few city golfers who, on one occasion or another, have not taken their clubs away to one of the country towns, and met with most hospitable treatment at the hands of the local golfers. To return the compliment when the country players visit Sydney is not always an easy matter, but "country week" affords the city man just the opportunity, and he is not, as a rule, slow to grasp it. In the various competitions down for decision, the Sydney men will roll up in large numbers, and they will be drawn, so far as possible, against their country friends, and on Saturday evening there will be a general reunion at a dinner, when the visitors will be the guests of the association.

Last year the country visitors were fewer than is usually the case, mainly owing to the smallpox scare, but the growing importance of the carnival is evidenced by the increased entries this year. These have been received from practically every part of New South Wales. Glen Innes, Armidale, and Tamworth in the north, Cooma and Bombala in the Monaro, Albury, Wagga, Henty, and other Riverina clubs, Cowra, Dubbo, Wellington, Orange, and Blayney in the west, not to mention the more easily available centres of Newcastle, Maitland, Bathurst, Lithgow, Wollongong, and Goulburn, will all be represented.

In promoting annual gatherings such as this the association is doing good work for the game of golf. It is not an easy matter to bring golfers together from the four corners of the State, and engage with them in friendly rivalry and good fellowship. It is good for the players, and it is good for the game. The visitors have an opportunity of improving their game on courses which are, as a rule, superior to those in their own country towns, and of obtaining a little professional coaching; but, above all, of meeting other players, and making other friendships.

The chief event, of course, is the country championship; and it is interesting to note that, for the first time in the history of the competition, the State amateur champion is eligible, and will play. J. D. Howden will naturally start a warm favourite; but there are several other country players who may be expected to make a bold bid for victory. The districts teams premiership looks like going again to the north, which appears to have a stronger combination than either west or south. The Newcastle Club, with its large number of good players, is mainly responsible for the monopoly of the premiership by the northern district. The country championship, districts premiership, mixed foursomes, and several handicap events will be played at Manly, and other competitions will be held at Kensington on Friday, and at Concord on Tuesday.

In the semi-final of the Dobroyde Club's championship F. S. Shenstone outshone D. S. Edwards. The former holed a short mashie approach at the sixth, and became 2 up, and, proceeding, gave his opponent very few opportunities, winning by 6 up and 5 to play. He has now to meet W. C. Sturrock in the final, and it is generally expected that the latter will win.

The final of the Manly Club's championship was contested by J. B. Ferrier and D. G. Ferrier, who, strange to say, for Ferrier is not a common surname, are not related. Over the first 18 holes J. B. Ferrier played a good match game, and giving his opponent few chances, finished the round with the substantial advantage of 7 holes. D. G.'s play through the green was very fair, but he lost consistently on the greens. In the afternoon the play was mediocre on both sides. Certainly, with his big lead, J. B. was not called upon to exert himself, but he maintained his advantage, and finally ran out a winner by 8 up and 7 to play.

W. T. Smith, a steady, consistent player, won the championship of Drummoyne by defeating W. D. M'Lelland by 3 and 2, but was apparently somewhat fortunate in that three new members, formerly low markmen at Carnoustie, were not eligible to compete.

E. J. Casey won the Moore Park Club's championship by defeating W. M'Callum in the final by 6 and 4.

H. A. Forbes, a promising young player, returned a good card of 86—12=74 at Killara, and won comfortably. S. Hordern had a win at Concord with 2 up, and A. Varge was successful at Rose Bay with 1 up. N. F. Christoe is still in good form, and won the Ellesmere Cup, a scratch, 18 holes medal play competition at Kensington, with a steady round of 80, H. N. Giblin being second with 82.

BILLIARDS.

AMATEUR CHAMPIONSHIP.

The outstanding feature of last week's billiards was the appearance of the ex-Newcastle amateur, J. R. Hooper, in the New South Wales amateur championship. Ever since he defeated J. B. Belfield at Newcastle some seven or eight years ago, metropolitan followers of billiards have been anxious to see Hooper in competition. Belfield was the standard by which amateurs were judged a few years ago. He won the Australasian amateur championships in 1907 and 1908, but retired in the following year so as to give other competitors an opportunity of winning the title.

In fairness to Belfield, it should be stated that the conditions under which he was defeated by Hooper were altogether in the latter's favour. The game took place at the Newcastle Club on a table which the local man generally used. Belfield had to play in the evening at 8 o'clock, and, leaving Sydney by the Northern express at 5.10, went straight from the station to the club without dinner, after a 90 miles' train journey, and had to use a strange cue, and play on an unfamiliar table. To make matters more uncomfortable, Hooper put in a break well over the century in an early innings, and reached game before his opponent had warmed up. The Novocastrian, who is a fine sportsman, admits these disadvantages, and does not claim much credit for his victory over the then Australasian champion.

But that win, and his good showings against visiting professionals to Newcastle, such as John Roberts, H. W. Stevenson, T. Reece, T. Aiken, and others of lesser fame, built up a reputation for Hooper that made visitors expectant and Hooper a trifle nervous. However, in the second innings of the opening session of his match against Fay he made 82, which was as fine a piece of constructive gathering play as has ever been put together by an amateur in this State. It was almost professional in gentleness of touch and trueness of cueing. That bane of the amateur—control of the second object ball by means of slow drag—was executed to perfection, and the stun stroke was resorted to frequently to reduce the speed of the cue ball. Some of Hooper's winning hazard shots were excellent, one long stab to the bottom pocket being perfect. During his last hundred on the first night the debutant tired a trifle, and Fay, who, like his opponent, had been troubled by extra pace of the table—put in a few runs by means of the red loser. His cueing, however, was uncertain. Had he hit as truly as in past years, Fay might have been much closer when play ceased. As it was, the difference was only 109, which caused T. Reece, who was present, to remark: "There you are; Mr. Hooper has been at the table almost all the evening, with Mr. Fay sitting down, yet he is only 100 ahead. It proves what a deadly force the red ball is in billiards, with its three points for each stroke."

There have been fewer billiards surprises in recent years than the defeat of G. B. Shailer by H. A. Rumball in the first heat of the championship. Shailer played so well during the early stages of the first session as to suggest that he would defeat his less accomplished opponent by half the game, especially as early in the game he made a break of 102 by allround billiards, in which soft touch and ball control were features. Yet by a disregard of one of the canons of match play—to "sit down and say nothing"—he practically threw away his advantage, and started the second night's play with a lead of only 54, which might easily have been 254. In the second session the leader again ran away, reaching 902 to 698, and just as a win appeared to be a certainty, he froze and never thawed again. Meanwhile, Rumball, relishing the numbness which had overtaken his opponent, came along with sixties, forties, and thirties, until he caught him at 948. Then it was all over, even though the holder had a rather good opening, but he failed after making 10, and watched Rumball reach game—to the surprise and applause of everyone in the room.

The heat between Griffith and Bottomley also provided varying features. Neither could negotiate the tight pockets of the standard table with any degree of certainty, and promising breaks were often cut off through the white ball jagging in one of the top pockets. Bottomley led in the first session, but Griffith, who is a solid hazard striker, asserted himself early in the second session, and in the end won rather easily.

The inter-institute championship, which ended in a double victory for the Glebe Workingmen's Institute, was the medium of some excellent individual performances. The No. 1 player in these competitions is supposed to be, and usually is, the champion of the club or institute, the other players being placed and numbered according to their merits in a competition arranged for that purpose. All players of the same position and number meet each other, so it comes about that the No. 1 players are a bunch of champions. Consequently, the performance of G. Linden, who plays No. 1 for Marrickville School of Arts, in going through these competitions two years in succession without defeat is full of merit. Not only has Linden been undefeated in two years, but during the five years the competition has been running he has only been defeated on five occasions. There were several other undefeated players in the lower grades, the most notable being the winner's No. 2 player, H. Elms, who scored the possible points—2400 to 1668—a performance which marks this 20-year-old youth as a future club champion.

There is a flavour of more sincerity than usual about the play in the game now taking place between Reece and Lindrum. The former assures the public that there is nothing but their reputation at stake. Lindrum is anxious to defeat the player who won two heats in the late English championship, and Reece is just as determined that he will not. There was such a marked difference in their movements in the opening session, compared with their more leisurely methods in the first game, that those whose duty it is to attend regularly could hardly believe they were the same pair of players. The result should be pleasing to both the public and players. The former dearly love a fight to a finish, and will roll up in large numbers to see it.

OLYMPIC GAMES.

THE PARIS CONGRESS.

SUMMARY OF RESULTS.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

PARIS, July 26.

The Olympic Congress of 1914 has been completed, and its members are dispersed to various destinations, but each carries with him the same impression of the extreme hospitality of the French nation. The French people, from the President or Princes downwards, have vied with each other, seemingly, in an attempt to see who could do most for the pleasure and honour of the visitors. The programme of fetes and receptions makes one wonder how work could proceed, but the record of the work done stands as a testimony of the dual capacity of the delegates to work and play with equal ability and enthusiasm.

After the matters dealt with in the previous report, which carried us as far as Friday's proceedings, the meeting reassembled on the next day.

RIFLE SHOOTING.

On Saturday morning the congress started punctually at 9.30, and the questions relating to rifle shooting, and the report thereon of the sub-committee, were brought up for consideration and for acceptance of the sub-committee's decisions. The chief question at issue was one that had been a good deal discussed by the sub-committee. That was the difficulty over the pattern of rifle to be used. The German contention was that it would be manifestly unfair to the various competitors if those of one nation were armed with a better weapon, and that they might, therefore, win, not by superiority of their shooting, but of their weapon. They pointed out, moreover, that they had in agreement with them an international association of many nations and of long experience. On the other hand, an English delegate pointed out that the English Association did not belong to that international association, and had behind it 35 years of experience, and strongly objected to the German proposal.

Quite apart from that argument, it appears to the writer that it is manifestly more unequal to ask competitors to go to a competition, and there, in a comparatively short time, learn to use and become absolutely familiar with the pull and other intricacies of a rifle of entirely different pattern from that to which they are accustomed. It is essential that a competitor, to be at his best, should identify himself with the weapon he is using, up to the point of almost forgetting that he is using a weapon at all. But the argument was not prolonged, and a call for a vote was soon made. It appeared to many to be against the German suggestion, but to their surprise it was announced the other way, and the chairman said that the count made it 80 to 40. Those figures were palpably erroneous. There was nothing like that discrepancy.

On the proposal of the United States of America, seconded by Great Britain, the decision of the sub-committee was accepted, save on two points. The point mentioned was one of those excepted, and Germany and France supported the use by all of the rifle of the country in which the games are being held, but America and Great Britain opposed. Germany also wanted shorter distances, not to exceed 400 metres, because they contended rifles will not "group" the shots over that distance.

ATHLETICS.

The athletic programme overlaps, and includes jumping events. On an earlier vote the proposal by Germany that the gymnastic programme should include certain jumping events was negatived, but afterwards the Germans pointed out the difficulties of their position in Germany if this decision were adhered to. They have to combine two greatly hostile elements, and the athletic bodies are very strong, and have arranged their programme. In view of these disclosures, a reconsideration of the matter was suggested, and at a special session on Sunday morning Mr. Arnold, of England, pointed out succinctly the German difficulties, and he suggested that as a concession their wishes be agreed to. The Rev. De Courcy Laffan then in a most able and courteous speech in three languages, said that in view of those difficulties, and of the most friendly spirit the Germans had displayed, he, on behalf of England, withdrew all opposition. He was loudly cheered on conclusion.

Mr. Edstrom, of Sweden, also voiced the opinion of the International Amateur Athletic Association, and waived all objections to the overlapping between the German athletic programme and that of the Field and Track Games with respect to the jumping events.

There is no doubt that in this exhibition of a friendly spirit of give and take the Congress was acting in the best spirit of the Olympic principles, and that such incidents do much for the better mutual understanding of the nations. But Mr. Edstrom clearly pointed out that this concession must not apply to future Games other than the next at Berlin.

Colonel Thompson, of America, said he was glad to recognise this fine spirit, and to fall in with it, and to say that America realised the German difficulty. "As they had come," he said, "in a brotherly spirit, and laid their difficulties openly before us, we answer them as brothers, and agree to waive the point." It was the most pleasing incident of the congress.

The president of the German Association, Prince Othon de Windisch Graetz, from the dais alongside the president of the Congress, Baron Pierre de Conberlin, thanked the members of the Congress, and assured them that in waiving the point they had done a great deal for the German people and sportsmanship.

HOCKEY.

This was proposed as an addition to the Games by England. Mr. Edstrom, as spokesman for the International Amateur Athletic Federation, and in accordance with his previous expressions, opposed this, because he had said that only those games should be included which had previously been contested at Olympics. Hockey was beaten in the voting. There was a double count of votes, and here again the figures and the method of counting were crude.

WINTER SPORTS.

The inclusion of these was proposed by a Norwegian delegate, but it was pointed out by opponents that skiing and other winter sports, save skating, involved too many difficulties in Berlin. Mr. Merrick, of Canada, said that Canada was prepared to send two teams, but, recognising the difficulties other nations would have, it would not press to support Norway. But he asked Germany to invite teams for a display of hockey on the ice, and Canada would compete.

As a further exhibition of friendly and fraternal spirit, the request of Norway was acceded to, but competitions will be held at a suitable season in Norway or another northern country; however, no points will be counted save for the skating in Berlin. Norway was quite satisfied and pleased. Women were admitted to skating.

GOLF.

After a close vote, golf was admitted on the suggestion of Great Britain, but there was not much discussion. Ladies were admitted to golf. Mr. Edstrom formally opposed on behalf of the International Amateur Athletic Association.

From the above notes it will be seen that there is a great tendency by the European delegates to confine the games to athletics and military exercise, pure and simple, and to exclude games. Largely the divisions were Continental nations against the English-speaking nations, but this was not by reason of any unfair coalition on either side. It was simply the natural result of a radically different outlook on the Olympic principle, and on field games and athletic sports by the two divisions. America combined with France all through in an opposition to the exclusion of women, but all the other nations, save Japan, were on the other side. The tone of the discussions was of the highest class. The ability of all was equally marked. It would have been better had there been more frequent translation of the important speeches, but no points were missed through this and much delay would have resulted.

NUMBER OF COMPETITORS.

On Monday England, France, and Australasia were strongly in favour of reduction in the number of competitors from each country in the various athletic events, mainly because the allowance of a large number bore hardly for expense and available men in countries of relatively small population, and without ample funds. Ultimately, a vote was carried for reduction, but afterwards it was decided that the number of entries in each class of competition and the number of starters should be determined in those sports in which an international association existed by that association; otherwise by the Olympic Committee. The American delegates naturally were very strongly in favour of a larger number of competitors, and Sweden supported them.

ARCHERY AND RUGBY FOOTBALL.

On Tuesday it was decided to have, as optional events, archery and Rugby football; but no points are to be scored. These are to be merely exhibitions.

AUSTRALIAN MOVEMENT.

DEVELOPMENT OF ATHLETES.

ORGANISATION SCHEME SUGGESTED.

Certain efforts have been made in Sydney to secure the necessary funds for the representation of Australia at the Olympic Games, and these have met with excellent results. Victoria and Queensland will also shortly be gathering money for the same object. As yet, however, the controlling officials of sport have not made any attempt towards that organisation which is necessary to ensure that Australasia will go to Berlin in 1916 properly prepared for the strenuous contests, and with the full strength of the Commonwealth and Dominion available. That all the athletes do not reside in the capital cities of the various States will be readily admitted, and the real work of organisation begins when the latent talent is to be discovered. The success of the United States in recent olympic games has been to a large extent due to its splendid search for world-beaters throughout the length and breadth of its territory. There was no consideration of colour or class when the country had to face the other nations, and more than one olympic champion has come from places far removed from the main centres in which the A.A.U. of the United States operates. Mr. Hay Wilson furnishes a scheme by which he considers the athletic prowess of Australasia may be similarly placed at its best by a systematic search and a series of contests. Mr. Wilson's scheme is as follows:—

OBJECT.

A wide and thorough search for best talent to ensure proper and complete representation of Australasia at Berlin; developing material when found; organisation; administration; finance.

FIELD.

To arrive at "complete and proper representation," the whole of athletic Australasia must be systematically searched for promising material. When found, this material will require further developing by coaching, practise, and correct training methods.

SEARCH SYSTEMATISED.

The field (Australasia) to be divided into:—Olympic Units; Sub-centres; Chief-centres; Olympic-centre.

"Chief-centres" to be the capital cities, wherein the State olympic championship games will be decided during latter months.

"Sub-centres" to be selected towns (such as Armidale, Bathurst, Hay, Lismore, Cootamundra), wherein district olympic championship games will be decided.

"Olympic units" to be towns with surrounding district, wherein local championship Olympic games will be decided.

"Olympic centre" to be the city wherein the "Grand final Australian Olympic team championships" will be decided.

ORGANISATION.

At each of the "Olympic units" an Olympic unit committee be formed to promote contests as per Olympic programme of events. Said contests to be controlled under the rules and regulations of the Australasian Olympic executive committee. Successful and promising contestants to be encouraged to train and practise under the care and guidance of "Olympic unit committees." Pamphlets (issued by executive committee) giving the best known methods on "How to Train" for the various branches of athletics, to be supplied the Olympic unit committees for distribution to candidates and local enthusiasts volunteering training services.

At each "sub-centre" an "Olympic sub-centre committee" to be formed to carry out within their town and district the same work as that entrusted to "Olympic unit committees," and further, to assist the executive committee to promote and conduct the "district Olympic championships," at which all "Olympic unit" selected candidates will compete. Successful and promising performers at these sub-centre district championships to be noted, and their respective Olympic unit committees be instructed to attend to the training and improving of this material in preparation for the chief-centre State Olympic championships.

At each "chief centre" the committees formed under the general scheme will carry out, within their city and district, the same work as that of the "Olympic units" and "sub-centre" committees, and will further promote the "State Olympic championships," at which all "sub-centre" district championship selections will compete.

Successful and promising performers at these chief-centre State championships to be placed under expert coaches and trainers for preparation for the Olympic centre grand final Australasian team championships.

ADMINISTRATION.

The scheme to be published throughout by the press of Australasia, calling upon local Mayors, public officials, and sporting enthusiasts to form "Olympic unit committees," and to apply to chief-centre committees for training pamphlets, programme of Olympic events, rules, regulations, etc.

On completion of the registration of "Olympic unit committees," sub-centres to be determined by convenient radius. The "Olympic units" within these areas to form districts. These districts to be named after the towns decided on as sub-centres. Athletic authorities to be appointed by "chief-centre executive committees" to attend sub-centre championship meetings, to note performances, and assist sub-centre committees in the selection of promising performers, over and above winners, as candidates for chief-centre championships.

The work of the "chief-centres" and the "Olympic centre" becomes automatic.

FINANCE.

As the movement is a national one, the railway authorities to be asked to provide free passes for authorised competitors to "sub-centres" and "chief-centres."

The work of "Olympic unit committees" and "sub-centre committees" should easily prove self-supporting.

MEETING OF OLYMPIC FUND COMMITTEE.

At the last meeting of the Olympic fund committee a sub-committee, consisting of Messrs. E. S. Marks, J. C. Davis, and W. W. Hill, was appointed to investigate and report on the question of finding and developing athletes for the next games, to be held in Berlin in 1916. It is really a matter which the various athletic bodies and the Sporting Federation should take in hand at once, and there is no doubt that the subject will receive the much-needed stimulus when the committee frames its report. Two years hence the games will be in full swing, so that there is no time to lose, even with the limited population of Australasia.

SWIMMING.

Particulars are to hand of the Cambridge v Oxford University swimming meeting, in which J. Resleure—the one-legged ex-Bondi swimmer—established inter-Varsity records over both 100yds and the quarter-mile distances. He won the "hundred" in 61 3-5s, which lowered the previous best by C. C. Stimson in 1910 of 62s. In the "quarter" he easily defeated the holder of the title, J. O. Iles, by 50yds, in 5m 52 2-5s, and lowering the previous record of 6m 30s, which was established in 1912 by C. W. Trengenza. Resleure covered the first 100yds in 66 3-5s, 200 in 2m 26 2-5s, 300 in 3m 50s, and 400 in 5m 13 3-5s. As mentioned in this column on the previous occasion, he may provide a very useful man for the 1916 Olympic Games team.

AMERICA CUP.

SOME NOTED CONTESTS.

America has held the famous America Cup—the greatest of all international yachting trophies, for 63 years—since the first day it was competed for, in fact.

British yachting enthusiasts have spent fortunes in their endeavours to recover the coveted cup for the old world, but all attempts have failed. On September 10 Sir Thomas Lipton will make his fourth effort to lift the trophy with Shamrock IV, which sailed for America last week.

It has frequently been stated by yachtsmen the world over that the America Cup would have long since been in possession of the English but for the provision in the rules governing the contests, which stipulates that the challenging yacht must sail to the scene of the contests on her own bottom. The old America yacht, America, which first won the cup, sailed across to England, and the Americans have ever since rigidly imposed this penalty upon the challengers. It can be easily understood, therefore, that while the defending yachts might be so lightly constructed as to just about stand the strain of the trials and actual contests, the challengers have to be built strongly enough to weather the hardest blows and heaviest seas that prevail in the Atlantic, and are thereby greatly handicapped.

Yachting has generally been described as "The sport of kings," that is, as it is carried on in England, the Continent, and America, and that it is so in the America Cup races may be gauged from the costly enterprise of latter-day yachtsmen to lift the cup. Sir Thomas Lipton's previous challenger, Shamrock III, and his attempts to regain the trophy with her, are said to have cost him approximately £70,000. The yacht herself was insured for £20,000, and it cost £12,000, for a tug to especially assist in towing the yacht across to New York, where the races are held. Each of his previous attempts with Shamrock I, and Shamrock II, is said to have cost Sir Thomas upwards of £50,000, and it is also stated that by the time the forthcoming contests are concluded he will have spent a further £80,000, or a quarter of a million of money altogether. It is estimated that it cost the Americans only about £4750 to race the America in England, and that this amount included the expenses of her voyage across the Atlantic. Yet Sir Thomas Lipton today is spending about sixteen times that amount to try and recover the cup. Of course, the present-day yachts competing for the trophy are vastly different from, and immeasurably more expensive than, those of 60 years ago. The design has been revolutionised, the conditions completely altered, and the events are of much more importance.

Quite an unpretentious-looking trophy is the now historical America Cup, which has reposed snugly in the New York Yacht Club's house for so many years. Its original value was but £100. It was never thought when it was first presented that it would some day create universal interest by reason of the international nature of the contests which have already taken place. In 1851 the regatta of the Royal Yacht Squadron at Cowes, England, was, and is to the present day, the fashionable yachting event of the year. In that year the club, with a view to extra attraction, offered a cup as a prize to be sailed for by yachts of all nations without regard to difference in tonnage, etc. The America was previously built and sent across to try her speed against the best of the British sailers, and incidentally to demonstrate to the world their superiority in that particular branch of naval architecture. She was a schooner-rigged yacht of 170 tons. After much controversy regarding a private match with any yacht afloat in the United Kingdom, the America was entered for the Royal Yacht Squadron's race on August 22, and defeated eight cutters and seven schooners, some of which were too small and the others too old to have much chance against the stranger. The prize then won by the America was some time afterwards presented by her owners to the New York Yacht Club, with the idea of "making it perpetually a challenge cup for friendly competition between foreign countries," and that prize is what has ever since been known as the "America Cup." Early in the history of the races for the trophy, and when the English yachts Cambria and Livonia had failed to win it back, the Canadians tried with the yachts Countess of Dufferin and Atalanta, but were beaten, and have not challenged since. But a short epitome of the various attempts to lift the Cup make interesting reading.

In 1870, the first English challenger, Cambria, appeared in American waters. She was a good representative, but apparently not equal to the best American yachts; for in a fleet of 24 starters, she finished eighth—the old America beating her by 13 minutes. The race was won by Magic. Cambria's owner did not lose heart, but had a new and larger schooner built, which he named Livonia, and returned with her to America in the following year. Five races were sailed—three of them against the Columbia, a centre-board yacht, and two against the Sappho, a schooner—but she won only one of the five races.

The third challenger was the Countess of Dufferin, a centreboard schooner, which came from Canada in 1876. Two races were sailed, the centreboard schooner Madeline being the yacht chosen to defend the Cup. The Countess was beaten on both occasions. The Canadians again challenged, and sent the centreboard schooner Atalanta to try conclusions in 1881. She was badly beaten by the defender, Mischief.

In 1885 a challenger from England crossed the Atlantic to try what she could do. The Genesta, as she was called, was, unlike other challengers, a deep, narrow cutter, whilst the defender, Puritan, was a broad, shallow centreboard sloop. Genesta was defeated in the only two races sailed, and the Cup remained in America. The following year, 1886, another English yacht, the Galatea, was twice easily defeated by the Cup defender Mayflower. Next came the contest in 1887 between the Scotch cutter Thistle and the Volunteer, but like her predecessors, Thistle was beaten twice by the American boat.

Six years passed before the next attempt was made. In 1893 Valkyrie II, owned by Lord Dunraven, met the Vigilant, but was defeated three times in succession. However, Lord Dunraven determined to try again, so he returned to America in 1895 with a new yacht, the Valkyrie III. She was met by Defender, and this time the centreboard was discarded in the American boat, which was a deep-keel cutter, like her English rival. In the first race Defender won by over eight minutes. Valkyrie secured the second race by the narrow margin of twenty seconds, but was disqualified for a foul just before the start. In this race the yachts, especially Valkyrie, had been blanketed beyond all precedent by the excursion steamers following the race, and Lord Dunraven therefore decided to try no more unless a clear course could be assured. The Americans would guarantee nothing, so Valkyrie, after crossing the line in the third race under reduced sail, retired, and this event resulted in a sail-over for Defender. Lord Dunraven, a true yachting sport, was disgusted with the treatment meted out to him by the Americans, and did not make further efforts to regain the trophy.

Four years later interest was aroused once more by another contest for the cup. The Shamrock, owned by Sir Thomas Lipton, which left England in 1899, being the challenger. The fashioning of the defender was left to the famous American designer Herreshoff. Columbia was the result, and a marvellous flyer she proved. After many postponements, owing to want of wind and prevalence of fogs, the first race was sailed, but Shamrock was beaten by fully 10 minutes. In the second race the challenger broke her topmast, and had to retire, Columbia finishing alone. In the third race Columbia again asserted her superiority, winning by five minutes. So once more the result was as it had always been. But Sir Thomas Lipton, like Lord Dunraven, decided to try again, and had Shamrock II. designed and built by the best artisans in England. On this occasion two defenders were built by the Americans, Constitution and Independence, the better one of them to be chosen to meet the British yacht. Independence proved too slow, and in the trials between Constitution and the old Columbia, the old boat showed such a superior turn of speed that after much consideration it was decided to pit her against Shamrock II. As it afterwards transpired, the America Cup would surely have been captured by Shamrock II. had Constitution been chosen.

When the two yachts met off Sandy Hook in the first race an eight-knot breeze was blowing, and within half an hour of starting Shamrock II. was a quarter of a mile ahead. Unfortunately, the wind dropped, and the race had to be abandoned. Five days later, in a fair breeze, the re-sail took place, Columbia winning by only 25 seconds. Neither boat was favourite for the race, and the winner was often astern of the English yacht. In the second test a light and fluky breeze prevailed, but notwithstanding that Shamrock was supposed to like a fresh wind, she was three-quarters of a mile ahead when the light breeze died away to a calm. The time limit of 5½ hours for the race elapsed, and a re-sail was necessary. When the yachts met the next day in a 12-knot breeze, the American yacht beat the Shamrock by 35 seconds. It was an exciting and close race, the yachts never being more than a cable's length apart.

Then came the third and what proved to be the final test of the five. First one and then the other went ahead, until the spectators went wild with enthusiasm. Shamrock was ahead when the fresh breeze began to fail, and Columbia stole up and passed her just before rounding the mark for the run to the finish. Every stitch of canvas was sent aloft on the Shamrock in an attempt to smother Columbia, which was only a couple of lengths ahead, but it was too late. A friendly puff sent Shamrock bowling along right on top of Columbia, but the winning line was at hand, and amid a pandemonium of cheers and syrens, the American yacht finished only two seconds (six feet) ahead of Shamrock; Columbia had thus won the first three of the five contests, and no more races were necessary.

Only a few days after his defeat, Sir Thomas Lipton, who had already spent over £50,000 on each of the previous contests, challenged the Americans for another race. The greatest designers and builders in Great Britain turned out Shamrock III. She represented all that human skill and riches could do. The costliest of metals and materials were used in her construction, and only the most skilled labour available put a hand to the new yacht. English yachtsmen thought that she surely would prove too fast for whatever the Americans turned out, for she gave indications of being the speediest vessel that had ever been built for the America Cup races. Shamrock III. arrived at New York safely, and commenced the contests against the American yacht Reliance in August, 1913. The Americans had great faith in their craft, as Herreshoff, their great designer, had succeeded in creating something better than the English yachts every time. He was always known, in fact, as "the man who retains the cup for America." Owing to the measurements of Reliance being greater than those of Shamrock III., she was called upon to allow the latter a start of 117 seconds. In the first race Reliance was a mile ahead when the wind dropped, and the yachts could not finish. Reliance proved herself the faster boat in the light weather. The re-sail was won by Reliance by 7 minutes 2 seconds, the American showing a better turn of speed both in the windward work and running before the wind.

The second race was also won by Reliance in a 7-knot breeze. The defender went ahead from the start, but Shamrock came very fast towards the finish, although she could not overhaul her rival. The first attempt to sail the third race had to be abandoned, owing to the 6-knot wind falling away, Reliance being 8 minutes ahead at the time. She continued on the course, and only failed to reach the finish by 8½ minutes over the time limit. The re-sail again had to be abandoned, but Reliance was once more in the lead, with the English yacht coming up very fast. The yachts again met on two occasions, but owing to the prevailing light airs, they did not cover much of the course, and Shamrock's crew began to weary of their work because of the many delays. At last, however, there came a 9-knot breeze, and the American yacht cleared out from her rival, and finished three miles ahead of her in a dense fog. Reliance had therefore won the only three tests fully completed, and America still owned the Cup.

Sir Thomas Lipton promised he would challenge again some day if no one else would try and bring back the trophy, and after 11 years Shamrock IV. has been built, and will make a big bid to achieve success. The new vessel has been fully described in our columns, and whilst Shamrock IV. was fighting her way across the Atlantic to the scene of the contests, the yachts built by the Americans, and from which the defender will be chosen, were holding their numerous test races.

When Mr. Walter Marks (Commodore of the Prince Alfred Yacht Club, Sydney) was in London some time ago, he made several trips in Shamrock III., and Sir Thomas Lipton promised him that he would be chosen as a member of the crew of Shamrock IV. Mr. Marks went to England recently to join the English yacht, and would have been the only Australian to have sailed in one of the great challengers had he been appointed, but the professional yachtsmen, who have always hitherto handled the big English yachts in these contests, objected to an amateur, even of Mr. Mark's ability, being aboard, and so the P.A.Y.C. commodore has had to stand down. He is, however, to view the races from Sir Thomas Lipton's fine steam yacht Erin, which left for America in company with Shamrock IV.

LACROSSE.

THE SEMI-FINALS.

Next Saturday's matches will conclude the second round of the senior competition, and for three weeks the majority of the players will vacate the field, when the semi-finals, final, and interstate games will be played. Irrespective of Saturday's contests, Sydney and Petersham are eligible for the semi-finals. Whether Balmain, Mosman, or Eastern Suburbs will secure the other places hinges on the result of the Eastern Suburbs-Mosman match; and even then, the goal percentages gained will have to be taken into consideration.

The grounds last Saturday were in a very bad state, and, with few exceptions, the contests were not of a high standard. The principal game was between Petersham and Sydney on the reclaimed ground at St. Luke's Park, Concord. From beginning to end the Petersham men outplayed their opponents, showing clean stickwork and good tactics, and it is difficult to account for Sydney's poor display. The Brothers Yuille, Shepherd, Hitchcock, and Hopkins, who have been playing consistently, were quite out of form. There was no weak link in the Petersham team.

The Mosman-Balmain game, on the Domain, was very even till the final quarter. It was then that the latter team showed superiority, and much of their success was due to F. Loutit's play. Balmain's win is all the more meritorious when it is considered that two of their strongest players, Langker and Fitzhardinge, were absentees. University put up a good showing against the premiers at the Waverley Oval. Their great fault in attack was the use of the long, slow pass. Eastern Suburbs are losing their goalkeeper, C. Thomas, who is going to Tasmania for a month. Thomas has proved the backbone of the team, and his absence from the club during the semi-finals and later matches will be severely felt. Thomas has been selected as the goalkeeper of the team to visit New Zealand, and will make the trip from Tasmania. St. George registered their biggest score by defeating Manly at Kogarah by 15-1. Manly team has been very unfortunate this season, half a dozen of the leading players having been severely injured.

The new arrangement of playing the B grade in two sections is working exceedingly well. On performances it looks as though the senior premiership lies between Hurstville and Petersham Federals. Both are smart teams. Y.M.C.A. appear to be the best in the junior section, and the team has shown improvement with each match. Arrangements are complete for the Petersham Federals visit to Tasmania. The team will leave for Launceston on August 26th proximo, and will play there on August 29 and 31, and later in the week at Hobart. The selection of the team has not yet been made, nor the manager appointed. By undertaking this trip the Federals will forego their chance of winning the B grade premiership, in which they have been leading.

FOOTBALL.

THE RUGBY UNION GAME.

NEW ZEALANDERS' FIFTH WIN.

COMPETITIONS RESUMED.

The New Zealanders gained their fifth consecutive win by defeating Queensland at Brisbane on Saturday last. So far the side is well on its way to better the record of the famous 1903 team, which was the last representative Dominion side to go through Australia without a check. In the first five games of this tour the All Blacks have scored 152 points to 24, and the 1903 team scored 112 points to 10. Thus, whilst the attack has been bettered, the defence is not so good. To-day the return match against Queensland will be played, and on Saturday the second test against Australia will take place in the Northern capital. Messrs. Dwyer, Carr, Wogan, Tasker, Wood, George, Walsh, and Baker will leave to-night to play for Australia. Watson, who was also selected, cannot make the trip.

Saturday's games in the Metropolitan Union senior competition completed the first round, and as a result, Glebe, South Sydney, Eastern Suburbs, and University have gained places in the "A" Division, with the right to contest the premiership. The remaining seven teams comprise the "B" Division. It is one of the disadvantages of the present system that an improving side often makes its effort too late in the season, and fails to gain a place in the semi-finals, whereas its form immediately preceding the division of the clubs is good enough to defeat many of the more fortunate clubs. This has happened in succeeding years to Eastern Suburbs, Glebe, and South Sydney; while this season Western Suburbs just failed to win a place by a single point. To a large extent the fault lies with the team, and its early organisation. Thus the lesson is learned that a full season of good play is required before the rewards are obtainable. A most notable absentee from the four clubs is that of Newtown, whose first-grade team gained a place in the "A" Division every year since 1907. It is the only combination that has such a record, and in this respect betters the fine performance registered by Glebe. Newtown occupy a low position in the table, and, like every club, is experiencing its lean period.

The positions of the teams leave the premiership very open. University, who will probably affect the prospects of some of the other three teams, have no chance of winning the honours. The favourites are Glebe, who have maintained very consistent allround form. However, their opponents are at the top of their game, and the second round should be full of interest. Western Suburbs have a handy lead of 2 points in the "B" Division, and appear likely to gain the honours in this section.

The most stirring game on Saturday was that provided by Eastern Suburbs and University at University Oval. Notwithstanding that the ground was muddy and the ball heavy and greasy, both teams played a passing game, and the manner in which the ball was handled in the first half was remarkable. The openings made by Adamson for Eastern Suburbs, and the strong running of Allen in 'Varsity's rearguard helped their sides greatly in attack. The form of University in this match was the best shown by the side for a considerable time, and they were only beaten by reason of the strength of the premiers' forwards, who lasted longer. In the second spell the ball was too greasy to handle accurately; the turf was also worse, players often failing in endeavouring to turn quickly. The Easterners sized the situation up much better than University, the big rugged forwards keeping the ball at their toes until well within striking distance. Then the clever Adamson would make the openings, with the result that Eastern Suburbs scored five tries to three by their opponents. It was brilliant football, in which both sides had a chance right up to the final whistle.

The prospective premiers had an easy win over Balmain at Rushcutter Bay. The losers suffered considerably on account of injuries in previous games, but Glebe were at their best. The Red forwards and backs quite outplayed their opponents. Wood and Wogan easily outwitted the Balmain pair at half-back, and provided their three-quarters with many opportunities. The losers were on the defence during almost the whole game, but played pluckily. The Glebe forwards have developed into a most capable combination, and, strengthened by the reappearance of Walters, they will take some mastering. They were always on the ball, and the manner in which they back up and support their three-quarters makes the latter a formidable division. In attack Balmain did not show any combination, but their defence was very good, considering the number of attacks they were called upon to stop.

South Sydney found Manly a tough proposition at Manly. The condition of the ground favoured the local side, and they had the visitors' measure during the greater part of the game. Characteristic bursts by South Sydney, however, gave them a fair margin at the finish. The ground and ball were so greasy that anything but dribbling was out of the question, and in the first spell the Villagers proved just as adept at this style of play as South Sydney, and at the interval only the goal points separated the teams, as each scored two tries. A fine struggle in the second half kept matters very even, until nearing the close, when South Sydney put in the finish which has gained them victory on numerous occasions.

Western Suburbs placed themselves in a splendid position in regard to the "B" Division competition by defeating St. George at Hurstville. The Western forwards were much quicker and more adept at the wet-weather game than their opponents, while the backs were cleverer. The visitors ran up a good score before St. George altered their game, but towards the finish a rally gave two tries to the local men. For Western Suburbs the dashing play of Arnold, Leddy, and Prentice was a factor in the side's success. The ground was slippery, but, despite this, the Prentice brothers worked some good back moves, and sound defence frustrated the rushes of St. George. These rushes lacked finish, and hard kicking at the wrong time often gave the Westerners their chance, where otherwise the attack would have been dangerous.

The Sports Ground was in excellent shape for the North Sydney-Randwick contest; although rain fell during the first half. A fine try by Mayo put the Shoremen in the lead, and Randwick were kept out until right on time, when Marriott scored a try as the result of Cody's effort. However, the try was unconverted, and North Sydney won. The game, which was very evenly contested, was confined to the forwards, who played a loose, disjointed game.

The magnificent showing by the New South Wales and Australian forwards against New Zealand clearly demonstrates the benefit of coaching. A very unpolished bunch of players were in a few weeks turned out well able to combat what is reputedly the greatest forward side in the world. In the first test they actually outclassed the champions, and only a month before they had been beaten by the Queenslanders. The results speak eloquently for coaching, and it is here suggested that each of the clubs adopt similar methods. The Western Suburbs, St. George, and North Sydney forwards could be made very effective if properly handled. The haphazard Saturday afternoon's football must give way to more scientific methods. Some of the forwards who were selected in the early interstate games on their open play were quite unfamiliar with the work in the scrum and around it. Certain phases of line-out play were also unknown to them. This ignorance could be overcome by adopting a system of coaching. If each club secured the honorary services, that will be readily given, of experienced men, the effect would be most beneficial to the game. The defect in our club games is that there is too much individual work. This has to be remedied, and there is nothing more conducive to team work than good, sound coaching.

RUGBY LEAGUE GAME.

NEWTOWN'S SENSATIONAL WIN.

SOUTH SYDNEY STILL LEADING.

The results of Saturday's competition games leave the premiership tangle a little less complicated than it was a week earlier, as the downfall of Eastern Suburbs places that team, for the first time in four successive years, practically outside championship possibilities, whilst their conquerors, Newtown, now take up a position whence they can challenge the claims of the leaders, South Sydney. These clubs have yet to meet, and, provided they keep their records untarnished in the remaining series of games, it looks as if the result of their meeting will practically decide the premiership.

EASTERN SUBURBS BEATEN.

It would be difficult to recall a keener or more exciting match than that provided by Newtown and Eastern Suburbs at the Sydney Cricket Ground on Saturday, wherein the Blues triumphed. The game pulsated with incidents from the moment of Bolt's kick-off until the sounding of Referee Hedley's "no side" whistle a few moments after Russell had kicked the wonderful goal which gave Newtown the victory. Newtown, playing with the wind—though the toss of the coin went against them—were much the more aggressive team during the first half. Their forwards were slightly superior in gaining possession from the scrummages, and they played with tremendous zeal in the open. The backs had numerous chances, but at times their work was a little wild. However, the Eastern defence did not waver throughout a trying 40 minutes, though on one occasion a clever cut-in by Bain nearly resulted in Haddock scoring. As a matter of fact, P. A. M'Cue's pass to the Newtown "hooker" was not knocked-on, as ruled by the referee, as the ball shot over the line from a rebound from the Newtown man's knee.

The play, excepting Halloway's clever work, which led to Messenger's try in the first half, was not marked by much cohesive excellence. On one occasion Eastern Suburbs were distinctly unlucky not to have registered points, as Cubitt, in hare-like fashion, broke away well attended, but nearing Beed he slipped, and his supports had to content themselves with rushing the ball over Newtown's line, where it was forced. However, Newtown missed many excellent chances of scoring during this spell. Although the forwards were gaining possession from the scrummages, Farnsworth, instead of utilising the short punt, which, by the way, was judiciously used by Cruise on more than one occasion, showed a tendency to "bullock" his way through the breaking packs. In one or two instances Farnsworth gained ground by these tactics, but he overdid the manoeuvre. Cruise, Bain, and Collins all made good use of the wind and displayed admirable wet-weather aptitude in finding the line, but Russell and Bolt were not nearly as effective in their efforts to gain ground with the greasy ball. Far more scoring than the dropped goal (a neat effort) kicked by Beed, and the penalty kicked by Cruise should have been done by Newtown in this half.

In the second half the Easterners took a firmer grip of the game, and made several gallant efforts to break through. Their backs had a more liberal supply of the ball, and their forwards backed up and tackled with effect. Still Newtown kept them out. Messenger's goal midway through this spell was equalised by Russell in dramatic style in the closing moments of the game. This half was productive of some of the most vigorous and effective tackling that has yet been shown in the thirteen aside game. Newtown won by six points to five, and few will deny them their victory.

NORTH SYDNEY UNLUCKY.

Whatever good luck was in evidence at Wentworth Park generally went to Glebe, who were fortunate to finish four clear points ahead of North Sydney. The match was brimful of incidents; the spectators appreciated the vigorous forward tactics of both teams and the occasional clever manipulation of the ball under most unfavourable conditions by the North Sydney backs. The Glebe forwards were the cleverer scrummagers, but this notwithstanding, the Northerners were repeatedly seen in smart handling. Their only weakness—a fatal one—was shown when within striking distance of the line. Numerous chances were provided for notching points, especially in the first half, and again towards the close of the game, but over anxiousness and want of finish were responsible for the side's undoing. On the other hand, Glebe made the most of their opportunities, and Frank Burge's try demonstrated the value of opportunism. On this occasion Glebe had just passed through a trying time of defensive work, when play suddenly slipped to Taplin, the North Sydney full-back, who fumbled, and, like a flash, the big Glebe forward swooped down on the ball, and crossed the line before his opponents realised what was happening. A. B. Burge converted this try besides kicking the two penalties in the first half. Wheatley scored North Sydney's try, and C. Sherritt kicked a goal from a penalty in the first spell. The outstanding features of the match were the dribbling and clever loose play of the Northern forwards, and the remarkable defence of the Glebe back division. In fact, the real secret of Glebe's success was their sound defensive tactics. They fairly tired out their smart opponents, and then, as in the case of Burge's try, were equal to turning defence into attack.

BALMAIN'S DASH.

There is always keen interest taken in the meeting of Balmain and Annandale, although neither team has any chance in the ultimate doings of the premiership. Balmain had an especial incentive to win, as their previous meeting with Annandale resulted in a draw, and since then they have defeated teams who, in turn, easily lowered the colours of Annandale. Thus Balmain infused such dash and earnestness into their work that success was bound to follow. In the first half the excitement was too tense for the players on both sides to do themselves justice, and what brilliance was shown was of an individual rather than a collective character. The Balmain forwards were masters in the scrum, and this was no small factor in their success. Although defeated, Annandale made a great fight of it, and their tackling and spoiling tactics effectively thwarted many fierce attacks.

W. Kelly's exhibition was equal to the best that he has yet given in Sydney. He scored two tries, and was strongly in evidence throughout the game. However, the Balmain backs should have done better, as their forwards gave them a surfeit of the ball, and Johnson's passes were generally quick and well timed. Even allowing for the alertness of the Annandale backs, Balmain's many breakdowns when on the move were largely the result of crowding by Green, Kelly, and Robinson. Every one of the Balmain forwards played well. The cleverest backs for Annandale were Brassill, Norman, Wheatley, and Lindsay. The whole side did well in defence.

WESTERN SUBURBS OUTCLASSED.

South Sydney took advantage of their second meeting with Western Suburbs to help themselves to a big margin of points. A feature of the afternoon was the brilliant work of Horder, who scored three tries. However, the speedy southerner was well supported by Butler, M'Cabe, Thompson, and Reynolds. McIlmurray and Collier played a gallant game behind a shattered side. Their defence was fearless. The winners were never seriously tested, and it was not till right on the call of time that their opponents crossed their line and registered their first and only score of the match.

THE AUSTRALIAN GAME.

SOUTH SYDNEY MINOR PREMIERS.

The first-round of League premiership games was virtually concluded on Saturday, with the result that South Sydney hold the challenge right in the event of being defeated in the semi-final. Sydney occupy second place, and Paddington third. These positions cannot be affected by the result of the re-play match between Sydney and Paddington, which has been fixed for Saturday next. Newtown and Central Western have tied for fourth place, and will play off. Owing to the unalterable positions of the clubs, it is not necessary that the Paddington-Sydney re-play match should be proceeded with. One thinks that a trial game between the eighteen players selected to represent the State in the opening game of the carnival and another eighteen comprising the whole of the reserve players for the carnival games would prove of greater interest and practical benefit.

Despite the adverse conditions—a sodden, slippery ground, and drizzling rain—the contest between Paddington and Central Western at Hampden Oval provided a stirring exhibition. Up to half-time there was little to choose between the sides. At that stage Paddington led by 47 points to 44, the slight lead being due to their greater accuracy in goal-kicking. On general play the honours were with Central Western. During the third quarter Paddington ran away from their opponents and increased their total to 10-12. The final quarter was evenly contested, but again Paddington claimed the margin of points by adding 1-2 to 0-4, thus bringing their total to 11-14, as against Central Western's, 6-12. There were some exceedingly bright periods throughout the game, and both sides shone in systematic attack and defence. However, in skirmishing for position, Paddington were more deliberate in their movements, and to this fact much of their success can be attributed. Central Western's attack was of the dashing order, with Ratcliffe exercising to the full his "penchant" for running shots at goal. Baird gave a fine exhibition for the winners, while Parr, Cooper, M'Cann, Abotomey, Jackson, Beaver, and Leplastrier were also prominent. For Central Western, Webb gave a splendid display, his high marking and clever handling of the wet ball being excellent. Ratcliffe, Cannon, M'Farlane, and O'Brien also rendered great service.

Contrary to expectations, the meeting of Newtown and North Sydney at Erskineville Oval resulted in a fast, vigorous and interesting contest. The present nature of the ground at Erskineville Oval makes it one of the worst possible under wet weather conditions. However, the teams swung into the fray with vigour, and the dull moments were few. After Newtown had opened up well, North Sydney responded gallantly. Newtown led by 21 points to 8 at the end of the first quarter, and it looked as if they would hold the lead right through. However, Robertson, who directed play from the centre, and also executed some fine stab passes to Spencer and Shannon, who were in good form, and North Sydney gained the lead at half-time—35 points to 24. Though North Sydney battled vigorously during the third and fourth quarters of the game, they could not keep pace with Newtown, who added 10 goals in sequence, while the Northerners could notch only three behinds. A feature of the game was the bright play shown by second-graders who had been pressed into service by both sides. By securing five goals Meadows brought his total in competition games this season to 50.

South Sydney easily defeated East Sydney at the Australian Football Ground, the final scores being 20—17 to 5—8. Eagle, an ex-junior, who has been showing splendid form of late, kicked nine goals for the Southerners.

The play-off match, for fourth position, between Newtown and Central-Western is bound to create great interest. Honours were easy in their two previous engagements this season. Should the match be held over till after the carnival games the season will run its full length; more particularly if there be a challenge final game.

To-day week—August 5—will mark the opening of the championship carnival games. The official opening will be performed by his Excellency the Governor-General, Sir Ronald Munro Ferguson. The representative teams of the six States have now been selected, and it is estimated that quite 300 visiting footballers will be quartered in Sydney during the progress of the carnival. In addition, a large number of supporters are expected to make the trip with the various State and club teams. School teams from Victoria, Queensland, and Bathurst are also due to visit Sydney during the currency of the carnival. In point of numbers it will mark the greatest gathering of athletes that has been known in Sydney, and interest in their doings will be keen in every State throughout the Commonwealth.

THE ASSOCIATION GAME.

SYDNEY V NEWCASTLE.

Although the return inter-association match between Sydney and Newcastle was won by the metropolitan team, there was not much to choose between the two sides. The Sydney forwards showed to advantage in footwork, but the visitors attacked with more dash, particularly in the second half. A feature of the game was the absence of close tackling, the northern team especially being content to keep the play open and rely on intercepting their opponents' passes. In the first half the home team did not trouble the goalkeeper to any extent; subsequently, however, there was a series of bombardments, and the visiting "goalie" was severely tried.

The backs on both sides had a great amount of work to do. Thomson, the captain of the northern team, shone as a spoiler. Williams, his partner, did more actual tackling, and paid serviceable attention to his forwards by placing the ball in their way. Ross was easily the stronger and more reliable of the home backs.

The visiting halves played solidly, J. Sneddon, in the centre, being the most prominent before the interval. Later, Stoker assisted the backs cleverly in defence, but, as a whole, Newcastle's half-back line did not aid the forwards as ably as the Sydney halves did theirs. Hilder's work in this respect was admirable, and that he backed up the attacks was illustrated by his being in position to score the first goal after he had started Carroll and Melliar-Smith. Moore also performed well. He scored with a "header," the opposing goalkeeper, in trying to catch and throw the ball out with one action, sending it back into the net. Smith, at left-half, did a lot of useful all-round work.

Carroll's fine footwork and excellent combination with Melliar-Smith resulted in some brilliant tit-bits, and his hard shots were the most accurate he has shown this season. The goal credited to Carroll came from a low drive, which was stopped by Sneddon on or near the goal-line between the posts, but, owing to the force of the shot the ball twisted out of the goalkeeper's hands and went over the line. There is just a doubt whether the whole of the ball was behind the line before Sneddon sent it out again, but the referee was satisfied it was a goal. The whole of the ball must cross the line before a score can be correctly allowed.

Hoffman, playing for the first time as a centre-forward, joined neatly in the combination of the front rank, though his shots had hardly sufficient force in them. Quill's centres might also have had a little more power behind them. However, he is a shade on the light side (9st 9lb). Quill was seemingly neglected by Gallagher, but he kept too far back to enable the right wing pair to operate to such advantage as Carroll and Melliar-Smith did on the opposite wing.

The Newcastle forwards depended a good deal on long passes and shots, and showed little of the close combination that characterised many of the attacks by the home side. At times Alberts was conspicuous in short passes to Watson, but he seemed inclined to attempt too much footwork in trying to beat an opponent. Thorpe worked solidly in the endeavour to gain possession, and displayed much willingness in tackling. On several occasions the visiting forwards lost control of the ball when within striking distance of the goal.

Of the goalkeepers, Sneddon was the busier. The shots he saved were mostly hard and fast. Lowe fell in attempting a save in the second half, and was injured during the scramble made by the northern forwards to force the ball through. He limped painfully for the remainder of the game.

Newtown's success against Canterbury in the Gardiner Cup should spur the players on towards achieving further victories. Their next match in the championship will be against Granville Holroyd. Grumitt, who scored both goals on Saturday, represented the State against Tasmania in 1911, and has also been successful as a cricketer, some of his bowling performances for Redfern last year bordering on the sensational.

QUEENSLAND TOUR.

The New South Wales team will leave for Queensland early next month, and will be away on two playing Saturdays, viz: August 8 and August 15.

BASEBALL.

COMPETITION GAMES.

The weather on Saturday was again wet, but for the greater part the players were keen, and little or no interruption was allowed to take place. At Waverley the local side were particularly anxious not to lose an opportunity of retaining their advantage on the competition table, and their opponents—Paddington—being no less keen, the game proceeded. A splendid contest resulted, Waverley beating their opponents for the second time this season. It may be mentioned that the "tri-colour" is not very prominent in the new uniforms of the Paddington team, and it would seem almost necessary that the club should register new colours. On Saturday the battery work was first-class by the pitchers and catchers of both sides. Paddington's pitcher (C. Franks) was better than G. Brown, but the latter had the advantage of a field support which is now probably second to none in the competition. No fewer than nine of the players engaged in the game are selected in one or the other of the New South Wales teams against South Australia and Victoria next Saturday, and it is very pleasing to note that the form displayed by the majority of them was distinctly good. W. S. McCloy in particular is picked out as having played an excellent game—base work (third), batting, base-running, and sliding. H. Comber, the star outfielder, had the peculiar distinction on Saturday of having missed his first "fly" for the season. Altogether, the game was a wonderful one, the handling of the heavy, greasy ball being first-class.

Petersham had much the better of the game against Burwood at the former's home ground. Petersham's win was not unexpected, but it was not anticipated that their task would be quite so easy. The final scores, 22-9, in eight innings are a fair indication of the relative form shown by the two teams on the day. Burwood's field errors were numerous, but Petersham's were few. With the exception of N. Clarke, who was only up twice, every batter for Petersham made one or more safe hits; four batters hit safely three times. In this connection it must not be forgotten that Burwood were without their usual pitcher, J. Ritchie, and had to rely on W. Sneesby from the second team. Sneesby was not well supported, 16 field errors being recorded against his team mates.

The two tail-end teams, Lane Cove and Mosman-North Sydney, put up a really fine game at Chatswood. Both batteries were in excellent form, and Lane Cove had the services of R. V. Tait. A full game was got through, in which Lane Cove scored a total of four to the opposition's three. In a low scoring game of this kind it is almost unnecessary to say that the fielding was up to standard, and as far as Mosman are concerned, this is easily the best game they have put up this season.

Leichhardt were surprised by University at the former's ground, and although Leichhardt won 3-1, it was not until the eighth innings that they scored a run. In 'Varsity's seventh innings they scored one run, so that for a short period they were in the lead, and the excitement ran high. The game was a good one, with the batteries on both sides having the upper hand of the batters; pitchers H. Franks (Leichhardt) and F. Farrar (University) were in fine form.

THE CARNIVAL.

About 70 players, senior and junior, are expected to arrive at Sydney on Friday to take part in the interstate carnival. The N.S.W. Association will officially welcome them at the N.S.W. Sports Club at noon on the same day. Victoria will not be represented by the team originally selected. Smith, Kiernan, Johnston, Taylor, and Vaughan are unable to make the trip. Hindson, Binney, and Owen were chosen to fill places, but Binney is not available. South Australia will be very strong numerically; and they will be accompanied by 15 players of the Freemason Rambler Club. A very full programme has been arranged for four days, August 1, 3, 5, and 8, particulars of which have already been published in these columns.

BASEBALL RULES.

RECENT ALTERATIONS.

According to advices from America, several of the playing rules have been altered and added to. The idea of the committee which has charge of this matter has been apparently to make plain a few anomalies, as will be seen by a glance at the following:—

An entirely new section has been added to rule 56, which relates to when base-runners are out. It is known as section 17, and former sections 17 and 18 in the new rule books will be sections 18 and 19. The new section, which governs the actions of the coacher read as follows: "If a coacher at third base touch or hold a base-runner at third base, or a base-runner who is rounding third base for the home plate, the umpire shall declare such a runner out."

When is a home run not a home run? This question has been the subject of much comment. In past years section 2 of rule 48, which governs balls batted outside the ground, read as follows: "A fair batted ball that goes over the fence or into the stand shall entitle the batsman to a home run, unless it should pass out of the ground or into a stand at a less distance than 235 feet from the home base, in which case the batsman shall be entitled to only two bases."

There have been several cases where a batter, after making a home run by hitting the ball over the fence, has carelessly neglected to touch a certain base. In such a case, if a member of the team in the field called the attention of the umpire to the play, it has been customary for the umpire to put a new ball in play, and upon a fielder touching the base missed, to declare out the batter who hit the ball over the fence. The umpire in such plays has always quoted rule 59 to substantiate such a ruling. That rule relates to the scoring of runs, and specifically says: "One run shall be scored every time a base-runner, after having legally touched the first three bases, shall legally touch home plate before three men are put out. . . ."

At a glance, it can be seen that these two rules conflict. One states that the batter is entitled to a home run when he hits a ball over a fence, which is the required distance from the home plate, and the other rule says that a run cannot be scored unless the runner touches all the bases. Many experts have contended that since a home run entitled the batter to score, it was impossible to put him out, regardless of his failure to touch the bases. The rules committee, by the addition of one short sentence, has made definite the duties of the batter after he hits a ball over the fence. The sentence which follows the rule 48 quoted above reads as follows:—"In either event, the batsman must touch the bases in the regular order."

Plays, in which the batter interferes at the plate, have long puzzled many baseballers. Just who should be declared out on such plays have often created much discussion. Rule 51, which deals with the subject, is as follows:—"The batsman is out if he attempts to hinder the catcher from fielding or throwing the ball by stepping outside the lines of the batsman's position, or in any way obstructing or interfering with that player." From the foregoing it would appear that on all interference plays at the plate, the batter was always out. Such, however, is not the case; as in section 15 of rule 56, we find another interpretation as follows:—"The base-runner is out if, with one or no one out and a base-runner on the third base, the batsman interfere with a play being made at the home plate."

Thus again we have a sharp conflict. One rule says that the batter is always out when interfering with the catcher, then an exception appears. Briefly, the interpretation of the two rules is as follows:—With runners on any base other than third, the batsman is always out when interfering with the catcher; with a runner on third and one or no one out, the runner is out if the batsman interferes with a play at the plate. With two out, and a runner on third, the batsman is out if he interfere with the play at the plate. The rules committee has removed the anomaly by adding the following clause at the bottom of section 5 of rule 51:—"Except that the batsman shall not be put out under this section, if the base runner be declared out according to section 15 of rule 56."

Several years ago the rules committee decided that any time a fielder stopped a batted ball by throwing his glove or cap at it, the batter was entitled to three bases. No action was taken on a thrown ball. In the few instances that such a play has come in the big American leagues umpires have always granted the runners two bases, just as if the ball went into the stand or players' bench, which is the rule covering that point. This year the committee has incorporated a clause in the code which governs the throwing of a cap or glove at a thrown ball. Section 6 of Rule 54 now reads:—"If a fielder stop or catch a batted ball or a thrown ball with his cap, glove, or any part of his uniform, while detached from its proper place on his person, the runner or runners shall be entitled to three bases, if a batted ball, or two bases if a thrown ball."

The rule relating to an umpire being hit by a thrown ball has been changed. Under the old ruling the ball was only in play when it struck the umpire while on foul territory. Section 7 of Rule 54, which covers this play, has been radically changed, and the new section now reads:—"If a thrown or pitched ball strike the person or clothing of the umpire, the ball shall be considered in play, and the base runner or runners shall be entitled to all the bases they can make."

In only one instance can the umpire now figure in a thrown ball play. If, while working back of the bat, his person or clothing interfere with the catcher in an attempt to throw, then play shall be suspended, no base run, and the player entitled to return to his base without liability to be put out. This feature will be covered in section 4 of rule 55, which will now read:—"If the person or clothing of the umpire, while stationed back of the bat, interfere with the catcher in an attempt to throw, the base runner shall return to his base without liability to be put out."

Under the old ruling the coacher could address remarks to the base runner only; the new ruling is not quite so strict but it also permits talking to the batsman. This right to the coacher will be contained in the first sentence of rule 58 relative to the coacher. It will read as follows:—"A coacher may address words of assistance and direction to the base runners or to the batsman."

POLO.

COUNTRY CARNIVALS.

The Wagga Polo Club's second annual carnival was concluded last Friday, and the Murrumbidgee body must feel gratified at the success attained. In addition to the Bruce Cup—a trophy presented by Mrs. Ernest Bruce, whose husband is secretary of the Melbourne Polo Club—the Whitehead Cup, the gift of Mr. Whitehead, of Berry Jerry Station, was also competed for in a handicap tournament, under similar conditions as the Adrian Knox Cup tournament is played during the Dudley Cup carnival at Sydney.

It is pleasing to find that the Wagga Club is now so firmly established. Reference was made in these columns last season to the many advantages that the Riverina district offers for the growth and progress of polo clubs. There is, perhaps, no more suitable ground in the State for the game than that on the Wagga Racecourse. It is fast and even; and, although at times a trifle hard and fiery, that may be easily overcome by an experienced groundsman.

The Bruce Cup final was played out between a Sydney club team, which included Mr. C. J. Withycombe, captain (back), Mr. C. Hume (3), Mr. K. G. Richards (2), Mr. R. O. Middleton (1), and the popular Harden four, who lined up: Mr. A. L. Bunyan (back), Mr. W. Ross, captain (3), Mr. T. Ross (2), and Mr. A. M'Laurin (1). The scores were:—Harden, 7 goals; Sydney, 4 goals. The south-western side underwent a change from that which put up such a gallant struggle against Muswellbrook A in the Dudley Cup semi-finals. Mr. Bunyan went into his old place at back, Mr. Knox Ross stood down, and Mr. Tom Ross went forward to No. 2.

Up to half-time the game appears to have been very even, then Harden took command, and kept the metropolitan men busy defending. Mr. M'Laurin is credited with having played a very fine game throughout, and the brothers Ross were, as usual, safe and very dashing. Mr. Withycombe was the best of the Sydney four; but the team, as a whole, did well against a really good side. It is hoped that the Harden Club will endeavour to keep the "old home together," so to speak, and that it may be able to bring its representatives more in touch for practice next season.

At the conclusion of the match, Mrs. Whitehead handed the Cup to Mr. W. Ross, the Harden captain, and also four souvenir cups for each of the team. The Whitehead Cup was won by the Wagga B team from the Mauns' representatives, who hail from the Tumberumba district. The final scores were:—Wagga B 6 goals, Mauns (2 goals) 4 goals. The local men had superior ponies, and dominated the game throughout. Mrs. G. P. Wilson, of Big Springs station, presented the cup on behalf of Mrs. Whitehead.

The carnival was a very enjoyable one, and the weather being all that could be desired for outdoor sport. Mrs. G. P. Wilson acted as hostess for the club, and entertained the players and a large number of guests at afternoon tea each day.

The Narromine and Quirindi carnivals will now attract the attention of polo players. The former opens to-morrow, and the northern tournament commences on August 3, and will continue on the two following days. On late form the Muswellbrook A team should carry off first honours, and the line up will be:—Mr. D. M. Bell (back), Mr. Harold White, captain (3), Mr. Bruce White (2), Mr. A. Pearse (1). The Royal Blue's B team will include:—Mr. Reg White, captain (back), Mr. Roy Bell (3), Mr. Fred. Bell (2), and Mr. Ned White (1). Sydney club will send a team, which, as far as is known at present, will consist of:—Mr. C. J. Withycombe, captain (back), Mr. Will Ross (3), Mr. E. W. Garvan (2), and Mr. K. G. Richards (1). Mr. Garvan has been taking a holiday in the Muswellbrook district.

COOMA v DUNTROON COLLEGE.

Two enjoyable games were played at Cooma last week between the local club and a military team from Duntroon College. The college officers took up the game last season, but this is the first time they have taken the field in public. Although beaten in both matches, they have no doubt acquired some useful knowledge of the game from the capable Monaro players. A military team at a future Dudley Cup carnival would be heartily welcomed.

BOWLING.

NEW ZEALANDERS' RETURN.

With nothing but praise and expressions of pleasure at their tour in Queensland and the northern rivers, the Dominion players returned to Sydney. They were much impressed with the hospitality of the bowlers of the northern State, and some of them have also formed high opinions of the quality of Brisbane skill. As a rule, fine weather attended them there, but their re-entry to New South Wales brought an abundance of rain. At Lismore the match more resembled water polo than bowls, but present indications are for better fortune in Sydney than at the opening of the tour.

It was a great day at Petersham on Monday. Brilliant sunshine assisted the complete preparations made by President Booth and his executive, and the spacious grounds looked their best with the throng of ladies, the half-century of players in proper array, and the gay accompaniment of flags. A large number of invitations had been sent out, and those who accepted were rewarded with some excellent bowling, while music and afternoon tea added to the general pleasure. The visitors were successful in four of the six rinks, Mason scoring 25 to 17, Nixon 26—25, Coltman 26—21, and Sutcliffe 25—19. In the other two rinks, where the Petersham skips were President Booth and O'Neill, the local forces proved very strong, and made up the leeway easily. The former scored the great majority of 34 to 11, and his New Zealand opponents were lavish in praise of skipper Booth's efforts; O'Neill, with 29 to 19, also played remarkably well, and there was some excellent bowling on the part of Coltman, Yeo, Searl, Evans, Columb, Potter, Mason, and Sutcliffe, amongst others.

The visit of the president's team to Rockdale on Saturday met with the same fate that has befallen many fixtures of late. Half the game was played, however, before the rain arrived, and the visiting team was well on the way to victory. The chief features of the play were the remarkable successes of the Randwick rink under the skippership of Spohn, which scored 23 to 3 in ten out of twelve heads played, and the equally striking performance of W. Alderson's rink, with 21 to 2 in twelve out of fourteen ends. The early cessation of play enabled the speeches of welcome and response to receive more than ordinary attention, and, as an Ashfield rival, Mr. Spence gave the St. George Club full credit for their district victory in the premiership.

Two matches will be played by the New Zealanders on Thursday and Friday, which have a savour, at any rate, of test games. Several changes in the original selections of the local rinks have taken place, and the teams as reconstructed are as follow:

AT ASHFIELD ON THURSDAY.

Breckenridge, Laurence, Lawson, Moses (skip).
M'Laren, Wall, Cox, W. H. Gartrell (skip.).
Charlton, Wischeart, M'Donald, Thorpe (skip.).
Boyd, Berry, Yeo, Strong (skip.).
Flook, Quigley, Raffan, Bromwich (skip.).

AT WARRINGAH ON FRIDAY.

Kennan, Copeland, Donaldson, Harris (skip.).
T. Henderson, Cooper, Spence, Harrison (skip.).
Dingwall, Hope, M'Gee, H. A. Scott (skip.).
Whitehouse, Holt, Brogden, Leitch (skip.).
F. Searl, Dean, O'Neill, Wilkie (skip.).

The New Zealand team are scheduled to leave this morning for the South Coast, and will engage the Woonona Club this afternoon. Mr. Shadforth will accompany them, and a return will be made in time to reach headquarters at 10.30 o'clock to-night. Not by any means the least interesting from a scenic point of view, or enjoyable from a playing and social standpoint, should this excursion be.

Thoughts of the beautiful Illawarra district remind one that another green is to be added to its rapidly-increasing number. A new club has been formed at Berry, and it has the distinction of being farthest south on that line. A splendid site has been obtained, 198 feet by 176, within two minutes of the railway station, and the centre of the town, at the moderate outlay of £200. The trustees of the estate of the late Sir John Hay have given £50 towards the making of the green, and Mr. W. Kenwood, of the St. George Club, has already taken in hand as a labour of love the work of laying down four rinks. The prospects of the new club are very bright, as splendid local support is promised.

Next Monday, being a bank holiday, the notable annual gathering between the Banks and Insurance teams and the Waverley Club will take place on the spacious greens of the latter. It is proposed to extend the match from twelve to fourteen rinks aside, an arrangement that will test the resources of the big club to the utmost. Should any of those invited to represent Banks and Insurance be unable to play, they are requested to advise either Mr. H. C. Evans or Mr. F. Fullwood. Both sides will be guests of the Waverley Club at luncheon, and the match will commence punctually at 2.15 p.m.

On Saturday afternoon the New Zealand team are booked to leave on the return voyage. Four rinks, however, will stay another week, and will complete some unfulfilled appointments. They will play at Katoomba on Saturday, and return on Monday. Parramatta will be visited on Tuesday, Marrickville on Wednesday, and Balmain on Thursday.

During the course of the New Zealand match at Petersham, an incident occurred which illustrated the prevailing want of acquaintance with even the ordinary rules of the game. President Felix Booth was skip in opposition to Bush, and when he had his second bowl to play on one occasion, the position was against him. He decided to drive, and made a splendid shot, striking the jack full on a long head, and forcing it against the legally-constructed bank. The jack rebounded straight back on to the green, a silent witness to Both's accuracy, but just as Bush was about to play his second bowl, with the position then in favour of Petersham, one of the oldest and most experienced players in the State called a halt, saying that in his opinion the end was dead. Other old players agreed with him, while some declined to venture an opinion. A referee was called, and declared the end dead. The New Zealanders, of course, are not conversant with our rules, but the present law 15 says: "Should the jack be driven against the bank in the line of play, and rebound on to the green by the effect of the play, it shall be treated as though it had not been off the green."

The annual association smoke concert will take place at Aaron's Exchange Hotel to-morrow evening commencing at 8 o'clock precisely. A fine programme of vocal and instrumental music will be presented, and the duty of handing to the various champions of the season the symbols of success will be performed by Mr. President Spence. All the metropolitan clubs will, doubtless, be largely represented, and it is expected that some of the country clubs as well will furnish additions to this notable gathering. The team of New Zealand players at present in Sydney will be guests of the association, and their presence will lend eclat to the function.

In the semi-final of the H. C. Evans' trophy at Waverley, Caswell, on 6, beat Batson on 5, by 4 points. The final is thus left to be disputed by Kenyon and Caswell, two young players of decided promise.

Yesterday morning a contingent of the New Zealanders paid a visit to Alcock's, Ltd., for the purpose of inspecting the table bowl-testing apparatus. On the whole they were very favourably impressed with its mechanical exactitude, though it was apparent they still leaned strongly towards the established green test of their own country.

It will be learned with general regret that Peter Anderson, champion single-hander of the central division and one of the most popular bowlers in the State, has been seriously ill. The final of the City Club championship has thus been indefinitely postponed.

LAWN TENNIS.

CANADA CONQUERED.

GERMAN TIE TO-MORROW.

The Canadians were completely routed by the Australasians last week in the first round of the Davis Cup. When the United States representatives met the same Canadian players who opposed our men, they won the three ties played in straight sets, the second round of singles being abandoned. Brookes and Wilding did equally well, or, rather, better, for they did not lose a set in five contests, and in only one instance was an advantage set played, whereas two were necessary in the United States v Canada tie of last year.

It was unfortunate that such excessive heat should have been encountered, and it is to be hoped that this experience will not be repeated, for Brookes is affected by high temperatures more than the majority of players. Australians, however, derived a certain degree of amusement when they read that the thermometer registered 100 degrees at Chicago on the first day of the match, for some of the American papers published interviews with Alexander and Beals Wright on their return from the 1908 match in Melbourne, in which some amazing references to the heat during that contest were made. One statement was that people did not carry matches in their pockets because, owing to the extreme heat they would ignite spontaneously. Well, the records show that the heat in Melbourne at that time did not reach 100 degrees, so that joke is on the Americans now.

To-morrow our men will engage Froitzheim and Kreuzer, of Germany, at Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, and the issue of that contest will be awaited with more anxiety than was that with Canada. It will be played on the courts of the Allegheny Country Club, at Sewickley Heights, 12 miles from Pittsburgh, in a picturesque locality amongst the Allegheny Mountains. The Allegheny Country Club is one of many of the kind which exist throughout the United States, where all kinds of sport are in evidence, and every comfort and convenience is provided for the members. Of the Allegheny club, American Lawn Tennis says: "Everything is on a large scale, down to the dressing-room, where the lockers are double (or triple) size, the shower room is of marble, and there are stools and benches and divans in their appropriate places; not to mention a barber with befitting paraphernalia, a valet, and a little safe for valuables." If the attention devoted to the courts is commensurate with that given to the dressing-room, the players should have no reason to complain about the conditions at Pittsburgh.

While expecting that Australasia will be successful against Germany, the chances of the latter nation cannot be disregarded. Froitzheim was within one game of defeating Brookes at Wimbledon, and he has beaten Wilding more than once. That was on hard courts on the Continent some years ago, it is true, but these two players appear to be equally proficient on either surface. It would, therefore, not be beyond the bounds of possibility for Froitzheim to win both his singles matches, necessitating a defeat by Kreuzer in both of his singles, and the loss of the doubles to deprive Germany of victory. Both our men ought to beat Kreuzer, but being a lefthander he may worry Brookes, as Beals Wright invariably did, though Kreuzer is hardly of such a standard as the American. That would make the doubles the deciding factor, but let us hope the result will not hinge on that. Brookes will possibly have learned more of Froitzheim's weakness than the latter will of his in their encounter at Wimbledon, just as he did of Parke's in Australia, and with the constant Wilding to support him, Australasia should be found contesting the final against the British Isles next week.

Profound sympathy will be felt with Mr. P. B. Colquhoun, M.L.A., president of the Australasian Lawn Tennis Association, in the loss of his wife, which occurred last week. Prior to her marriage, Mrs. Colquhoun (then Miss M. Shaw) was a successful competitor in Melbourne and Sydney tournaments, winning the ladies' singles, doubles, and the mixed championships of N. S. Wales and the ladies' doubles championship of Victoria. She and Mr. Colquhoun were amongst the best and most popular mixed doubles pairs seen in Australia. In recent years Mrs. Colquhoun had not played much in tournaments, but she led the N. S. Wales ladies' team against that from New Zealand in 1909.

If the scheduled dates of the interclub competitions of the New South Wales Association could have been adhered to, all the grades except one would have completed their engagements last Saturday, but so perverse has been the weather that several of the preliminary rounds have yet to be played off before the finals and semi-finals can be worked off. Unless more good fortune than has hitherto been experienced is met with, there will be little, if any, time to spare between the termination of the badge matches and the commencement of the City of Sydney championships, which, with the Metropolitan championships at Strathfield, which immediately follow, will occupy about six Saturdays. Last Saturday's postponement was particularly disappointing, for the early morning promised well, but players had hardly reached the various grounds before rain fell. In the majority of cases little or no play took place, but some teams played on regardless of the rain, and the inevitable ruin of their rackets.

There seems to be an unlimited supply of juvenile wonders from California. The latest is Lindley Murray, who has been astonishing the Easterners in a tournament, which had not concluded when the mail left, but in which he had reached the final round, in which he was to meet F. B. Alexander. Murray, who is only 17 years of age, had defeated Washburn, Church, and Mathey, all players of high rank, in the course of his progress to the final round.

The continued advance in popularity of lawn tennis in all parts of the world has been commented upon in as many places, and some figures recently published in an English paper illustrate this fact in a remarkable way. It commences by stating that one day this year in London it was impossible to purchase a box of lawn tennis balls; the demand had outrun the supply. One great retail firm estimates the demand to be twice that of last year. Another is turning out nearly 11,000 balls per week; about 75 per cent. of these being consumed in the United Kingdom. Yet there are as many more being manufactured by other makers. One manufacturer who has been making 30,000 rackets a year, intends to increase his output to 50,000 this year. There are 450 clubs affiliated to the Lawn Tennis Association (England), with a membership of about 35,000, and in addition to these are unaffiliated clubs with a membership many times exceeding this number; while innumerable players belong to no club at all. It is estimated that the number of tournament players in England is about 13,000, and rapidly increasing. It is impossible to compare the numbers of this vast army of British players with the relatively few in Australasia, without appreciation of the proved ability of so many in Australia and New Zealand to hold their own with the leaders of the game in England.

ANGLING.

THE SCHNAPPER.

The schnapper (Pagrosomus auratus) is a fine table and sporting fish; it is highly prized for its delicacy of flavor, and commands top price in our markets. It is found in the waters of Australia, New Zealand, Japan, and China, but appears to be most abundant on our own coasts. It is an inhabitant of comparatively deep waters, preferring the rocky, reefy bottoms where its favourite food abounds. Year after year schnapper are being located in deeper waters, to which they apparently migrate at frequent intervals. The eggs of the schnapper are pelagic—they hang suspended near, or float at the surface of the water. In the various stages of their growth, these fish are called by the vernacular names cockney, red-bream, squire, and schnapper.

Doubt has been expressed by anglers as to whether they are the one species. Mr. David G. Stead emphatically states that they are, and we know of no ichtyologist of repute who takes a different view. With regard to the "old man" schnapper, this title is, in many cases at all events, a misnomer, and Mr. Stead, who has examined a great many of them, is confident in that assertion, as all the "old man" schnapper examined by him proved to be females. In a paper read by him some time ago, Mr. Stead stated that "the same thing applies to the largest examples of a number of other species" which he had seen, among them sea mullet, flat-tail mullet, sand whiting, trumpeter whiting, flathead, blackbream, tarwhine, Murray cod, golden perch, Australian bass, Queensland groper, etc. His experience goes to show that in the case of our edible fishes, the females are larger than the males of the same age, and as a general rule all the largest caught by anglers are females.

As far as Murray cod, golden perch, trout, and bass are concerned, the writer, who has caught many hundreds of each, can bear out Mr. Stead's statement. For instance, his three largest trout, weighing 8¾, 8¼, and 8lb, were all females, and the heaviest male fish out of a total of about 50 caught by members of the party during the same trip weighed 5½lb. In addition to the three large fish caught by the writer, one of the party caught a 8¾, 8[illegible], and 8lb trout—all rainbows, and all female fish. This does not prove that there were not male fish in the same water, as large or larger, but it confirms the assumption that the majority of the biggest fish are females. No doubt there are exceptions, and it is not proposed to lay down any hard and fast rule on the subject.

The Australian spelling of the name of this fish is "schnapper," but Professor David Starr Jordan, perhaps the greatest living ichthyologist, refers to Pagrosomus auratus as "The snapper of the Australian seas." Apparently the first mention of this fish on record appears in William Dampier's "Voyage to New Holland in 1669," in which he says: "In the night, while calm, we fish'd with hook and line and caught good store of fish, viz., snappers, breams, old wives, and dog-fish." In describing this "snapper," Dampier says: "It is like unto a roach, but a great deal bigger. The back is of a bright red, and the belly of a silver color; the scales are as broad as a shilling. The snapper is excellent meat." The name schnapper has probably been applied to this fish on account of its general appearance and color being suggestive of kinship with the red snapper of America. The principal food of the fish consists of sand worms, crustaceans, etc., which abound in the vicinity of the rocky, reefy localities favoured by them; hence the anglers' lines are frequently fouled in the crevices of the rocks while drifting over the feeding grounds of the fish.

The quantity of schnapper passing annually through the New South Wales market is now considerably more than 400,000lb. Specimens have been caught exceeding 30lb in weight—these were of the "old-man" variety, and bore the characteristic bony protuberance on the head, which gives some of them an almost human cast of countenance. Our coastal waters teem with schnapper—they are very powerful swimmers, and in spite of the heavy lead that is necessary to keep the line down while drifting over the fishing grounds, and which the schnapper has to drag about with him when hooked, he puts up a very game fight. Fish of 10 to 15lb are very often caught at Port Stephens, which is one of the best schnapper fishing resorts, while they are usually present in considerable numbers at many places much nearer Sydney—Norah Head, Barrenjoey, Kinghorn Reef, Bateman's Bay, off Bermagui, Harrington Inlet, outside Wallis Lake, Hastings River; and many other places could be named.

RIFLE SHOOTING.

AUSTRALIAN TEAM.

DOINGS IN ENGLAND.

BISLEY CAMP, June 23.

Last week the two Scottish rifle meetings at Edinburgh and Darnley, and the London and Middlesex Counties' Rifle Association meeting at Bisley were shot off. These meetings have little more than local importance, and, in fact, the prize money given at Darnley, the biggest of all, only equals that given at the smallest of the Australian State meetings.

The four old Bisley shots of the Australian team, Harrison (N.S.W.), McAlister (N.S.W.), Cross (Victoria), and Halliday (Queensland), went north to renew old acquaintanceships, and returned, having won over £60 between them, as well as a number of badges, medals, and prizes in kind. Of the quartet, Harrison was the most successful, winning about £23, and securing second place in the grand aggregate at Edinburgh. The Scottish championship match shot at Darnley is the biggest Scottish event, and in this McAlister and Cross got into the final and secured badges for 22nd and 23rd respectively.

Down south the remainder of the team shot in the London and Middlesex meeting, winning £23 out of a total prize list of £300. Though this is only a small one-day meeting, it is well supported by the best of the London riflemen, and shooting was very keen. Last year Cross won the Dewar Challenge Shield, which goes with the grand aggregate, but he could not return from Scotland in time to defend his title, and his best substitute proved to be Hubbard (Tasmania), who reached third place.

In the rapid firing matches at all the meetings the Australians did very well; at Darnley Cross won the 200yds rapid and the rapid aggregate, and at Bisley Hubbard and Parsons (N.S.W.) made possibles in the 200yds rapid, and Trenberth (W.A.), Timmins (S.A.), and Alston (Victoria) made 24 out of 25 points at the 500yds rapid, the highest score made in the match.

These meetings provide interesting preliminaries to Bisley, and a test of the new conditions, which are to come into force at the big July meeting, the reduction of the 500yds bull's-eye from 18 inches to 16 inches, does not affect scores as much as one would expect. There are, no doubt, fewer possibles, but 34's and 33's are just as common as of yore. The 20s time limit was also nominally in force, but as it was not strictly observed, its effect remains a matter of conjecture. In all probability it will not be rigidly adhered to during the Bisley meeting.

The chief topic on the ranges is the new War Office conditions, which are to come into force next year, converting the "King's," and "George's," and other "Territorial" matches into service and rapid shoots. The innovation is heartily condemned by nearly all riflemen, and the hope is expressed that the Dominions' visitors will speak against the change in no uncertain voice. The Rifle Union, formed to combat the War Office ultimatum, is becoming a strong organisation, and has a large membership, and if its support is not sufficient to free the A.R.A. from the War Office, it will endeavour to carry on bull's-eye shooting independently of Government support, and, if necessary, in face of the opposition of the Army authorities.

MOTORING.

THOUSAND MILES TRIAL.

THE ROUTE.

The roads and tours committee of the Automobile Club of Australia (Messrs. A. J. Christie, G. F. Hill, H. R. Hill, J. A. Minnett, R. G. Todman) has issued the route and conditions of the thousand miles reliability trial of the club, to be held in the north and north-western districts of the State, starting on Monday, September 7, and finishing on Saturday, September 12. This is the biggest motoring event to be promoted by the club within the State.

The conditions are similar to those obtaining in reliability trials previously held by the club, with the exception that the system of allotting points in connection with the hill-climbing contests (of which two or three will be arranged), has been slightly modified. Each competitor will be credited with 66 2-3 per cent. of the actual points scored by him under the hill-climb formula, whereas in the past each event was allotted a definite number of points based upon the probable points the competitor would score by formula.

For the general result, however, each competitor will be credited at the start with 500 points for reliability and 100 points for petrol consumption. At the end of the contest points lost in either section will be debited against the competitor, and the winner will be the competitor finishing with the largest total number of points to his credit. In the petrol consumption test the petrol consumed will be judged by the net amount of spirit poured into the tanks.

The longest day's run is from Tamworth to Mudgee, a distance of 220 miles, on Thursday, September 12. It was originally intended to travel from Scone direct to Merriwa, but the road has since been found to be an impracticable one for motor cars, and a detour through Muswellbrook and Wybong was the only alternative.

The details of the route, which covers a large tract of interesting country, are as follow:—

MONDAY, Sept. 7 (142m.).—Sydney (0), Parramatta (15), McGrath's Hill, Windsor (34), Wiseman's Ferry (60), St. Alban's (70), Dean's Farm (86), Laguna (103), Wollombi (108), Cessnock (125), Kurri Kurri (134), West Maitland (142).

TUESDAY, Sept. 8 (209m.).—West Maitland (0), Paterson (12), Dungog (33), Weismantles (49½), Gloucester (69½), Krambach (93), Killawarra (111½), Wingham (115½), Taree (124), Coopernook (139), Camden Haven (156), Kew (158), Wauchope (178)—here turn left towards Yarras and Cross Bridge, rejoining main road beyond Blackman's Point), Telegraph Point (188), Kempsey (209).

WEDNESDAY, Sept. 9 (185m.).—Kempsey (0), Stilton Flat (8), Hickey's Creek (18), Bellbrook (33), Comara (45), Newell's (64), Foot of Mountain (68), Top of Mountain (75), Chandler's Bridge (89½), Wollomombi (91), Armidale (116), Uralla (130), Kentucky (138), Bendemeer (161), Tamworth (185).

THURSDAY, Sept. 10 (220m.).—Tamworth (0), Goonoo Goonoo (1[illegible]), Wallabadah (34), Willow Tree (46), Ardglen (53), Murrurundi (58), Wingen (71), Scone (81), Aberdeen (90), Muswellbrook (98), Wybong (115), Merriwa (144), Bow ([illegible]), Collaroy (159½), turn off to Cassilis (170), Green Hills (184), Ulan (196), Budgee Budgee (214), Mudgee (220).

FRIDAY, Sept. 11 (151m.).—Mudgee (0), Cullenbone (7½), Yambil (25), Goonla (30), Spicer's Creek (38), Lincoln (48), Wellington (57), Two Mile Creek (77), Molong (98), Orange (120), Lucknow (126), Shadforth (132), Victoria (139), Dunkeld (147), Bathurst (151).

SATURDAY, Sept. 12 (126m.).—Bathurst (0), Kelso ([illegible]), Glanmire (7½), Yetholme (18), Meadow Flat ([illegible]), Rydal (33), Old Bowenfels (38½), Little Hartley (47), Mt. Victoria (51), Springwood (80½), Penrith ([illegible]), Parramatta (111½), Sydney (126½).

CYCLING.

INTERCLUB PREMIERSHIP COMPETITION.

FURTHER POSTPONEMENTS.

The succession of wet Saturday afternoons has brought local cycling matters to a standstill. The third and fourth heats of the Dunlop inter-club premiership, originally arranged for July 11, have been postponed until Saturday next; and unless the road between Homebush and Granville has improved by that date, it looks as if the New South Wales Cyclists' Union will have to cast about elsewhere for a suitable course. The programme for the racing in connection with the third and fourth heats has undergone a slight alteration, on account of the postponement. The Botany Club will be called upon to race in the third heat, with the Kegworth and Petersham clubs as was originally arranged, so that the Manly Club members may take part in Saturday's carnival at Manly. The Manly Club, in fact, is in a similar position to that in which the Botany Club was last Saturday, and will accordingly race with the Redfern and Camden clubs in the sixth heat, to be held presumably on August 8.

The idea of changing the course in the middle of a competition is not, as may be expected, agreeable to all the clubs; but the union now is in the unfortunate position of either having to run the event over a course crowded with motor cars, or to postpone the individual championship race until after the Goulburn-Sydney race, on September 5, which would be most undesirable. In the event of the Homebush course being abandoned, the union in all probability would select a course on the Western-road, between Sherwood and Penrith. But, here again, a difficulty is encountered. The race would have to be run over a straight-away course, or the teams turned around a mark or turning post in the middle of the road, which, although safe enough in an individual race, is dangerous in the extreme in a teams' race. There would be trouble, too, in getting the officials and riders away to Penrith in the early afternoon, while, after all, there is some doubt whether the numerous hills on the course, especially the big hill at Prospect, would not seriously interfere with the racing.

According to Mr. George Liggins, hon. secretary of the N.S.W. Cyclists' Union, the postponements of the inter-club premiership contests will not interfere in any way with the holding of the Camden Club's open race, on August 15. The entries for this event will close at the Sports Club on Saturday evening, and the handicaps, it is expected, will be announced a week later.

ATHLETICS.

OPEN ROAD RACE.

ASSOCIATION COUNCIL.

Last Saturday afternoon was set apart for the affiliated clubs, but only the South Sydney and Botany clubs turned out in the rain. The former held its annual five miles championship, and a fair field competed. A sealed handicap was decided in conjunction with the race. R. J. Fitzsimmons was always well placed, and not being troubled, won easily from A. Todorovitch, who was a long way in advance of S. Sheaves. The winner took 27m 6s for the distance, which was 1m 14s slower than last year, when T. R. Cole won. Cole, however, did not start in Saturday's race, which robbed the event of some interest. Todorovitch, on 45s, was placed first in the sealed handicap, and Fitzsimmons finished fourth from scratch.

The Botany Bicycle Club held a sports meeting at the Ascot racecourse, and included three events for the Botany Harriers. V. Simmons, from 7yds, won the 100 yards handicap in 11s, and with an allowance of 9in he did 38ft 2in, and won the running hop, step, and jump handicap. The other event was a five miles handicap, which was won by H. Brown, with 2m. H. Hayden from scratch was second, taking 26m 36s for the distance. The latter has been displaying splendid form this season, and he should have an excellent chance in both the five miles cross-country and 10 miles championships.

The attraction for Saturday will be the South Sydney Harriers' eighth annual three miles "Yours and Mine" cup road race, open to members of the New South Wales Amateur Athletic Association. The best distance runners have entered, and a good contest is looked forward to. The race will start from, and finish at, the corner of Cleveland and Darling streets, Moore Park. This race was established in 1907, and carries with it a cup which, to become the property of the winner, must be won twice. E. B. Bishop won the first event, but although he has competed in the race each year he has failed to repeat that performance. The following years J. W. Frazer, the hurdles champion of New South Wales, took the trophy, and other competitors who have been successful are:—G. Gardiner, W. O'Reilly, J. P. Haigh, W. Price, and T. R. Cole.

At the monthly council meeting of the New South Wales Amateur Athletic Association last week, it was decided to impose an extra 6d on all entries for both the five miles cross-country and ten miles championships of New South Wales in order to assist in raising the necessary funds to send a team to Victoria to represent this State in the Australasian cross-country championship. It is not anticipated, however, that this scheme will produce more than is sufficient to send two runners to Melbourne. The following open meetings were sanctioned:—September 17 and 18, G.P.S. A.A.A. sports, September 26, Y.M.C.A. carnival; October 10, Ashfield sports; November 14 and 21 East Sydney A.A.C. championships. Messrs. G. P. S. Parke, C. T. Ferguson, and J. Dagleish were appointed selectors for the Australasian cross-country championship team. The date of the five-miles cross-country championship was fixed for Saturday, August 29, at the Randwick racecourse. Consideration was given to the proposed visit to South Africa, and it was decided to communicate with the A.A.U. of Australasia, informing that body that as the South African Association is financing the tour, the N.S.W. A.A.A. are prepared to send as many athletes as are willing to make the trip.

The Young Men's Christian Association will hold their annual carnival at the Sports Ground on Saturday, September 26, instead of on the Sydney Cricket Ground as in former years. The relay race from Parramatta to Sydney will again form part of the programme, and it is hoped that this event will be better supported than last year. The club will hand over a percentage of the profits to the New South Wales Amateur Athletic Association.

J. Burton (Melbourne Harriers) will visit San Francisco in 1915 for the Panama Exposition Games. His club is arranging a sports meeting to be held at the end of the year to raise the necessary funds. At the last Australasian championships Burton ran second to G. L. Parker, of the All-American track team, in both the 100 yards and 220 yards' events.

FIXTURES.

Saturday: South Sydney Harriers, eighth annual three miles' "cup" road race, starting and finishing at the corner of Cleveland and Dowling streets, Moore Park, at 3 p.m.

SAILING.

It transpires that, after all, Mr. W. M. Marks, commodore of the Prince Alfred Yacht Club, who went to England with the object of sailing on Shamrock IV. in the America Cup races, may not have been very disappointed at not being included in the challenging yacht's crew, as would appear by the cables to hand. Although Mr. Marks set out for England with the definite intention of joining Shamrock IV. when she reached New York, he had some idea that he might not be allowed to sail in the yacht. At a presentation ceremony tendered him by the open-boat sailing men of Sydney just prior to his departure Mr. Marks stated that, although Sir Thomas Lipton had promised him he should be a member of Shamrock IV.'s crew, he (Mr. Marks) was fully aware that the skipper Sir Thomas had engaged to sail the yacht might insist upon choosing his own crew, which is the course generally followed in such cases. It was quite a regular thing for any skipper to do, said Mr. Marks, and he himself, as a skipper, thoroughly understood the situation. He, therefore, would be prepared for such a disappointment. On his previous trip to England he had personally met Shamrock IV.'s skipper, and thought he would be the man to select the men to sail with him. At the time the P.A.Y.C. commodore made his remarks little importance was attached to them, as it was taken for granted that he was to be a member of the challenging yacht's crew. However, in view of the cable stating that he had relinquished the idea of joining Shamrock IV. because of the probability of jealousy amongst the professionals who comprise the crew, Mr. Marks' statement prior to leaving Sydney is interest-in first-class order, is a better investment than a new cheap Car. A New Car depreciates from thirty to fifty per cent. the first year; a Second-hand Car bought at the right place is always a Saleable Asset. We have Cars and Lorries that have had very little use going for half or less than half their original cost; and we are authorised by the owners to guarantee their condition. We have sold hundreds of Cars, and can refer you to satisfied clients throughout the country. We have Cars that have been taken as part payment for larger Cars of later models, and some that are portions of assigned estates. Write to us, stating the class of Car you want, and we will forward particulars of the Car we would recommend for your purpose if we have one that would suit you. Should you purchase a larger Car or a New Car, we would take your small Car at part payment. We have Cars we can sell on terms. Assistance given to purchasers, who will also be taught to drive. THE RED CROSS MOVEMENT.

The war news this week gives a thrill of more than perhaps intrinsic importance to Lady Helen Munro Ferguson's address on the Red Cross Society, at St. Mark's schoolroom, on Monday afternoon. It was a coincidence that this new idea, of which her Excellency gave such a clear and explicit account, should have seized upon us just as the war cloud is about to burst over Europe.

The importance of the Red Cross Society is recognised everywhere now, and though it is frowned upon to a certain extent by those who wish to abolish war altogether, yet, as Lady Helen showed, the movement of scientifically caring for the wounded after battle, and for those who fall sick of any of the dreadful illnesses which war invariably brings with it, is but an outcome of the peace spirit, now hoped for by humanitarians. War is as old an institution as mankind itself, while organised nursing dates only from the Geneva Conference, called together after the battle of Solferino, well within a hundred years ago. It was then that the Red Cross Society came into existence, and it has been growing ever since.

Speaking to ambulance workers solely, Lady Helen urged, first of all, combination; secondly, training, and thirdly, organisation. The St. John Ambulance and this new ambulance society should unite, she advised, thereby showing that the great importance of doing things on a big scale is not lost on the wife of our new Governor-General, who has evidently studied well the conditions of this new country, for she urged that a national and all-embracing system of ambulance training for women would be the completion and corollary of the splendid universal military training for boys. The one point of difference is this: The military training is compulsory, while all the Red Cross workers should be volunteers, as they are in Great Britain.

That trite old platitude which the Latin Grammar used to instil, among other bits of wisdom—"If you wish for peace, prepare for war"—has, like most time-worn and threadbare saws, a knack of conveying sound advice. Even the diplomats who sit (or are popularly supposed to sit) like doctors with their fingers on the pulse of Europe, are "dismayed," we read, at this latest outbreak. War always seems to come as a surprise. War—modern war—has now a place for women, and that place is to be found in the nursing department. In this instance, woman has acted up to the best traditions of the sex, and it is most interesting to note how the modern spirit has need of woman in her capacity as the good old-fashioned "ministering angel," a role sometimes taken in too much of a preaching and unnecessarily goody goody vein, but yet one that has been shown to have, by that extremely prosaic body, the British War Office, an aspect of real national utility.

Lady Helen in her speech described succinctly how the whole of Great Britain has been charted out into Red Cross districts, since the authorities called in the assistance of the society to work in conjunction with the second line of defence. Training and drilling are carried on, because the best of individual training loses half its effect when it is not organised into a body of workers all accustomed to do things in common. Quite isolated ambulance classes dotted here and there throughout the Commonwealth can do but little compared with what could be effected by the same workers brought into line, and all training and organising under the authority of the Commonwealth Defence Department. Ambulance nursing should, like military training, be nationalised.

AN APOSTLE OF PEACE.

A great figure passed out of this life on June 21 in the person of the Baroness Bertha von Suttner, the well-known author of "Lay Down Your Arms," who was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize, who was president of the Austrian Peace Society, and a member of the Advisory Council of the Carnegie Peace Foundation. She was 71 years of age, and her life was a romantic story of struggle and success.

A few years ago a widely-read German newspaper asked its readers who was the best-known woman of the day, and she who received the most votes was the Baroness Bertha von Suttner. By a strange chain of circumstances she became the most influential pacifist of Europe, and she was the daughter of a soldier.

Her father died when she was two years old, says the London "Daily Telegraph," and her mother gambled away the family fortune, instigated thereto by a belief in clairvoyance. Bertha had more than one disappointment in love, and at length, to earn her living, the Baroness accepted a position in the household of the Von Suttners, and there she and the young baron fell in love, but her family and his would not hear of a marriage. As a consequence, answering an advertisement she became the secretary of M. Alfred Nobel, the rich inventor of dynamite and blasting gelatine. Unrelenting, she finally braved the displeasure of her family, and married Baron Arthur Gunduccar von Suttner. Miserably poor, they spent several years in the Caucasus, with difficulty providing bread for the day, but intent on ideals for the betterment of society. At last the Suttners gave way, and the young Baron and his wife came back to the family seat at Harmanstadt.

Strangely enough, though Baroness Bertha's husband had been a war correspondent, and she had lived through the horrors of 1848, and the Austro-Prussian War of 1866, and the Franco-German campaign of 1870-71, it was not these events that made her a missionary of peace. As a nurse she had seen the tragedies of the battlefield, but it was as an author she developed into a peace apostle. She had written some novels, which did not attract much attention, and in 1890 she turned her pen avowedly on the follies and crimes and terrors of war in the style of a novel, bearing the title "Die Waffen Nieder" (Lay Down Your Arms).

It was a marvellous success, yet her publishers at first refused to print it. It took like "Uncle Tom's Cabin." Everybody was reading this woman's view of war; all the newspapers were reviewing it; and in military Germany a popular edition of a quarter of a million copies was soon disposed of; and last year there had been fifty editions of the work, which was still in demand. And now it has been translated into every European language, and some others.

The Baroness made three illustrious converts—first herself, next M. Nobel, and thirdly the Czar. She planned her wonderful book after reading the history of wars, the documents of the Red Cross Society, and, above all, Florence Nightingale's experiences, with a purely literary purpose. Its success converted her into a pacifist; thereafter she saw no work for herself but as an apostle of peace. M. Nobel was at first sceptical, but in the end he came round to her view, and devoted one of his five great annual prizes—worth about £8000 each—to the cause of peace. He had, it is said, the Baroness in view, and in 1905 she was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize. It is claimed that the Czar of Russia, was also her convert. Count Mouravieff, the author of his Majesty's message suggesting the Hague conference, told the Baroness that the idea had occurred to the Czar of all the Russias after reading her famous novel!

From that time onwards the Baroness had given herself up to the great theme of disarmament, arbitration, and peace, and she had been of late much occupied with the preparations for the world's Peace conference, which is to take place in September.

FASHION AS SHE IS.

In the very latest models, especially where the question of the evening toilette is concerned, there are many charming effects. Some of the newest models are of a very fussy and quaint nature indeed. In most instances they are attractive. The colours and textures of the materials are really exquisite. In fact, the colour combination is one of the distinctive features, where our evening frock is in question. The materials or fabrics may be seen in silk crepes, broche silk, taffeta, moire, and fascinating tissues. Lace and tulle is also a factor with the latest evening toilette. They add to the flimsy-like beauty of the garment. I also noticed gorgeous embroideries forming a part of the decorations. The picturesque style is quite the vogue. The long tunic skirt, the ballet skirt effect, the skirt of Oriental persuasion, the gathered Persian skirt, the be-flounced skirt, all these designs are seen in the new models. Many of the skirts are carried out on most elaborate lines. In some instances the back drapery is bunched up in the latest fashion, and finished with a tail-like wisp. The princess effect may be noticed in other instances. The gown shows the new extra width at the hips, giving a slim effect below. The panier and cross-way skirt is suggested by the drapery. Lace frills or flounces may be noticed in some instances, forming paniers on either side of the skirt. The double-flounced tunic, edged with lace, is a very pretty idea for a young girl.

The evening corsage or bodice is of the flimsiest kind. It still retains its transparency and simplicity of line. In fact, it looks like "little nothings." The soft, flimsy lace, chiffon, and ninon bodices have all the appearance of having been blown together. The back of the bodice is, in most instances, cut very low, in some of the latest schemes, it may be seen carried down to the waist in a point. In fact, some of the bodices are made with hardly any back, so to speak. The sleeves are transparent; in some instances they are fashioned in the "wing" style. Some of the stones and beautiful embroideries decorating these evening bodices help to make them sufficiently important.

A fascinating example was seen in a deep azalea pink silk taffeta. The skirt was wonderfully draped, showing the peg-top effect on one side only. The taffeta was brought up in points over the bodice. The latter was fashioned of the flimsiest ivory-coloured lace. It was cut low at the back. The belt formed a swathing round the waist; it was carried out in a most becoming purple broche.

A simpler gown, but at the same time just as attractive as a more elaborate garment, was seen in a delicate ivory-coloured ninon. The skirt was composed of five deep flounces; they were arranged one over the other. The bodice was of the softest ivory taffeta combined with the ninon. The taffeta was cut up into handkerchief points over the ninon under-bodice. These points were held in place by single strings of pearls, brought over the shoulders. The transparent sleeves were "wing" shaped and very short. The belt was draped and carried out in the taffeta. A large bunch of differently-coloured velvet pansies thrust into the belt gave a delightful touch of colour to this simple and charming gown.

Black and white is always wonderfully effective, especially where the evening gown is in question. It may be seen, fashioned of white lace with black tulle, or black lace with white tulle, or it may be carried out in black and white lace. A becoming gown was noticed in soft white silk taffeta. The skirt was slightly "bunched," and decorated with two lightly-wired frills of black tulle. The bodice was carried out in soft white ninon, showing touches of the black tulle. A fascinating draped belt of a most becoming "verdigris" green coloured silk moire was finished with a large butterfly bow at the back.

The latest evening wrap or cloak shows the "wire" effect. This wrap is to be worn with the very latest models, especially the "fussy" evening gowns. A quaint-looking model was carried out in a lovely damask silk showing touches of purple. It was lined with soft black panne. A border of black fox helped to decorate the neck, sleeves, and hem of the wrap. The "wired" effect was one of the conspicuous points about this new cloak. It certainly looked somewhat "outre," but at the same time it retained its fascinations.

We are to see the little shadow lace capes. It is really quite a charming addition to an evening toilette, especially to a low-cut bodice, forming a helpful article when the bodice is conspicuous for the absence of sleeves. This little cape is slightly draped at either side, and can be drawn forward.

Another new idea is the introduction of the little train. It is arranged in stiff pleats, and is quite separate from the gown. It is brought from either side of the back.

There is still a craze for beads among the accessories. They will be made in all kinds of shapes and colours, in most instances matching the colour of the gown. Among the newest are the "Galalith" beads. They look very like ivory, and are most effective. They will help to decorate some of the newest models. Other kinds are the beads of amber, amethyst, pearls, etc. In some instances the beads form the fastenings of the blouse. A novel idea is to have beads strung together to form tunics, and ends of sashes are weighed down with long tassels of them.

Jet will also play a part in the world of stones. It will be noticeable in some of our millinery.

• • • • •

The blouses of the present moment are charmingly pretty. Some of them are very dressy indeed. The transparent kind, worn over different colours, are specially so. In some instances they are decorated with a basque, or kilted flounce. There are most attractive designs seen in soft clinging materials. The cross-over style is still in evidence. Blouses made of ribbon in every variety are also popular. Among the many delightful blouses, a model of mandarine-blue cachemire-de-soie was noticeable. The collar was carried out in the Medici style. The design of the blouse was simple and pretty. The blouse was fastened by silver buttons, looped together with tiny silver cords. The usual pouchiness was seen in this blouse.

Another delightful example was fashioned of a most becoming pale champagne-coloured charmeuse. The blouse was fastened with one large button in front. It was made very simply, with hemstitched tucks. A narrow "Cosway" blue sash was threaded through the tucks, and tied carelessly in a bow in front. The collar was turned back, and was somewhat wide, showing points on either side. Champagne-coloured tulle, showing touches of embroidered tiny rosebuds, fell over the collar. The sleeves were long, and were finished with ruffles of the tulle.

MAISIE.

Woman suffrage is to be extended in Denmark by a constitutional amendment bill, which passed the Lower House of the Danish Parliament on June 9. Dr. Georg Brandes, the famous Danish scholar and critic, when interviewed as to this in America, said:—"In my own country women have already obtained a large share of suffrage, and all without any passion, without any heat or any disturbance. My brother was one of the Ministry that conferred the franchise upon them. It was not easy at first when the idea of woman suffrage began to take hold in Denmark. Forty years ago I translated John Stuart Mill's 'Subjection of Women' into Danish, and none of the papers would review the book, for they feared it would incite wives to revolt against their husbands." Dr. Brandes says that woman suffrage in Denmark has not made any great change in politics, but that it has had a markedly good effect upon the women.

GIRLS' HOCKEY.

Every sport has its literature, but the hockey field has rarely been made a butt for the humorist, which is more surprising as that area has long been invaded by women. For a man, mixed hockey is one of the most dangerous of games; for while he feels a strict observance of all the rules of chivalry to be incumbent upon him, his fair antagonists have not the slightest compunction in making the very most of all the privileges of their sex. Even in these enlightened days hockey is regarded with horror by various Early Victorian relatives. The short skirts, and the habit of calling members of the team Smith, Brown, or Robinson, rather than Dorothea, Elaine, or Rosemary, are considered "unladylike," for such things were never done "when I was a girl."

Though the hockey girl is a distinct type, there are many variations, and to make up a team one wants, or, perhaps, has to accept all sorts and conditions. There is the "captain's aid," the girl who knows exactly how each stroke might possibly be made a goal, and who, instead of miser-like hoarding her knowledge for her own use, scatters it broadcast round her for all and sundry, until the ball is at her feet, when she gaily swipes, to the captain's agonised cry: "Not across your goal, Jones." Sometimes a girl regards hockey as a substitute for antipon, one has to let her play back, for she is inclined to be a little top-heavy, and when charging madly at the place where the ball was five seconds before is rather apt to measure her length on the ground. Still, she is useful, if she happens to fall on the enemy's centre-forward.

They say that no sport can really grip its devotees unless there is a spice of danger in it; and the fact that one rushes about the field in imminent danger of having one's front teeth knocked out by a high ball, or one's nose made most unornamental by some one disregarding the rule about "sticks," adds tremendously to its fascination for the majority, though there does exist the "pretty" player, who is not to be really relied upon to attack a very violent forward, because she cannot forget how "rotten" it would be to be quite, quite plain.

But the sort of girl whom one considers to be the genuine hockey girl is a delightful person—a real sport, in the best sense of the word, and an enthusiast; for there can be no question, as to the fascinations of the game. Taken as a crowd, hockey girls are most sociable, for the nature of the game makes for esprit de corps. There is very little room for individual brilliance, every one is responsible, and combination must be the great aim of every team. This has been very forcibly shown us by our English visitors, who, though they are carrying off the palm of victory every time, will, we hope, take home with them as well some most satisfactory impressions of our sporting characteristics.

A HOCKEY GIRL.

NEW IDEAS FOR EVENING GOWNS.

TO PROTECT THE TENANT.

In a recent lecture to the Health Society a medical man, speaking on the "Dreadful D's," advised tenants of houses whose owners refused to do the necessary repairs, to notify the local authority, and so have things remedied by legal action if necessary.

But, unfortunately, the result of such notification is generally fatal to the tenant, for a landlord who will refuse to do repairs absolutely necessary to health, is so resentful when forced to do so by law that he is apt to wreak his spite on the only victim available, the unfortunate tenant, who forthwith receives the shortest alowable notice to quit the house. And, in these days when, as everyone knows, one has frequently to pay for the privilege of getting a house, it is such a serious matter that the tenant will often endure all sorts of evils rather than run the risk of losing his home.

It is a difficult matter to remedy, as there is nothing to prove that the tenant is being ejected for spite, for the landlord can quite easily declare that he wants the house for other purposes, and, of course, his property is his own to use as he likes.

The only solution seems to be to make a periodical inspection compulsory. If there were health officers whose duty it was to inspect every dwelling in their district at least once a quarter, if not once a month, they would at once detect anything detrimental to public or private health, and would notify the owners. Then, if the repairs were not carried out within a given time, the Board of Health would take legal action, and so the whole thing would be arranged without the possibility of the tenant being implicated in the notification, as he would have no say in the matter one way or the other. It seems to me that if an arrangement of this sort were brought about it would help to lessen the present unhealthy surroundings in which some people live.

EUNELLA.

WANTED, A JUVENILE EMPLOYMENT BUREAU.

The idea responsible for the formation of the Government Labour Bureau for men has now again taken shape in the establishment of a "Labour Agency for Women," recently opened in George-street North, and administered by the same department, with a manageress and sub-manageress in charge of the detailed work, and the placing of women in suitable employment as far as possible. According to the first report, recently issued, it has met with success. So far, the domestic problem has been mostly dealt with, though quite a fair proportion of other women workers have been placed. Both these institutions, which are doing much to solve the essentials of the labour problem, are working on a basis of well-thought-out methods, dealing with adult workers, the ideal being the prevention of "round pegs" being placed in "square holes." In this age of specialisation it is not out of place to enter a plea for the correct placing of juvenile workers, both boys and girls.

Yearly departmental reports record a large percentage of young people who leave school presumably to go to work, whilst many cannot be traced, especially girls. It is supposed that the girls remain at home to take up domestic duties.

Many parents hold the opinion that a spell at home after the strain of school life makes for the benefit of boys and girls. As far as boys are concerned, it merely lays the first brick in the foundation of idleness, and an aimless and often injurious habit of hanging round street corners, or loafing in public parks, where more than often undesirable companions are made. If girls are kept at home to learn domestic duties, and become real helps to overworked mothers, then the spell at home is fruitful of benefits to both parents and girls; but how many really do this? These spells at home are apt to be long enough to act injuriously, both mentally and physically, on the boys. The apathy of parents by not coming into closer touch with school life keeps teachers in ignorance of what employment the pupils wish to enter on leaving school. Thus children grow up without any settled idea as to their future activities. Educational reform has moved along lines of assisting the children, but is too recent to give much present help to the numbers who will soon be leaving school, 14 years of age.

Head teachers do much for these youngsters by sending them to local manufacturers, who are constantly applying to the head of the State schools of their districts.

But there trouble often arises, through children being sent to unsuitable work. The juvenile employees leave, they do not as a rule return to school, and thus often drift into some other labours which also may be distasteful. Again they leave, and so acquire the habit of drifting, which may easily become a fatal defect if uneradicated. This is how our unskilled workers form already too large an army.

Now, the establishment of an employment bureau for juveniles would very largely obviate the delays in placing boys and girls in suitable employments. The bureau could be worked by the same department which controls the two already in existence. The expense incurred would be small.

Australians seldom want for precedents when good is to be gained by the individuals and the State; but precedents and examples can be given with reference to these labour bureaus, for they have been in existence in America and Great Britain for the past few years, and most encouraging results are recorded. Only experts are in control—those who can mould the child mind and have deep sympathy with children, and are competent to direct children's activities into proper channels of labour.

Head teachers give hearty co-operation, by supplying names and addresses of children about to leave school, also sending along a report of the child's school career and general capabilities. The bureau gets into touch with the parent, and invites parent and children to call. The bureau offers advice, and helps as far as possible, by encouraging the children to talk (instead of the parents) about their particular bents as to trades, callings, or professions. It is then pointed out to the parents what the children are capable of doing, and the names are registered. Employers are notified, and they gladly assist the bureau in successfully placing the child. The bureau induces the children to take up skilled employments, and uses every effort towards attendance at evening classes and continuation schools.

In the Juvenile Labour Exchange at Stockport, Mr. Bell, B.A., in charge, speaks in most encouraging terms of the results. In less than a year 800 parents had brought their children to be registered.

PYTHIA.

AN ARGUMENT WITH A SUFFRAGIST.

MRS. BAYNTON'S EXPERIENCE.

Getting a new angle of vision on any topic of live interest is always worth while. Though the suffragists and their vagaries become rather tiresome at times, yet put in another light, such as Mrs. Baynton, a well-known Sydney novelist now visiting us, can throw, quite a different impression is given from that usually accepted.

"The last thing in the world that the militants want is the vote," was the somewhat startling assertion made by Mrs. Baynton, when asked the usual question, "What do you think of votes for women?"

"Why? you ask. Well, if they get it their occupation will be gone. Militancy is a regular business now; girls 'go in' for it as if it were a trade. Huge funds are behind the movement. Women are professionally employed to get into the fighting line and keep the cause well in the public eye. For myself, I am an 'anti' through and through, and consider that women only make a mess of things when they touch public life."

Asked if she had come into personal contact with any of the militants—

"I saw a scrimmage one day," replied Mrs. Baynton. "A militant clawed a policeman's face until the blood was streaming from it. The friend with me (Mr. V. H. Rendall, editor of the 'Athenaeum') handed the policeman his handkerchief to staunch the bleeding. The man had been using his authority to rescue the woman from the mob, and that was his reward. She was too much excited to know what she was doing.

"With Lady Constance Lytton who, you know, as 'Jane Waring,' was imprisoned, and afterwards wrote a book on her experiences I had an argument one day, at Mrs. Henry Agnew's house. Lady Constance is a very rapid talker. She was most fluent, and kept repeating the same statements, until I reminded her that assertion is not argument. Which of us got the better of the debate? Well, that is not for me to say."

MELBOURNE NOTES.

In connection with the reception which is to be tendered by the Governor-General and Lady Helen Munro Ferguson to the members of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, no fewer than 3000 invitations are to be issued. The visitors are now on their way to the Commonwealth, and are expected to arrive in Melbourne by special train from Adelaide on August 12. The reception will take place at Government House on the same evening. There are about 300 distinguished visitors. Madame Melba is to contribute to the musical programme. Only the British visitors will be formally presented to Sir Ronald and Lady Helen, the ceremony of shaking hands with 3000 guests being considered impracticable.

At the last meeting of members of the Lyceum Club it was decided to make the visiting women scientists honorary members of the club during their stay in Melbourne. A sub-committee was formed to arrange a social entertainment in their honour.

In a letter to the press, Lady Stanley has identified herself with the appeal for funds to complete the Home for Mentally Defective, Aged, and Infirm Deaf and Dumb Women. Sir Arthur Stanley, in expressing sympathy with the movement, stated that "a society of this character is most deserving of the support of the more fortunate. It is doing God's work."

Mrs. M. E. Henderson, governor of the Women's Penitentiary at Pentridge, who will complete her 65th year early in September (and thus reach the retiring age), is to be retained in the State service for six months longer.

Miss Mollie Carew returned to Melbourne last week, after an absence of twelve months in Britain. She is well and favourably known on the public platform. With Miss Daisy Gove, of Essendon, she has enjoyed a series of good engagements at the English music halls. Miss Carew returns to England in March to marry.

Miss Jean Wilson, an organiser and member of the women's executive of the Liberal party, was recently presented with a travelling case and rug at an at home given by the president (Mr. Herbert Brookes) and Mrs. Brookes. Miss Wilson is leaving Melbourne to take up an appointment in India.

Miss Nina Brentnall, B.A., the representative of the Worlds' Student Christian Federation in India, who has been on a visit to Melbourne, has left again for Sydney. Miss Brentnall intends to go on to Brisbane and Hobart before returning to the scene of her labour in Calcutta. This lady has been making a tour of Australia and New Zealand in connection with the movement in Australia to settle University women in missionary work, and also with the foreign department of the Young Women's Christian Association.

VERONICA.

PUCK'S GIRDLE.

I'll put a girdle round about the earth in forty minutes.—Midsummer Night's Dream.

Miss Myrtle Meggy, the Sydney pianiste, who is settled in London, gave a very successful "at home" on June 6, assisted by her friend, Mrs. McLachlan, at their rooms in Earl's Court. There were 70 people present, including Madame Albani, who has been very kind to Miss Meggy ever since her Australian and Indian tour; Mr. Gye; Mr. Moscheles, the artist, musician, and linguist; three Australians (Mrs. Chambers, Miss Alice Bryant, and Miss Jourdain); and a number of artists (Miss May Huxley, Miss Arnold, Messrs. Cecil Baum, Hugh Langton, and Tosh), who, with the hostess, provided the musical part of the programme. Friends came from as far as Liverpool. Miss Meggy has been asked by the committee of the Manx Musical Festival to be one of the adjudicators next year, and to play at the final concert. This year Sir Edward Elgar and Professor Granville Bantock were the adjudicators. There were 3000 competitors, and the festival lasted three days.

"Nithyk" writes:—"I have recently come from Capetown, where trees are appreciated and planted everywhere in all the suburbs, rows of them, avenues of them. In Mowbray, where I lived, every road had its trees each side, many of them Australian wattles, which are greatly admired for their golden beauty, and cherished and cared for. Many of the old towns in South Africa are conspicuously beautiful on account of their trees—Stellenbosch in particular. Planted by the early Dutch settlers more than two hundred years ago, there they stand to-day in unmolested security. Grand old oaks of enormous size, lofty, straight, noble. They grow on each side of the main roads, and afford welcome shade. They also "make a mess," if one can call a carpet of acorns a mess, but early in the morning the acorns are swept up. It was this subdued musical sweep, sweep which greeted my ears the first morning I woke up there, and looking out of the hotel window I saw a number of men along the road sweeping and gathering up the acorns."

Miss Alice Brown has won the £2000 prize offered by a Boston publisher for the best play by an American author. There were 1646 manuscripts submitted, including plays by many of the country's ablest dramatists. Miss Brown has been known as a writer of novels, and especially of delightful short stories of New England life. Her first book, "Meadow Grass," brought her prompt recognition. She is the author of a volume of poems and another of essays of travel. She has written some one-act plays. The prize drama, "Children of Earth," is a simple play of humble life and of purely human interest.

Queen Alexandra bought a beautiful lace scarf at the recent exhibition held by the Home Arts and Industries' Association in the Royal Albert Hall. This choice is certain to increase the appreciation of such scarfs which are always more or less in vogue, and this year are more fashionable than ever.

Lace is a necessary nowadays. Women consider it essential in the Medici collar. There are whole fichus made of it, as well as those composed of net, but outlined with a wide edging of lace. Capes of lace and capes made of taffeta, with flat flounces of lace, are amongst the novelties of the season, and the woman who wears one of these articles of attire may either utilise wonderful pieces of real point or other rare needlecraft, or she may have her whole wrap in modern reproduction.

An active disturber of the market for nurses in America is Miss Jane Lelano, head of the Red Cross nurses, many of whom were ordered to Mexico. She is a graduate of Bellevue Hospital, New York, and serves in the position of chief nurse, without payment. One of the "prizes" of the nursing profession having thus fallen to an "amateur," other nurses are naturally aggrieved that somebody who really needed the salary was not appointed in her place.

For twenty-five years Miss Susannah Usher has made a study of what is known as household economic work, as a food expert, and she is firmly of the opinion that the home will soon be freed of hampering domestic details, and that the housekeeping machinery and executive details will be removed to quarters properly equipped, and with the talent trained to manage them on a large scale.

"A thousand times, and probably 1000 years ago, it has been demonstrated that food can be as well, or better, prepared in large as in small quantities, but the prejudice in favour of 'home cooking' persists, ruling this and other lands with a despotism often characterised by dyspeptic details, and always marked by waste—of money, of food values, and, worst of all, of women's time.

"If the laundry cleansed, starched, and ironed dress, shirt or stocking has not wrecked the sacred integrity of the home, why should we be so fearful that the restaurant-cooked chop or steak or cabbage head will destroy it?" asks Miss Usher.

"Men can no longer run the little individual shops and make them pay; soon we shall discover that women cannot run the little individual kitchens and make them pay."

TRAM TICKETS VERSUS TIDINESS.

The above might fairly be adopted as the war cry of the newly formed Citizens' Association for the first line of defence, which the women who form the association have adopted in the crusade against an untidy and dirty city, is to throw tram tickets into their proper receptacles, or else to secrete them in handbags and destroy them at home. This is surely a very little thing upon the due performance of which to found a society, with president, vice-president, and all the machinery of a full-fledged council. But little things are important. The celebrated case of the cure of Naaman the Syrian will occur in this connection. That general was annoyed because he was asked only to do "a little thing;" he would have far preferred doing something that would bring him more into the Syrian equivalent for the limelight. But the "little thing" cured him.

If little things like tram tickets did not litter our streets, those streets would be much neater and less forlornly uncared for than they appear at this moment. Therefore, if the new association can do this much, it will not have lived in vain. The future perfect tense of this assertion is somewhat ominous, as there have been others in the field. Taken in connection with the fact that 15s, the last remains of the defunct Civic League, was handed in to swell the funds of the Citizens' Association, it is even a little pathetic. But the satisfactory feeling remains that good work is never lost. The Civic League, a primrose that faded timelessly because it could not bear the full glare of the light of publicity, belonged to the "Grey Company" before the Pioneers that Jessie Mackay sings so spiritedly.

Wiser than the Civic League, the Citizens' Association is courting publicity as much as possible, and is keenly anxious that everybody should know that its members are "out" to combat insanitary conditions and dreary untidiness in our city. This association is almost bound to be a success, for the simple reason that sanitation is the fashion. The middle class woman, who used to taboo all such subjects as not nice, has now quite changed her point of view. In that very wordy play, "Misalliance," Bernard Shaw puts into the mouth of Mrs. Tarleton, the wife of the rich linen draper, an amusing account of her horror and consternation on the first time that she was in the company of "The Aristocracy," and found the Countesses were all talking about drains.

THE CHURCH RESCUE HOMES.

Lady Helen Munro Ferguson was very much interested in what she saw on her recent visit to the Church of England Rescue Homes at the Glebe, which consist of three houses, detached from each other, and each in its own ground. There are at present 140 inmates, divided, according to age, between Strathmore, for women, Tress-Manning, for girls from 14 to 16 years of age, and Avona, where girls between 3 and 14 years are cared for. These homes are mainly self-supporting, and the laundry work done at Strathmore by the women is responsible for this state of affairs, as the laundry is a most flourishing enterprise. Public subscriptions added to the returns from the sale of the lace made by the girls help to keep the charity going, as there is neither a Government subsidy nor an invested fund to fall back upon.

The cheerful courage with which the committee face their hand-to-mouth existence is really admirable. Not only are they full of "cheerful yesterdays," but "confident tomorrows" are also in their plan. For now they are contemplating getting together a country home for the little girls. The committee, of whom Mrs. J. C. Wright is president, object to "Home" when spelled with a capital H. Written down as "a home," an institution takes on an intimate air which the other way lacks. "A country home" is what the committee are looking for. Mrs. Hare, of Woolwich, wife of the Permanent Under-Secretary for Lands, is the hon. secretary of this movement, and her heart is in it.

To get the children out of the slums and into the country ways and the country life is the sensible object these ladies have in view. The girls come in to Avona when quite young. They come from the city to which they belong, and to renovate and recuperate the young lives, that most beneficent doctor, a change of air, would be the most helpful agent. The committee feel themselves often baffled in their aims, because they cannot obtain this for the girls. The delights which children always have found, and always will find for themselves in a country visit need not be written down in cold print. Everybody knows exactly what is implied in the words. If the money were forthcoming the committee would set about getting such a home, but they cannot start until they have something in hand towards the purchase of a cottage. Children require plenty of space to play in. They can make a paradise of their own out of a few acres of paddock or bush and the merest trickle of a creek. Apathy in grown-up folk results from a monotonous and too restricted childhood. Therefore the committee's modest appeal for money, though such appeals grow rather insistent at times, should surely meet with a response.

ARTS AND CRAFTS.

Our London correspondent, under date June 19, writes:—

This is not what one calls an industrious time of year. It is too warm, and there are many other things than work at the moment to claim the more amateur; professional workers know no close time. Students of art needlework carry their material about with them and while away spare hours by trying new designs, copying new flowers, and trying new stitches in lace crochet or white embroidery. If you look round the lounges at foreign hotels or in any of the seaside shelters on our side of the channel you will find the majority of women do crochet. It is quite extraordinary how popular this work has become, and at the same time how much more artistic it is. It is principally the filet species of this work that attracts workers. It is so handsome when done, and wears so well, that I am not surprised. I often wonder women do not devote more time to the making of crochet squares in filet crochet, and combine them with squares of broderie Anglaise and Richelieu work. It would be a happy combination and look as well when done as some of the elaborate pieces of white linen work one sees in French houses. None of these things are difficult; it is only the initiative that is wanting. If a crochet expert could sit down quietly for a few hours a day or two before she goes away for her holiday, and make a plan of her work she might achieve great results instead of feebly going back on to old lines. I grant you it is not easy to get really good patterns for artistic squares. Few women can afford the time or will subject their eyesight to the strain of trying to crochet a square from a filet pattern. Of course that is the inspiration of the whole scheme.

CROCHET DESIGNS.

I shall be spending my own holiday at a seaside place in Normandy, possibly Fecamp, which has certain charms of its own, besides being the place where the Benedictine liqueur is made. I am contemplating using some squares of white embroidery I have done in combination with squares of crochet, and if I cannot get a decent design before I start I shall simply make plain squares of crochet in little squares of treble and plain crochet, four plain to one treble. Anyhow, one would soon find out the relative size the little squares' holes would run to. On each square, right in the centre, I would put a crochet medallion, sewn right on to the groundwork, and join them and the linen squares with some narrow Cluny lace. The linen squares need only be rolled at the edges, not hemstitched. When the requisite number are put together the work could be bordered by either Cluny lace or a crochet border. French workers often mix their laces and embroideries in this manner. You can now get charming patterns for all kinds of white linen work, and Richelieu is getting to be much liked here.

LINEN WORK.

One mistake, as I think, is made here by the purveyors of traced designs to the embroidery shops, in the tracing on too loose a quality of linen. It should always have a firm texture. For this reason I do advise old bleach, or any of the loosely woven linens. It looks better done on fine Irish or firm French linen, which does not fray or stretch when the button-holing has to be done. Broderie Anglaise is not quite so difficult as regards its material. For drawn thread work, of course, the old bleach has no rival, and it is the very thing for those laces, like the Greek, which are worked on the threads of the material itself. Macrame lace, too, is much in fashion again. It is set out by Lindhorst, the great Berlin designer, in fascinating shades of grey and unbleached threads. Coarse threads are sold with it, matching the material in colour. These things are delightful made up into small cushion covers for lounges or libraries. Then, again, there is the Hungarian crochet, which looks exactly like coarse Venetian lace when done and goes so quickly that it ought to find space in every woman's holiday crochet satchel.

HOLIDAY LACE-MAKING.

Crochet, after all, is an easy thing to carry, and to fill up odd moments it has no equal. If it has ever been your lot to sit at a long table at a foreign hotel with some sixty or seventy people during the long pauses between the courses you will understand why German women always come to table d'hote with their workbags, and do embroidery of some sort or other until the garcon or the Lokkner kellner comes to their portion of the table. I know no more dreary function. I was once at an hotel in Knocke, Belgium, where it took two hours to serve dejeuner, or dinner. There a friend of mine used to do elaborate Carrick macross lace at table, and got through quite a lot of her flouncing while I was at the hotel. My daughter and I stuck it out for a few days, and left for Heyst-sur-mere, where we were lucky enough to get rooms in a small hotel which served one's meals on the terrace, right on the Digue, out of doors, at small tables—a very much better thing, as each guest was served right on the spot, without the tedium of waiting for one's turn amid so many people. I hark back to the small squares of linen and lace just to add that they are useful pieces of work to take away from home.

3 Well-known Ladies Give Their Opinions in a few words——

SISTER SYBIL MAUDE, St. Saviour's Home, Shirley, Christchurch, N.Z., writes:

22nd January, 1911.

1 "This institution for orphan children is supported by voluntary contributions, and I thought as we have several children whose mothers have died of consumption we must keep them in health, and are advised to use your Emulsion." I have heard from more than one reliable source that your make is preferable to others."

3rd February, 1911

"The box of your Emulsion was duly forwarded to us. I shall always recommend it. I did so to-day for a child and shall hope to do so many times yet."

SISTER MARY, of the Presbyterian Social Service Association, Dunedin, writes:

27th October, 1910

2 "Lane's Emulsion has been most beneficial to a number of the little children who came to us suffering from various chest complaints. Your Emulsion has had much to do with the exceptionally good health of the children during the past winter. We use practically nothing else for colds or coughs."

SISTER AGNES, of the Presbyterian Children's Home, Christchurch, N.Z., writes:

3 "I am deeply grateful for Lane's Emulsion which means the building up of little bodies, who might without this valuable medicine, have too hard a fight against disease. Lane's Emulsion will save many a sleepless night for the children and attendants."

Don't neglect a Simple Cough or Cold——

It is a serious mistake to do so. It is such a short step to chronic disease—to Asthma, Bronchitis, Catarrh or Consumption.

Be well advised and act promptly. Lane's Emulsion will give you almost immediate relief, and if instructions are faithfully followed it will cure you.

The Ingredients of

They are pure Norwegian Cod Liver Oil, to restore the wasted and weakened body; Beechwood Creasote, a stomachic healing factor and germicide that keeps the whole system free from health-destroying bacteria; Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda to construct muscle, nerve and ligament, and fresh eggs to act as an emulsifying agent and nourisher of the body.

These constituents repair worn tissues and check natural decline, tone up the digestive organs, aid assimilation, make rich red blood and strengthen every organ. Its medicinal virtues and curative powers give renewed health and strength, steady nerves and a clear head, an elastic step and a buoyant spirit. Thousands gratefully recommend it. Doctors prescribe it and also use it for the members of their own households. It is pleasant to take and children like it.

Just get a bottle of Lane's Emulsion to-day. It will not fail you. All chemists and stores stock it. Do not be deceived into accepting a substitute—get what you ask for. Price 2/6 and 4/6 per bottle at all chemists and stores. The large bottle is the most economical as it contains more than two of the small ones. If not obtainable locally write direct to E. G. LANE, Box 864, G.P.O., SYDNEY, and we will see that you are at once supplied.

Lane's Emulsion is manufactured by E. G. LANE, Chemist, Oamaru, N.Z.

SNOW SPORTS.

SKI-RUNNING AT MOUNT KOSCIUSKO.

CROSS-COUNTRY RACE.

The Kosciusko Alpine Club held its first annual cross-country handicap race on Saturday afternoon, which was witnessed with keen interest by a very large number of members and visitors.

The course was five miles, and was excellently chosen and flagged by Major E. Head, with the assistance of Mr. F. B. Moulden.

The starting point was at the Stock Yards, three miles from, and 700ft above, the hotel, extending west across the Plains of Heaven, thence to the top of Piper's Ridge, descending with three zig-zags back to the Stock Yards, down the Du Ferries Run, up to Dainer's Gap, down the valley, then rising to the road which was followed to the Kerry course, and then descended to the golf links, the winning post being at the bridge near the hotel.

After lunch the eight competitors skied from the hotel to the starting point. After a short rest the signal to go was given by Major E. Head at 3.15. The run and climb to the summit of the first ridge were negotiated with only one fall, but on the long run down several occurred.

The following members competed:—Dr. H. Schlink, R. J. Furley, J. E. Toole, H. A. Montefiore, P. W. Pearson, C. Minter, Dr. H. Shorney, E. C. Schofield. An exciting and strenuous race resulted in C. Minter being first, J. E. Toole second, and R. Furley and H. Montefiore tying for third place. The winner's time was 40 minutes, a very good performance considering the conditions. All the competitors covered the full course. Mr. W. M. Vindin and Dr. H. J. Marks acted as judges; J. Jacobsen, referee; Major E. Head and A. J. Usher, timekeepers; and A. Pitt, C. Maclurcan, F. B. Moulden, C. W. Rowe, W. G. Goodman, and F. Shackleton, as clerks of the course.

The snow was a little soft, and in some places "balling," which prevented fast speeds being attained. The results, however, were very satisfactory.

The race to the summit will take place on Tuesday next.

BANK OF COMMERCE.

ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual meeting of the Australian Bank of Commerce was held yesterday.

Sir William P. Manning, who presided, in moving the adoption of the report and balance-sheet, particulars of which have already been published, said that in considering the balance-sheet the most satisfactory comparison to make was with the figures of a year, rather than with those of six months ago; as the former was the more likely to reflect the real progress, in a country where the preparation for, and the results of, its seasons caused a certain ebb and flow in its finances as the year went round. On either method of comparison being applied, however, satisfactory development was shown.

During the year there had been an increase of over £500,000 in the total figures, which had risen from £5,733,000 to £6,237,000. On the liabilities side deposits had increased by £453,000, and now stood at £2,980,000; a feature which gave considerable satisfaction.

The reserve fund was larger by £30,000, transferred out of profits; while other net increases were incidental to the growing business of the bank.

Taking the assets side of the balance-sheet, the items of coin and their equivalent, in readily realisable items, such as short loans in London, Government securities, Australian notes, balances due by other banks, and bills receivable, amounted to the substantial figure of £1,170,000, and showed an increase of £238,000 on the corresponding figures of a year ago; the strength of the bank in this direction being thus fully maintained. The bank's holding of coin, together with those readily realisable items, was equal to over 53 per cent. of the total liabilities to the public; or, in other words, for every pound of the public's money they held over 10s 6d in cash, or its equivalent, and the position as a whole was one of great financial soundness.

During the year the bank's bills discounted, loans, and other advances had increased by £226,000, from £3,384,000 to £3,090,000, and it was satisfactory for shareholders to know that the real volume of new business was considerably larger than the figure mentioned, owing to substantial realisations of old assets, the proceeds of which had been used in new advances.

Referring again to the item of "government securities," it might be noticed that those words replaced the words "British consols," which appeared in previous balance-sheets. After due consideration, they had decided to take the opportunity provided by a rise in the value of consols, and realised their holding at a price slightly in excess of the figure at which it stood in the bank's books. The money had been reinvested in other high-class stocks, easy of realisation, all of which were repayable on a definite date—the larger proportion being so repayable within quite a few years. Greater stability in market values might therefore be expected than was the case with stocks for which no definite date of repayment had been undertaken.

They were alive to the necessity of extending the bank's business. The opening of several new branches had been appreciated in districts where needed banking facilities had been provided; and the general business tended to improve in connection therewith.

Turning to the profit and loss account, they would note the amount provided during the six months for graduated land tax and income tax—a fairly large item. During the past half-year they had not received the same rates of interest on their London balances as they had obtained during the previous three or four years. This was owing to a fall in the value of money in London. These items, together with the fact that extra provision for the staff, necessary under existing circumstances, had been made, accounted for the slight reduction in the profits for the half-year.

The motion was seconded by Mr. Mark Sheldon, and carried unanimously.

The retiring directors, Dr. G. J. Sly and Mr. Mark Sheldon, were re-elected to the board. Mr. William Craig and Mr. G. Mason Allard were elected auditors for the ensuing year. A vote of thanks was accorded to the directors, general manager, and officers of the bank.

At a subsequent meeting of the directors, Sir W. P. Manning was again elected chairman of the bank.

OPERATED UPON IN A SYDNEY HOSPITAL YET CLEMENTS TONIC GAVE HER STRENGTH.

Testimony received from Miss M. May, late of the Glove and Blouse Dept., Bondi Cash Stores, Bondi. This letter should be read by all women who seek for health and strength:—

"TO CLEMENTS TONIC, LTD.,

"My experience of Clements Tonic is this, and I have repeated it for three years to those I know who at times became ill or run down in nerves, or in general failed in health.

"IT IS CLEMENTS TONIC THAT GAVE ME BACK MY HEALTH AND STRENGTH AFTER I HAD A VERY SERIOUS OPERATION IN A SYDNEY HOSPITAL SOME FOUR YEARS AGO, the exact date of which I can give if you require it, also the names of the operating doctors.

"The operation was successful, but for months it left me without the strength of a child. No matter what I did, or what I took, I could not get strong, and this went on generally for months.

"The turning point came when I took your medicine. The friend who gave me the first bottle told me how to take it and all about it. I took two bottles, but did not feel better, but the third created a marked improvement in appetite, and I felt better in every way.

"When I had taken over 6 bottles I BEGAN TO PUT ON FLESH, AND IN THREE MONTHS FROM THE TIME OF THE FIRST DOSE OF 'THE TONIC I WAS MY OLD SELF AGAIN. My recovery was looked upon as marvellous by my friends, and I personally believe it was; because I have never really been ill since. And for this you have my grateful thanks; also this testimony, which I am only too glad to give, and which you can use as you think fit.

"I am, Sirs,

"Sincerely yours,

"MADGE MAY."

Clements Tonic corrects the stomach, regulates the bowels, invigorates the nerves, clears the brain, and purifies the blood. Questions relating to fancy or commercial poultry keeping, diseases, etc., should be addressed to "Ancona," Herald office.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Novice.—1. Each make of incubator has special instructions issued by the manufacturer as to its working. The amount of ventilation suitable for one may be injurious to another. Secure the printed directions, and follow them. 2. While at hatching time the doors should be kept closed there must be free ventilation. 3. Twice a day; 15 minutes from the third day, increasing the last week to 20 or 25 minutes in mild weather. 4. Two or three degrees on either side of 103, if of a brief period, will not injuriously affect the eggs. 5. Replacing eggs, though often done, is not conducive to the best results.

Corn (Millthorpe).—1. The brown Leghorn breeder's address is W. McDonnell, Gould-avenue, Petersham. The other address you request is S. Champion, Eskbank. 2. Some of the eggs will be fertile after the third or fourth day; at the end of a week all can be set with the prospect of an average fertility.

K. J. (Waverley).—Yes, you can feed fowls on wheat alone, but if doing so, it would be well to boil it for the morning feed. Green stuff, grit, meat, and clean water should be given. You will get better results from the morning pollard and bran mash, with grain in the evening.

Yarrum.—It is quite common for young fowls, after laying a dozen or two of eggs, to break off for two or three weeks, when they begin again in earnest. Your feeding and management are all right, and no necessity for a change.

Summer Hill.—White Leghorn eggs of normal size weigh about two ounces. This weight will fetch the highest current rate in the market. There have been larger eggs than the one you mention, but the birds which lay them are rarely profitable.

The fall of twopence or threepence per dozen in eggs the past week has been the cause of much unnecessary comment. The price which ruled during the first fortnight of the month was quite above the July normal, and due to unfavourable climatic conditions. The current week's rate is what usually obtains at the end of July, and further reductions will regularly follow till September, the most plentiful and cheapest month of the year for this product.

While Muscovy drakes are scarcely realising last season's rate, and turkeys in poor demand, all other classes of feathered stock are fetching prices which a few years ago were unheard of. Old hens, particularly, are selling at exceptional rates, 4/ per couple last week for good ones being received for several lots; even Leghorn hens, which have but small claim as boilers, fetched up to 5/6. It is now the scarce time for cockerels, 6/ to 8/6 or more being readily obtainable. As poultry foods continue at moderate rates, poultry farmers must be doing well.

SMALL HENS THE BEST LAYERS.

It will be remembered that a few months ago a deputation of poultry-breeders waited on the Minister for Agriculture, protesting against a proposal to fix a minimum weight for birds of the respective breeds at the Hawkesbury College egg-laying competitions. The chief claim of the deputationists was that it mattered little what size the birds were, provided they produced eggs in record quantities of normal size—2oz each and over. In relation to this subject the majority of practical breeders are aware that fowls of large size or above normal in any variety are invariably poor layers in comparison with the smaller specimens of the same breed. This prolificacy of the smaller birds has just received further confirmation from Mr. Quisenbery, director of the third national egg-laying competition at the State Agricultural College, Missouri. The Director says: "The weights of the birds entered in the contest conducted at this place for the last three years and the egg records show that 90 per cent. of the proven best layers are the smallest birds. No matter what the variety may be, if a pullet of that variety makes a good egg record, upon weighing her we find she is usually from 4lb to 2lb under standard weight. The White Plymouth Rock hen which laid 281 eggs in our first contest only weighed 6lb, being 1½lb under standard weight. The White Leghorn pullet which led last year, and made a record of 260 eggs, only weighed 2½lb. This was the smallest of the 26 pullets of this variety in the contest. The highest record we ever had was made by a Plymouth Rock, 4½lb under weight. The Langshan which made the best record was 2lb under, White Orpington 2lb under, White under, White Orpington 2lb under, Buff Wyandotte 4½lb Wyandotte 1lb under, Buff Wyandotte 4½lb under, Buff Orpington 2lb under, Black Orpington 2lb under, Black Minorca 1½lb under, and so on through almost the entire list of varieties. On the other hand, the majority of the purebred hens which make the poorest egg records are up to standard weight or considerably over. During the past three years we have had birds from several hundred breeders, and our experience is that this is usually true, no matter what variety or from what breeder they come."

NOTES.

Mr. J. B. Molloy, of Surry Hills, has transferred a well-bred young Irish terrier to Mr. T. Lacey, of Sydney.

Mr. Machattie, of Wentworth Falls, has secured a promising fox terrier puppy from Messrs. Browne and Carlsen, of Tempe.

Mr. J. E. Cook, jun., of Newcastle, has taken delivery from Sydney quarantine of another of his imported Yorkshire terriers.

The Australian Scotch Collie Club's show will be held on Saturday at the Agricultural Ground.

The nominations of sires and dams for the Fox Terrier Club's Produce Stakes for 1914-15 close on the 12th prox. The prize schedule of the club's show on September 19 is now available. It is framed on the customary liberal lines, and the classification is comprehensive.

Mrs Albert, of the Kingsboro' Kennels, has sent to Mrs. Humphries, of Napier, N.Z., a young Yorkshire terrier by Kingsboro' Amethyst, ex Cymro Widdy.

The Sydney Silky, Yorkshire, and Australian Terrier Club will hold its annual meeting at Ocean House to-night. The prize schedule of the annual show caters freely for the club's breeds. Silkies have 7 classes, blue and tan Yorkshires 12, silver Yorkshires 10, Yorkshires any colour and weight 7, and Australians 8. Mr. J. Maude will judge all breeds.

Mr. W. D. M'Crea will return from London to Sydney within the next fortnight. He will bring with him a couple of his favourite Scottish terriers. "Our Dogs," the leading English canine journal, says:—"Mr. M'Crea has purchased from Mr. Sam Graham that classic Scottish terrier dog Criffel Chief, by ch Keppoch Dugald, ex Eglington Twig. He is one of the best terriers that have ever left this country. He is a black, and he ought to make things hum in Australia. Along with the dog goes a six months' old bitch, whose pedigree includes ch Benfield Rascal and ch Bapton Norman.

The secretary (Miss C. F. Brooks) of the Fusdog Club advises that the schedules for the show to be held on September 12, in St. George's Hall, Newtown, are expected to be ready for distribution by Friday next. This, the youngest specialist club, is catering, not only for pugs, but also for Pomeranians, poodles, Pekingese, and Persian cats. Pomeranian breeders have expressed their gratification to this club for assisting them in this useful manner, and several specials have been presented.

A CONTROLLING BODY.

Mr. T. A. Griffin writes:—"Several attempts have been made of late years to draw the canine clubs of New South Wales together for the formation of a ruling or controlling body in dog matters, but up to the present without success. I think if another attempt were made on the following lines there would be every hope of success:—The Royal Agricultural Society of N.S.W. possesses all the facilities, such as offices, staff, capital, etc., for taking charge of dog matters. The society has on its board gentlemen thoroughly versed in dog matters. Several of them were members of the original K.C. of N.S.W. I am sure they still possess the confidence and esteem of fanciers and breeders generally. If the committee of the Royal Agricultural Society would take full control of canine matters, giving all specialists and other kennel organisations conjointly the privilege of sending delegates to represent them on that committee, these delegates to become members of the R.A.S., such a body would be representative, and easily worked. There is no reason why such a board should not be acceptable to fanciers, who are anxious to see a proper system of control established in Sydney. That representative body which claims to be the ruling club, viz., the K.C. of N.S.W., has not been acknowledged by any club of note in New South Wales. I feel confident that if a scheme such as that suggested were adopted it would bring about a peaceful and equitable adjustment of all disputes and misunderstandings which undoubtedly exist in our midst to-day."

I groaned and whooned, I wheezed and sneezed,
My nose was sore and red,
I feared pneumonia would ensue,
My soul was filled with dread.
Next morn was bright, fears took flight,
My cold had fled for sure,
For I had fixed it overnight

ROSEBERY

The Model & Industrial Suburb

Gets the Full Benefit of the Proposed City and Suburban

Electric Railways

This is of Special Interest to You!

THE Public Works Department has determined, the Chief Commissioner of Railways has endorsed, Cabinet has approved—the Extension of the City Railway Services is therefore something definite and tangible.

A glance at the accompanying map clearly shows that the proposed Railway will most advantageously affect ROSEBERY—THE MODEL AND INDUSTRIAL SUBURB.

Land values—already rapidly advancing through SHEER MERIT alone, will receive a big boost! That's beyond doubt.

It's impossible to predict yet HOW HIGH prices will go, but the present figure of £3/10/ PER FOOT must at LEAST be DOUBLED. (Already some Road Frontages have changed hands at £5 per foot.)

In addition to the proposed Railway, it is almost certain the present Zetland Line will be pushed RIGHT THROUGH ROSEBERY to Gardener's Road.

UNQUESTIONABLY NOW IS THE TIME TO BUY. The GAIN is so sure!

Moreover, you need very little CASH to benefit by this attractive opportunity. £5 COVERS THE DEPOSIT, while for every £100 worth purchased, £1 PER MONTH is required to pay the Balance. This includes Interest at 6 per cent.

Or if you desire a COMPLETE HOME in this Model Suburb, there's choice a'plenty. £685 buys a splendid Brick Cottage. £50 covers the Deposit, 25/ per week the Balance.

ROSEBERY is a tried and proven proposition, in which, up to date, £137,489 of the shrewd Public's Money is invested. This fact alone should make you an enthusiastic "Roseberyite." ALL these folk, if they desire, are going to make BIG money out of their Rosebery holdings. Aren't you? It's worth Hard Thinking and quick action on your part.

OLD MASTERS.

A VALUABLE COLLECTION.

The collection of works by painters whose "floruerunt" ranges from the fifteenth to the early nineteenth century, taken from the Fitzhenry, Grantley, and Sir Joshua Reynolds collection, and at present on exhibition at the Chelsea Gallery (No. 1106), Culwulla-chambers, is very interesting. Fifty-six canvases, representing the English, French, Flemish, German, and Italian schools, are a party in Sydney which should not escape the keen eyes of those whom Mr. Arnold Bennett has happily termed "the passionate few." The gratitude of the public is also due to those responsible for the exhibition, for the very carefully compiled catalogue, with its wealth of detailed information about the painters included, and excellent reproductions of many of the most important pictures in the collection.

The variety of the works exhibited is so wide that it is difficult to select more than a small number for mention, but it is safe to say that especial admiration will be aroused by a finely painted landscape by Richard Wilson (1735), No. 39, showing a rampart of barren mountains in Wales, with a river flowing out into more open country. The subject is invested with a strange and gloomy grandeur. No. 43, by Thomas Whitcombe, of the same period, is remarkable in its suggestion of "plein air." It represents the entrance to Portsmouth Harbour, and its vigour and realism, despite the quaintly conventional treatment of the waves, are worthy of the man who is claimed by many critics to have been the greatest of English marine painters. The portrait of a child with a dog, by John Hilbert (No. 81) is interesting rather historically than otherwise, but none can fail to appreciate the beauty of the still life by an unknown Dutch painter (No. 45), dated about 1600, with its wonderful blacks, and gleaming shadowy touches of rich colour. Two figure studies in red chalk, by Domenichino, from the Reynolds collection, are among the most beautiful things in the exhibition, and the same may be said of a "Port Scene," by Lingelbach, who flourished from 1625 to 1687. Drawing, composition, and colours are equally a delight to the connoisseur, the delicate blues and reds set against the background of brown gold rendering it a triumph from a decorative point of view alone.

For sheer quality of paint, two portraits, one (No. 18) attributed to Romney, the other (No. 19) by Andrew Geddes, stand out conspicuously. Two characteristically small canvases by Vernet, whose snuff boxes are the joy of collectors, suggest the prototype of Claude Lorraine, and, close at hand, one's attention is arrested by a portrait of an old man by Balthasar Denner (1750), which recalls some of the qualities of Rembrandt on a minor scale, and with peculiar delicacy and exactness of detail. Firm, uncompromising brushwork, combined with realistic treatment, characterises the portrait of the young Alfonso de Medici, by Agnolo Allori, better known as Bronzino (No. 33), and admirers of Patrick Nasmyth are afforded an examination of a typical product of his genius in No. 58, "A River Scene." The "Venus and Cupid," by Breughel and Rothenhamer, painted on metal, is a curious example of the work of this school. Birds, fishes, reptiles, and various crustaceans are crowded together about the feet of the goddess, the marine animals, by strange convention, painted, not in the water, but on top of it, in order to be seen to advantage.

The exhibition will be formally opened by the Premier, Mr. W. A. Holman, to-morrow afternoon at 2.30.

RASH ON CHEST AND SHOULDERS.

Carcoma, via Quirindi, N.S.W.—"A small rash came on my chest and shoulders, with a burning irritation, which would get worse night and morning, and then the itching would go for a while. This lasted for two years, during which time I bathed it with different lotions with little permanent effect. At last I determined to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I used to bathe the parts with the Cuticura Soap, and then put the Cuticura Ointment on, and I could feel relief in a very short time, so I kept on till I was cured, and I have had no return of the trouble for about 12 months.

"Cuticura Soap and Ointment I have found are really good for the scalp, and stop the hair from falling out. I am sure there is nothing to equal the Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and I have heard several say so besides myself." (Signed) L. Brown, February, 1913.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold throughout the world, a sample of each, with 32-page Skin Book, will be mailed free on application to R. Towns and Co., Dept. T., Sydney, N.S.W.—Advt.

THE PLACE OF DRAGONS.

A MYSTERY.

CHAPTER XXI.

EXPLAINS LOLA'S FEARS.

After leaving the house in which I had so narrowly escaped death I dropped the sergeant at Spring Place station, and, with Raymond above over to Streatford, where, at the hospital, I stood beside Lola's bed.

She looked a pale, frail, pathetic little figure, clad in a light blue dressing-jacket, and propped up among the pillows. When she recognised me she put forth a slim white hand and smiled a glad welcome.

"I have been so very anxious about you, Lola," I said after the nurse had gone. "You know, of course, what happened?"

"Yes," she answered weakly in French. "I am so very sorry that you should have fallen into the trap as well as myself, Monsieur Vidal. They induced me to call there for one purpose—to kill me," she added in English, with her pretty French accent.

"I fear that is so," was my reply. "But did you not receive my warnings? The Paris Surete are searching for you everywhere, and Jenet is most anxious to find you."

"Ah, I know," she exclaimed with a slight laugh. "Yes, I got your kind letters, but I could not reply to them. There were reasons which, at the time, prevented me."

She looked very sweet, her fair, soft hair in two long plaits, which fell over her shoulders, the ends being secured by big bows of turquoise ribbon.

"Yes, she was decidedly pretty; her big, blue, wide-open eyes turned upon me.

"I wrote to Elise Leblanc at Versailles," I said, for want of something else to say.

"I got the letters. I was in Dresden at the time."

"With your uncle?"

"No. He has been in Vienna," was her brief response.

"But he was at that house in Spring Grove."

"Yes. It was a trap for me—a dastardly trap laid for me by old Gregory," she cried in anger. "He intended that I should die, but he never expected you to come so suddenly upon the scene."

"How was it that Jeanjean arrived there also?" I asked.

"He came there to consult the Master," she replied. "A huge affair was being planned that took place at the offices of one of the best known diamond dealers in Hatton Garden. Gregory, being in the diamond trade, knows most of the secrets of the other dealers, and in this case had learned of the arrival of three very fine stones, among the most notable diamonds known to the world. For three months he had carefully laid his plans of attack, and on the night in question had called his confederates together, as was his habit, in order to put his plans finally before them, and to allocate each his work. Through my uncle, however, I knew of the proposed robbery, and the old man, fearing me, had decided that it would be in their interests if I died. Hence the attack upon me."

"A most base and brutal one!" I cried. "But, thank heaven, Lola, you are recovering. I overheard all that you said regarding myself."

She flushed slightly, but did not reply.

"To-day I have heard that you have made a statement to the police," I went on in a low voice so that I should not be overheard by the nurse, who stood outside the door of the small two-bedded ward, the second bed being unoccupied.

"Yes. An agent of police came and questioned me," was her reply; "but I did not tell him much—at least, nothing which might give them any clue—or which would jeopardise either of us. I had heard that you were recovering, and therefore I thought you would prefer to unmask Gregory and his associates yourself, rather than leave it to the London police. Besides, they have escaped, and I have no idea where they may now be."

"Quite right," I replied, much relieved at her words. "You acted wisely, for had you told them the truth they would in all probability have arrested you."

She smiled faintly.

"Yes. That was one of the reasons which caused me to exercise discretion. I felt that we should soon meet again, M'sieur Vidal," she added. "They say that I shall be discharged from here in about a week."

"I hope so," I declared earnestly. "You had a very narrow escape from those fiends."

"I was quite unsuspicious when I went there," she said. "That house has been our meeting-place for the past eighteen months or so. Sometimes we met at Gregory's flat in Amsterdam, and sometimes at the tenantless house in Spring Grove, or at one which has been to let at Cricklewood, and also at a Rickx, has established a similar station. It house in West Hampstead.

"The spot 'where the three C's meet' at Ealing is the usual rendezvous, I suppose?"

"Yes, the place is easy of access, quiet, and entirely unsuspicious. I have met my uncle there sometimes when in London, and sometimes Gregory or the others. The encounter usually took place there, and then we went together in a taxi to one or other of the meeting places which Gregory had established."

"As soon as you have quite recovered we will lay a trap and secure the whole gang," I whispered confidently.

"Ah! I fear that will not be easy," she exclaimed, slowly shaking her head. "We shall be too well watched."

"And we can watch also," I remarked. "I know that from to-day I shall be kept under close supervision because they will fear me more than ever. But I shall manage to evade them, never fear. As soon as you leave hospital we must join forces and exterminate this gang of assassins."

She drew a long breath, bent her fair brows, and looked straight across at the pale green wall. I could see that she was not at all confident of escape. She knew how clever, designing, and unscrupulous was the old man Gregory; how cheaply her uncle, Jules Jean-Jean, held human life.

"Where is Gregory now, I wonder?" I exclaimed.

"Who knows? They are all in France or Belgium, I expect. They may be in Amsterdam, but I do not think so, as they might suspect me of making a statement to the police."

"What did you tell the police?"

For a moment she hesitated.

"Simply that I was enticed there by a young man whom I knew in Paris, and found myself in the company of several men who were undoubtedly thieves. These men I described. I stated that I was pressed to act as their decoy, and on refusal was struck down."

"Then they will be already searching for the men," I exclaimed, remembering that Warton had that morning gone up to consult his chief at Scotland Yard.

"They will be searching for men whose descriptions do not tally with those of my uncle and his friends," she whispered frankly, with a mischievous smile.

"Tell me, Lola," I asked, after complimenting her upon her astuteness, "do you recognise the names of Lavelle, Kunsle, Goering, or Hodrickx?"

She started, staring at me.

"Why? What do you know of them?" she inquired quickly, an apprehensive look upon her pretty face.

"They are associates of your uncle, are they not—in fact, members of the gang?"

"Yes. But how did you discover their true names?"

Then I explained how, after poor Craig's death, I had found the paper with the elaborate calculations, and the list of names with corresponding numbers.

"They are code-numbers, so that mention of them can be made in telegrams or letters, and their identity still concealed."

"And what were the columns of figures?" I asked, describing them.

"Probably either the calculations of weights and values of precious stones, or calculations of wave-lengths of wireless telegraphy in which Gregory experiments," she replied. "After a coup Gregory always valued the stolen gems very carefully before they were sent to Antwerp or Amsterdam to be re-cut and altered out of recognition. At one coup, a year ago, at Klein's, the principal jeweller in Vienna, the night-watchman was killed, and the safe opened with the acetylene jet. We got clear away with the jewels valued at three-quarters of a million francs. Afterwards, I motored from Vienna to Antwerp carrying most of the unset stones and pearls in the radiator of my car. The pryings douaniers at the frontiers never suspected anything there, nor in the inner tube of a spare wheel. Besides, I was the daughter of the Baronne de Lericourt, travelling with her maid, therefore, nobody suspected, and Kunsle, a young Dane, acted as my chauffeur."

"In which direction did your uncle travel?"

"To Algiers, by way of Trieste, and home to his hobby, wireless telegraphy. He has high aerial wires across the grounds of his villa, and can receive on his delicate apparatus messages from Clifden in Ireland, Trieste, Paris, Madrid, London, Port Said, and at times all over Europe."

"Can he transmit messages?" I asked.

She sighed slightly; her wound was giving her pain.

"Oh, yes. His transmitter is very powerful, and sometimes, at night, he can reach Pelhu, in Cornwall."

"Then your uncle is apparently a skilled scientist as well as a daring criminal!" I said, surprised.

"Oui, m'sieur. He is just now experimenting with a wireless telephone, and has already heard from Algiers, across the Mediterranean, to Genoa, where his friend, the man Hod-

Offices open all day, including Saturdays.

"And the wireless is sometimes used for their nefarious purposes, I suppose?"

"Probably. But that is, of course, their own secret. I am told nothing," was her reply, dropping into French. "Sometimes, when at home, my uncle sits for hours with the telephone over his ears, listening—listening attentively—and now and then scribbling down the mysterious call-letters he hears, and referring to his registers to see whose attention is being attracted. Every night at twelve o'clock he receives the days news sent out from Clifden in Ireland to ships in the Atlantic."

"It must be an exceedingly interesting hobby," I remarked.

"It is. If I were a man I should certainly go in for experimenting. There is something weirdly mysterious about it," she said with a sweet expression.

"If he can speak by telephone across the Mediterranean to Genoa, then, no doubt, such an instrument is of greatest use to him in the pursuit of his shameful profession," I said.

"I expect it is," she answered, rather grimly, regarding me with half-closed eyes. "But, oh, m'sieu', how can I bear the future? What will happen now? I cannot tell. For me it must be either a violent death, at a moment when I least expect it, or—or——"

"Leave it all to me, Lola," I interrupted. "I'll leave no stone unturned to effect the arrest of the whole gang."

"Do be careful of yourself," she urged with apprehension. "Remember, they intend at all hazards to kill you. Gregory and my uncle fear you more than they do the police. Ever since you unearthed that mystery in Brussels they have held you in terror. The evidence you gave in the Assize Court against the man Lefranc showed them that you entertained suspicion of one who killed the jeweller, Jean Vanderelst, in the Avenue Louise. And for that reason you have since been a marked man," she added, looking very earnestly into my face.

"I assure you I have now no fear of them, Lola. I will extricate you from the guilty bonds in which they hold you, if you will only render me assistance."

For a moment she remained thoughtful, a very serious expression upon her fair face.

"Bien! But if the men are arrested they will at once turn upon me," she argued. "Then I too will stand in the criminal dock beside them!"

"Not if you act as I direct," I assured her, placing my hand upon hers which lay outside the coverlet.

Then, after a brief pause, during which I again looked straight into her great blue eyes I suddenly asked—

"Where can I find trace of old Gregory?"

As soon as I am a little better I shall resume my investigations, and run the whole gang to earth."

"I do not know where he lives. My uncle once remarked that he was so evasive that he changed his abode as often as he did his collars. His office, however, is in Hatton Garden, over a watchmaker's named Rhorington, on the second floor. You will find on a door, 'Loiseq Freres, Diamond Dealers, Antwerp.' Mr. Gregory Vernon, not Vernon Gregory, poses as the London manager of the firm of 'Loiseq Freres,' who by reason of their wealth and the magnitude of their purchases and sales, are well known in the diamond trade. So, by carrying on a genuine business, he very successfully conceals his illegitimate one of re-cutting stones and re-placing them upon the market.

"Good!" I said, enthusiastically, in English. "I shall endeavour to trace his hiding-place, for most certainly he is no longer in London, now that he knows that his attempt upon you was unsuccessful."

"And the police are now looking for mysterious persons!" she laughed merrily, displaying her white, even teeth.

Yes, the more I saw of my dainty little darling, the greater I became attracted by her, even though force of circumstances had, also, compelled her, against her will, to become an expert jewel-thief, who by reason of her charm, her beauty, and her astuteness had passed without suspicion.

What a strange and tragic career had been that of the frail little creature now smiling so sweetly at me! My heart went out in sympathy towards her, just as it had done ever since that memorable night when I had gripped her slim waist and captured her in my room.

The nurse entered, so I rose from my chair, and clasping Lola's little hand, bade her farewell, promising to return again in two days' time, and also suggesting that when she became convalescent I should take her down to some friends of mine at Boscombe to convalesce.

My suggestion she adopted at once, and then I turned, and thanking the nurse for all her kindness, left the hospital.

LAW REPORT.

HIGH COURT.

(Before Sir Samuel Griffith, C.J., Mr. Justice Barton, Mr. Justice Isaacs, Mr. Justice Duffy, Mr. Justice Rich, and Mr. Justice Power.)

THE TRAMWAYS CASE.
APPLICATION FOR PROHIBITION.

Argument was continued in the application made on behalf of the Brisbane Tramway Company, Limited, and the Adelaide Tramway Trust, to make absolute the order for prohibition against the enforcement of the demand made by Mr. Justice Higgins in the tramways case, and affecting the tramway organisations mentioned.

Mr. Arthur continued his argument in connection with the position taken up by the South Australian employees, and their intentions respecting the formation and the joining of the federation.

At the outset Mr. Justice Duffy asked if the Court were satisfied that there was a dispute in Queensland and South Australia about wages, but about nothing else, would that affect the award as to anything else?

Mr. Arthur: I submit that it would.

Mr. Justice Duffy: Would it be possible for prohibition to go as to the rest of the award, but to stand as to wages?

Mr. Arthur: I think it would.

The Chief Justice: There cannot be the slightest doubt that the men in South Australia intended to join some federation. All the indications point to that intention.

After concluding his argument in connection with the position taken up by the South Australian employees Mr. Arthur went on to deal with the position in Queensland. There was no doubt, he said, at the time of the submission of the plaint the whole of the men were in the employ of the Brisbane Tramway Company, and if there were a dispute in fact there was no doubt they were disputants at the time of the filing of the plaint. He submitted that the time when the Court should look for jurisdiction was the time of the submission of the dispute.

The Chief Justice: Suppose at the hearing of the plaint the parties come to the Court and say we are satisfied, as we have come to an agreement. You say then that the President can say you can do what you like.

Mr. Arthur: I submit that is so.

The Chief Justice: And the President can make an award favourable or otherwise to one or other of the parties?

Mr. Arthur: I submit he can. My point is that as soon as a dispute arises the jurisdiction exists to settle it one way or the other.

The Chief Justice: You say that once a dispute affecting more than one State breaks out it cannot be settled by any one or in any other way than by the President of the Court. That is a startling proposition.

Mr. Arthur: The President may take hold of the matter and accept or reject what the parties have done.

The Chief Justice: That appears to me to be contrary to the law on the subject.

Mr. Arthur: The point I want to make is that the jurisdiction is there for him to do what he thinks with the dispute.

Mr. Justice Rich: You say when the parties have become reconciled the President can say it does not appear to me that you have picked the right and proper way to settle the dispute, and you must go about it in another way?

Mr. Justice Isaacs: Suppose the parties abandon the dispute?

Mr. Arthur: The foundation of the matter is that there are parties in dispute, and the Constitution provides the power and Parliament the machinery for settling the dispute. The matter goes to the President, and if an agreement has been arrived at he can say whether it is a right and proper agreement to arrive at.

Mr. Arthur then went on to deal with the affidavits put in by certain employees of the Brisbane Tramway Company, and the comments made by Mr. Justice Higgins upon them. In dealing with a particular one, the Chief Justice pointed out that the only objectionable line in it was where the man said he objected to the Union because it was likely to create trouble between employer and employee.

"It is just such a remark which you would expect from the man," replied Mr. Arthur.

"It is quite conceivable," said the Chief Justice, "that there are many men who take that view. I hope that the time will come soon when anything likely to create friction between employers and employees will be entirely eliminated. It is highly desirable that there should be a better feeling between man and master."

Proceeding with his argument, Mr. Arthur urged that in spite of the affidavits put in by the men, they were actually in dispute with their employers.

Argument was still proceeding when the Court rose.

SUPREME COURT.

IN BANCO.

(Before the Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Sly, and Mr. Justice Ferguson.)

OUSTER MATTER.
Passlow v Kirkland.

Mr. Pickburn, instructed by Mr. A. J. McDonald (agent for Messrs. McGuren and Pollock, of Grafton), appeared for Herbert William Kirkland, in support of an appeal from the decision of J. L. Shropshire, P.M., on April 24, at Bellingen, in a proceeding before him between Thomas Passlow and Kirkland. Mr. Young, instructed by Messrs. Macgregor and Palmer (agents for Mr. W. F. K. Kemp, of Bellingen), appeared for Passlow, the applicant in the Court below. It appeared from the special case that on the application of Passlow the magistrate under section 72 of the Local Government Act, 1906, granted a rule absolute to oust Kirkland from the position of councillor of a riding of the Bellingen Shire Council, on the ground that he was at the time of his election engaged in the contract of valuer with the Bellingen Shire Council. Kirkland now appealed on the ground that the magistrate's finding was erroneous in point of law.

Mr. Pickburn said that his learned friend had raised a preliminary objection, which was set out in the affidavit of W. F. K. Kemp, solicitor for Passlow, that appellant was out of time in serving upon him the notice of appeal and copy of the special case, as required by the Justices Act, 1902, and the Amending Act, 1909. The special case, it was said, was not filed within 10 days after being received from the magistrate, and that was the fact the delay might have been due to circumstances over which appellant or his solicitor had no control. He therefore asked for an adjournment in order that inquiry might be made, and that appellant, if necessary, might file affidavits. If he then found that he could not successfully argue the point taken he would consent to the appeal being struck out, with costs.

The further hearing was then adjourned to Monday week.

QUESTION OF UNIMPROVED VALUE.
DEDUCTION FOR IMPROVEMENTS.
Harris v Municipal Council of Sydney.

Mr. Sheridan, instructed by Mr. M. J. Harris, appeared for appellant, Matthew John Harris; and Mr. Windeyer, instructed by Mr. P. S. Dawson, City Solicitor (of Messrs. Dawson, Waldron, and Glover), for the respondent Municipal Council of Sydney. This was an appeal based upon a decision of District Court Judge Murray, sitting as a Court of Review, on an appeal by M. J. Harris from two assessments on the unimproved value of land at the corner of Harris, Miller, and Mount streets, Pyrmont. His Honor, in the course of his judgment, said that the question, first of all, was whether what had been done to the land in the shape of quarrying stone from it was an actual improvement or not. It was difficult to say how far it was actual improvement, because the work that had been done was partly a deterioration, though largely an improvement. He took it that the word "improvement" must be taken to have a subjective as well as an objective meaning, and that the improvements which had brought the land into the state in which it was were intended to be work, when a deduction had to be made, that had been done for the sake and with the effect of improving the land and putting it into the condition in which it was now. He found, as a fact, that the land was improved by cutting down some part of the hill, but it was quite impossible to find out how much of it was an improvement. He held, on the other hand, that the land was deteriorated in making the excavation by cutting down too far, and that, in the sense of conscious and intentional improvement, there was nothing done to the land at all. For these reasons he confirmed assessments 73 and 415. Appellant now asked the Court to review this finding, on the ground that Judge Murray acted on a wrong principle in deciding that what had been done upon the land could not be considered as improvements within the meaning of the Land and Income Tax Assessment Act. The work done, Mr. Sheridan said, consisted of removing an immense quantity of stone from the land, in order to level it, and that the cost should have been deducted from the unimproved value of the land. He also submitted that his Honor did not apply his mind to the question which the Legislature said he must apply his mind to; and if he assessed the land on a wrong principle the case must go down to him for reassessment.

Mr. Windeyer, on the other side, said there was definite evidence of the value of the land in its present condition as a building site, and his Honor decided in favour of the council's assessors. Practically both sides were agreed as to the value of the land, and the only question was whether appellant was entitled to any deduction for improvements. The District Court Judge was unable to find that the work done was an improvement. The ground of appeal involved a mere academic question, which would not be considered by the Court.

The Chief Justice: On the facts before the Judge, how can the Court say, Mr. Sheridan, that his decision was wrong whether his reasons were right or not?

Mr. Sheridan said that his Honor did not apply the principle required by the Act in arriving at a conclusion. There was evidence to which the Judge did not apply his mind at all.

The Chief Justice said that the appeal was based on the ground that his Honor in the Court below applied a wrong principle in deciding the matter. The Judge held, among other things, that unless what was done on the land were actual improvements, the taxpayer could not get the benefit of them, and he found that what was done could not be considered as actual improvements, so as to entitle the owner to a deduction of the cost of such improvements. He thought the Judge below was properly entitled to come to the conclusion at which he had arrived, and therefore the appeal must be dismissed, with costs.

Mr. Justice Sly concurred, and said that the only doubt he had at first was whether the learned Judge had found that the land could be profitably worked or not.

Mr. Justice Ferguson said that the land was admittedly being made fit for building purposes by levelling or clearing, and that brought it within the definition of unimproved value which the statute required to be applied. He thought it was quite immaterial what the intention of the person was who carried out the levelling or clearing if the result had been to make the land fit for building purposes. The question for his Honor's decision was what was the capital sum for which the land would sell under reasonable conditions, and what sum, if any, should be deducted for the cost of reclamation or maintenance? He read his Honor's judgment as being a finding of fact that this quarrying was a profitable work, and that, therefore, the cost could not be deducted from the capital unimproved value. Even if the principle upon which the District Court Judge decided was wrong, it was the duty of the Court to make such an order as seemed just, and he thought the appeal should be dismissed because it would not be just to send the case back to the Judge, and put the parties to further expense, in order to get him to make an assessment which he had in fact already made.

Appeal dismissed, with costs.

IN EQUITY.

(Before the Chief Judge, Mr. Justice Simpson.)

ALLEGED DAMAGE TO PROPERTY.
Chellins v Laing.

Mr. Bethune, instructed by Messrs. Bradley and Son, appeared on behalf of Frederick Forsyth Chellins, and moved for an injunction to restrain Sophia Laing, her servants, and agents from allowing certain drainage and other works to remain on her property without making adequate provision for carrying off surface waters in such a way as not to endanger or cause damage to plaintiff's land.

Mr. J. A. Browne, instructed by Messrs. Vindin and Littlejohn, appeared for the defendant.

Plaintiff set out in his statement of claim that he was the occupier and registered proprietor of certain land at Gordon, and defendant the registered proprietor of certain land adjoining his property. About January last, the defendant, for the purpose of subdividing her land for sale, formed and constructed a road through it, also certain gutters, culverts, and drains. Plaintiff alleged that by such construction defendant had diverted certain waters on to his land, which would not otherwise have been so diverted; and had caused waters to become concentrated, and to converge, and flow in greater volume, and more rapidly than they would otherwise have done on to his land. Defendant had neglected to make adequate or proper provision for carrying off the waters so concentrated, or for protecting his land from damage. In consequence of such alleged negligence, great damage had been caused to his land by the waters bringing with them large quantities of soil, stones, and rubbish, overthrowing his fencing, and washing away large quantities of the soil in the garden, and other portions of his property.

Plaintiff further alleged that defendant had neglected and refused to take steps to remedy the damage to his property, or to prevent recurrence thereof, though lawfully having been requested to do so. Plaintiff feared that unless the defendant was restrained, serious loss and damage would be caused to his property, hence the motion for injunction.

The defence was that the storm waters flowed down a natural water course, and even if defendant had done nothing to her land the same damage would have been done to plaintiff's property as on a previous occasion when there was a heavy storm. The formation of the road did not contribute in any way to the washing down of plaintiff's fence, nor did it in any way divert the flow of water on to his land. Nothing had been done by defendant to contribute to the alleged damage, and the same would have taken place if the road had not been made.

The matter stands part heard.

SUIT FOR SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE.
Pearce v Glyde.

This was a suit in which Edward Pearce prayed that Henry Alfred Glyde be ordered specifically to perform a certain agreement and to deliver to plaintiff the vacant possession of certain land.

Mr. Harriott, instructed by Mr. H. O. Marshall, appeared for plaintiff, and Mr. Worthington, instructed by Mr. W. H. Atkinson, for defendant.

Plaintiff claimed that by an agreement dated February 20 last, the defendant agreed to sell him certain land in Reilly-street, Liverpool, for £100, of which £25 was to be paid on the signing of the agreement, and the balance on completion of the conveyance of the land. He paid the £25, and was always ready and willing to perform his part of the contract, but defendant had neglected and refused to perform his part by completing the transfer of the land and delivering up possession to him. Plaintiff therefore asked that defendant be specifically ordered to perform the agreement on his part.

The defendant denied that he had neglected or refused to perform his part of the contract, and pleaded that he had acted with reasonable promptness; that he had not been guilty of any unreasonable delay in performing his part; and that any delay that had taken place had been occasioned by his accession to forts to comply with the requisitions as to title made by plaintiff's solicitor.

A settlement was arrived at, the terms being signed by counsel and filed in Court.

(Before Mr. Justice Harvey.)

INTEREST IN STATION PROPERTIES.
Adey v Fisher and others.

The hearing was continued of the suit in which Maude Elizabeth Adey prayed, among other things, that the defendants James Hamilton Fisher and George Groom Fisher, trustees of a certain assignment made by John Fisher, of Emby station, near Coonamble, in May, 1901, be ordered to deliver up a certain release executed by plaintiff in April, 1908, to be cancelled.

DIVORCE COURT.

(Before Mr. Justice Gordon.)

SCHUNKE v SCHUNKE.

William Arthur Schunke sought a dissolution of his marriage with Mary Ellen Schunke, on the grounds of misconduct with Thomas Blunt, a travelling showman, who was joined as co-respondent. Mr. H. D. McLachlan, agent for Messrs. Emerson and Tietyens, of Albury, appeared for petitioner. The case was heard at Albury before Judge Rogers, on July 9, and remitted to Sydney for the issue of a decree.

His Honor granted a decree nisi, returnable in six months, but declined to allow costs against the co-respondent, as there was not sufficient evidence that he knew the respondent was a married woman.

BULLIVANT v BULLIVANT.

Eva May Bullivant (formerly Rattenberry) sought a dissolution of her marriage with George William Bullivant, on the ground of desertion for three years and upwards. Mr. R. W. Fraser appeared for petitioner. The issues were tried before Judge Rogers at Yass in June, found in favour of petitioner, and remitted to Sydney for the issue of a decree.

His Honor granted a decree nisi, returnable in six months, and allowed costs against the respondent.

DECREES MADE ABSOLUTE.

His Honor pronounced absolute the decrees nisi issued in the following cases:—

Annie Brown versus Archibald Brown, Florence Lily May Scott versus John Henry Scott, Henry Harold Eldridge versus Clare Constance Eldridge, Edith Lizzie McFadden versus Francis McFadden, William Alexander Hankin versus Hannah Mary Hankin, Edith Connell versus James Fletcher Connell, Thomas Henry Jones versus Josephine Jones, Thomas Alexander Macauley versus Lila McDermitt Macauley (John Baker co-respondent), Daniel McGurgan versus Evelyn McGurgan (George Barrett co-respondent), Estelle Hannah versus Harold Spotswood Hannah, Katie Cecilia Porter versus Henry George Porter, Winifred Barnes versus George Robert Barnes, Alexander Boyd versus Mary Boyd, Florence Amelia Reid versus Hamilton Chambers Reid, Louisa Florence Mackay versus Thomas Mackay, Ellen Edie Alice Willet versus Frederick Willet.

IN BANKRUPTCY.

(Before the Registrar, Mr. F. H. Salusbury.)

CERTIFICATE APPLICATIONS.

Re Michael John Darcy and William Francis Darcy, trading as "Darcy Bros." Mr. Chubb appeared as counsel for the applicants. Both certificates were suspended for 12 months.

Re Edward Henry Gray. Adjourned to August 18.

SINGLE MEETING AND PUBLIC EXAMINATION.

Re Mary Breen. The meeting closed, and the public examination was declared concluded.

CREDITOR'S PETITION.

Arthur Henry Rocco Angelinetta, of Keposstreet, Redfern, glass goods manufacturer, trading as the "Redfern Decorative Glass Works," versus Margaret Catherine Heerey, of 112 Glebe Point-road, Glebe, storekeeper, trading as the "Economic Stores." Petition to be heard on August 4.

VOLUNTARY SEQUESTRATIONS.

Charles William Edward Hicks, carpenter, of Darwell-street, Carrington. Mr. C. F. W. Lloyd, official assignee.

Roy Reggie Marford, agent, of Willoughby. Mr. C. F. W. Lloyd, official assignee.

Mary Elizabeth Taylor, grocer, of Hoskins-street, Temora. Mr. C. F. W. Lloyd, official assignee.

INDUSTRIAL COURT.

(Before Mr. Justice Heydon.)

A BOARD REPRESENTATIVE.

Mr. Moffatt, who appeared for the Operative Plumbers' Society, applied for the dissolution of the Building Trades No. 7 Board, under section 20, subsection 1, of the Act, which stated that the Minister may at any time, by direction of the Court, dissolve a board. He said that on July 11, 1912, George Ware, of Glenstein-street, Waverley, was, on the recommendation of the Court, appointed the employees' representative on the board, but, as he was now an employer of labour, he contended that under subsection 5 of section 16 of the Industrial Arbitration Act of 1912, which enacted that one-half of the members of a board should consist of employers and the other half of employees, Ware could not continue to act for the employees.

The matter was allowed to stand over.

REFERRED BACK.

The application of Heiy Brothers, Ltd., to have the boundaries of jurisdiction of the Building Trades No. 9 Board altered, so as to permit of the applicants' sawmill and spoke and nave factory at Dora Creek being brought under an award of the country board, instead of under the metropolitan board, was referred to the board, to allow of it dealing with it on an application for exemption.

Mr. Tighe, instructed by Mr. S. E. Cook, appeared for the applicants, Mr. Johns for the Sawmill and Timber-yard Employees' Association, and Mr. Corke for the Sydney and Suburban Timber Merchants' Association.

APPLICATION FOR A BOARD.

Mr. F. Fitzpatrick, secretary of the Health Inspectors' Society of New South Wales, applied for the constitution of a board for the industry of health and sanitary inspectors.

Mr. A. R. Bluett appeared on behalf of the Local Government Association.

The hearing of the application was adjourned till the 31st instant, to allow of service of the affidavit on the City Council.

PROHIBITION ASKED FOR.

Mr. N. C. Dreyer applied, on behalf of the New South Wales Master Printers' Association, for an order to prohibit proceedings of the Manufacturing No. 2 Group, No. 6 Board.

The matter was remitted to Mr. Justice Edmunds.

VARIATION OF BOARD'S CONSTITUTION.

Mr. M. J. Reddy applied, on behalf of the Pressers' Union, for a variation of the constitution of the Clothing Trades Group, No. 5 Board, so as to allow of the inclusion of brushers, folders, and examiners.

The Court granted the application.

Mr. Vero Read appeared on behalf of the N.S.W. Clothing Manufacturers' Association.

APPEAL ALLOWED.

George James, a butcher, of Katoomba, appealed against an order made by the Industrial Magistrate at Katoomba for £14 18s 2d, being the amount awarded to Robert Edward Williams, the complainant, for work done as a watchman.

Mr. Curlewis appeared in support of the appeal, and Mr. Croft was for the respondent.

The grounds of the appeal were that complainant was not a watchman within the meaning of the Act; the fact that he was engaged to sleep on the premises not being evidence to that effect; and that the order was against the evidence.

The appeal was allowed, with £3 3s costs.

ENGINEERS' CASE.

The report of the appeal by the Amalgamated Society of Engineers, with reference to the Gasworkers and Engineers' Special Demarcation Board, appears in another column.

(Before Justice Edmunds.)

A NEW BOARD.

On May 23 last the Court recommended the constitution of the Iron and Shipbuilding Trades Group, No. 35 Board, for all the industries or callings carried on by the Broken Hill Proprietary Company, Ltd., at its steel works at Port Waratah, and the Court had before it the matter of the nomination of the members of the board. Thomas Davis, Terrace-street, Tighe's Hill, Newcastle, and Matthew Bryant, 383 Hunter-street West, Newcastle, were nominated as the employees' representatives, and John A. Lindsay, engineer, Waratah, and John M'Meekan, superintendent of construction, steel works, Port Waratah, as the employers' representatives.

Mr. Cantor, who appeared for the Operative Bricklayers' Society of New South Wales, applied for the exemption of the society from the newly-constituted board, but the application was refused. Mr. Kelynack appeared on behalf of the Broken Hill Proprietary Co., Ltd.

INDUSTRIAL MAGISTRATE'S COURT.

(Before Mr. G. C. Addison, Chief Industrial Magistrate.)

COACHPAINTERS' PAY.

The cases of Reavell and Morrissey against the Chief Commissioner for Railways and Tramways were heard. The complainants, by virtue of sections 26 and 49 of the Industrial Arbitration Act, claimed certain moneys alleged to be due to them by the defendant in accordance with the rates fixed by the Leather Trades Coachmakers' (Rail) Board. Complainants were engaged as coachpainters, and were covered by the Government Railways Group, No. 11 Board, and were employed as second-class coachpainters, at the rate of 1s 2d per hour. It was claimed that the work which they did was of the same class as that of car and carriage painters, who, under the award of the Leather Trades Board, were paid 1s 4½d an hour, and done under similar circumstances.

The magistrate made an order against the defendant in each case for the amount claimed (Reavell £3 7s 3d and Morrissey £5 16s), with 8s costs of Court.

BUTCHERS' CASES.

F. Geddes, a master butcher, was proceeded against by J. J. Grainger, acting general secretary of the Australasian Meat Employees' Union, on a charge of a breach of the award of the Food Supply and Distribution, No. 1 Group, No. 7 Board, in employing James M'Intyre to start at 6.30 a.m., instead of 6.30 a.m., on May 30 last. Defendant pleaded not guilty, and produced an indenture of partnership and a certificate of the registration of himself and M'Intyre as partners. M'Intyre got £3 15s a week. Witness had no knowledge as to when he started work on May 30.

It was held that a partnership did not exist between defendant and M'Intyre. An order was made against defendant for £1, with 14s costs.

M'Intyre was then charged with a breach of the same award, in starting work at 6.20 a.m. An order was made against him for 5s, with 14s costs.

UNION SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Charles Thompson, secretary of the Master Bricksetters' Association, proceeded against J. Robertson for the recovery of £1 10s, alleged to be due in contributions to the union, being for four horses at 3d per week.

Defendant said he had only one horse of his own, but engaged four from another man. He was never a member of the union, and never did any bricksetting.

No order was made against defendant.

WORKING TOO EARLY.

J. J. Grainger proceeded against Wm. Francis, of Haberfield, on a charge of employing George W. Ingram to work in his butchering business at 6.15 a.m., instead of 6.30 a.m., on June 13. Defendant pleaded guilty, and said he did not ask the man to come early. He was fined £2, with 14s costs.

Ingram was charged with starting work as above. He also pleaded guilty, and was fined 10s, with 14s costs.

McCready librarian and schoolmaster, Mr. R. Rex principal storekeeper, Mr. M. McNamara superintendent of labour, and Mr. E. Quinn messenger, State Penitentiary. Mr. J. W. Fletcher as acting district registrar in Bankruptcy at Gulgong. Mr. G. H. S. King, chief electoral officer.

THEFT ON A VESSEL.

Frank Hauschild, 20, was charged, before Mr. King, S.M., at the Water Police Court yesterday with stealing a money-order for £5, the sum of about £9, a wallet and purse, valued in all at about £14 5s, the property of Charles Smidd.

Smidd said that he and defendant were firemen on the steamer Port Phillip, and occupied the same forecastle. He told defendant that the money was missing, and blamed him. Accused subsequently admitted that he took it, and handed it back.

Accused pleaded guilty, and was sentenced to a month's imprisonment with hard labour.

TRADES AND LABOUR.

RAILWAY WORKERS' ASSOCIATION.

At a meeting of the executive of the Railway Workers and General Labourers' Association, reports were received of the breaking up of different camps in fulfilment of the Government's determination to confine its railway works policy for a year to duplications and deviations of the main trunk lines.

It was stated that the transference of large bodies of men had brought about considerable hardship and loss, and that, on the completion of the transfers, the Works Department had no immediate work to offer the men. The following resolution was carried:—

"That this executive strongly condemns the inhuman action of the Government in transferring a number of men from the North Coast and elsewhere in the depth of winter ostensibly to take up work on the main lines system without making any provision whatever to ensure these men getting work after being so transferred; and, further, this executive feels that the Government, in the interests of common humanity, should immediately arrange for the re-employment of these men."

The financial report showed the membership on June 30 to be 13,890, or 865 in excess of the record of June last year. The receipts for the half-year were £7648, an increase of £220. The total funds for the half-year amounted to £9016. Payments amounted to £4602, leaving a credit balance of £4414.

A sum of £50 was voted for the wives and children of the Maitland miners, who are on strike. It was decided to increase the vote to the Workers' Educational Association to £5 5s.

NON-UNION CAMPAIGN.

The non-union campaign by the Amalgamated Society of Engineers underwent no fresh development yesterday, the strikers at the Primout works of the Colonial Sugar Refining Company, Ltd., and at the engineering establishment of Messrs. Davies, Shephard, and Co., Bridge-road, Annandale, being still unsettled.

WOMEN WORKERS' UNION.

Since the wages board to deal with all classes of women workers was constituted, those following the various callings affected have taken a keen interest in their own welfare. The ranks of the union are being daily added to, and the matters are being prepared in anticipation of an early application to the board. The union has appointed a lady organiser, Mrs. Barnes. She, together with Mrs. K. Dwyer and Mrs. Kermode, has visited many of the shops and other establishments, and reports good progress.

SLAUGHTERING AGREEMENTS.

Mr. H. Macnamara, the president of the New South Wales branch of the Australasian Meat Industry Employees' Union, who last week attended a compulsory conference at Melbourne before Mr. Justice Powers, Deputy Chairman of the Federal Arbitration Court, stated yesterday that slaughtering agreements for Victoria and South Australia had been tentatively accepted subject to approval by the persons concerned in those States.

SANITARY INSPECTORS' CLAIMS.

Claims have been made by the Sanitary Inspectors' Association on the Local Government Association. If a settlement cannot be brought about a reference will be made to arbitration. It is asked that inspectors should get from £208 to £400 according to the ascertained population of boroughs. Assistant inspectors' pay is listed at from £208 to £312; Board of Health inspectors, £338; chief inspector, £650; pure foods inspectors, £312 ordinary and £520 chief.

At a meeting of the Hotel, Club, Restaurant, and Caterers' Employees' Union, held on Monday night, the assistant secretary, Mr. A. P. Steyne, was made the recipient of a presentation on the eve of his approaching marriage.

CHILD BURNED TO DEATH.

By his clothing catching on fire at the residence of his parents, 557 King-street, Newtown, about 7.30 p.m. on July 23, Bartolo Mirabito, a little boy of 4 years and 9 months, received severe burns on his body and right arm, from which he died on the following day at the Royal Prince Alfred Hospital. An inquest was held before Mr. Hawkins, at the City Coroner's Court yesterday, and a verdict of accidental death was returned.

RAW, CHAPPED HANDS

ZAM-BUK IS SOOTHING AND SMOOTHING—STOPS SMARTING AND SORENESS—AND HEALS WITH NEW, HEALTHY SKIN.

What irritation and distress comes from raw, chapped hands! If a woman's skin is at all sensitive, she suffers more or less in this way all the year round; but with the damp and cold of winter the condition of her hands becomes a positive torture. First the skin loses its pleasant softness, then there is a disagreeable roughness and redness, followed by cracking and bleeding, particularly in the region of the knuckles and the wrist.

Neglecting chaps, or any cold sores, may lead to painful swelling and inflammation. There is a danger of grit and dirt getting into the cracks of the skin, and setting up positive torture. Blood-poisoning, lock-jaw, and infectious disease have been known to arise in this way. In fact, chaps and cold-sores are often the first symptoms of deep-rooted skin disease. The trouble is utterly beyond the reach of toilet creams and cheap salves, which possess no medicinal value whatever, and which are not of the least use when the tissues are thus affected.

Zam-Buk is a scientific balm which, in addition to allaying the inflammation and pain, and healing chaps, cold sores, and roughness, also imparts a new and remarkable healthiness to the skin itself.

Smear Zam-Buk on at night, and wear an old pair of gloves till morning. The effect of the application of Zam-Buk is delightfully cooling and soothing. Its pure healing essences—which have set it on a pinnacle apart from ordinary ointments and lotions polluted by animal fats and mineral poisons—instantly soak into and thoroughly permeate the tissues of the skin, softening, purifying, and healing in a perfectly natural way—the unique Zam-Buk medicinal way.

EVERY HOME NEEDS ZAM-BUK.

CHAPPED HANDS HEALED.

Mrs. M. Boyd, of 147 Toorak-road, South Yarra, Melbourne, Vic., has suffered from chapped hands and lips, and writes:—"I always keep a pot of Zam-Buk by me, as I consider it invaluable for the hands during the cold winter weather. I suffered from chapped hands and lips, but a few applications of the balm soothed and healed the smarting chaps very quickly. Some months ago I had the misfortune to scald my arms very badly through unwittingly plunging them into a tub of boiling water. They were terribly scalded, but I applied Zam-Buk immediately, when the pain was allayed, and my arms quickly healed."

CHEST COLD AND CHILBLAINS HEALED.

"I have great pleasure in stating that Zam-Buk is the best healer and embrocation that I have ever used," says Mr. F. G. Hughes, of the Empire Hotel, Orange, N.S.W. "Some little time ago I caught a bad cold on the chest. I rubbed Zam-Buk well in over night, and in the morning felt greatly relieved. In Orange we generally experience a very severe winter, and chapped hands, sore lips, and chilblains are the outcome. For these troubles I have proved Zam-Buk unequalled. Its healing and soothing action is prompt, and the method of application simplicity itself."

FACE SORES AFTER A COLD.

Mrs. E. Bourke, a resident of College-street, Camperdown, Sydney, writes:—"I have great pleasure in testifying to the remarkable healing powers of Zam-Buk. My daughter had a breaking out on her face arising from a cold. The eruptions spread over her face, and threatened very serious results, but for the timely application of Zam-Buk. A friend advised us to use this balm, and relief was derived from the very first application, the heat and irritation being immediately soothed. In a very short time my daughter's face was completely healed, and her skin quite clear. I cannot speak too highly of Zam-Buk as a handy household healing balm, and will always recommend it."

Zam-Buk is invaluable for Eczema, Piles, Ringworm, Ulcers, Bad Legs, Sores, Old Wounds, Diseased Ankles, Blood-poison, Cracked Skin, Sore Heads, Cuts, Burns, Bruises, Scalds, Itching, Abrasions, Proud Flesh, Chronic Sores, Sore Backs, Peeling Skin, Pimples, Blisters, Children's Sores, Ringworm, Barber's Rash, Scratches, Scalp Disease, Sore Nipples, Rheumatism, Sore Feet, Boils, Festering Sores, Swollen Knees, Swellings, Sprains, Scabs, Blackheads, Chafings, Barco, Sore Heels, Poisoned Wounds, Stiffness, Sores, Teething Rash, Chapped Hands, Chilblains, etc. Sold by all Chemists and Stores, at 1/6 and 3/6 per pot; or post free direct from C. E. Fulford, (Australasia), Ltd., 30 Pitt-street, Sydney.

Everybody's friend when they have coughs and colds and their children have croup and whooping cough.

Most everyone knows me. I have been going from home to home for nearly fifty years—always welcome too, for I never fail in their hour of need.

I have helped young mothers whose babies were choking with croup and been the comfort of parents whose children tramp to school through the wet, winter weather. Many a cold and attack of bronchitis I have warded off and thousands I have helped through the anxious moments of whooping cough.

I have come to the aid of mothers and fathers when they had colds and influenza and have been a relief to old folks suffering from bronchitis and asthma.

I have had a most varied experience: I go everywhere—among the rich and the poor, in the cities and the back-blocks.

Now don't forget "Granny" Chamberlain! You will see me often now for I am going to tell of my experience and what can be done in your home with

MAKE YOUR OWN COUGH MIXTURE

— WITH —

HEAN'S ESSENCE

Saves 10/-

Thousands of mothers in every nook and cranny of Australia and New Zealand have realised the benefit of making cough mixture at home by using Hean's Essence.

Delighted parents everywhere have furnished unsolicited testimony to the value of this fine cough and cold recipe.

Previously these folks paid eighteenpence for an ordinary, small, gone-in-no-time bottle of cough mixture. Now, by using Hean's Essence, they get 7 or 8 times as much for their money.

Get a bottle of Hean's Essence from your Chemist or Grocer. Take home and dilute with water and sweetening by following the easy directions on label. You will then have a pint of the finest cough and cold syrup in the world, containing no harmful drugs such as laudanum, paregoric, etc., good for all members of your family, from baby upwards.

The mixture thus prepared soothes sore throats, eases tickling coughs, and relieves stubborn colds quickly and effectively. It is particularly good for Whooping Cough, Croup, Asthma, Bronchitis, and Influenza Coughs and Colds.

Hean's Essence is sold by Anthony Hordern and Sons, Ltd., Messrs. Pattinson and Co., Ltd., Chemists, Washington H. Soul and Co., Lassetters, Messrs. TICK ERADICATION.

Stockowners in the tick areas in this State and in Queensland have been considerably interested in the claim made by Mr. Munro Hull, of Eumundi, to have discovered a remedy for eradicating ticks. Two cows, which were obtained from Mr. Hull and kept in an infested area in Queensland, were reported to have remained immune from ticks. Although the evidence to that effect seems satisfactory, the official experts are loth apparently to accept the results as conclusive. Recently the Queensland Government Pathologist, Mr. C. J. Pound, addressed a meeting of farmers regarding this matter, and, according to the local press report, he had no faith in the value of the discovery, and stated that his observations proved that the so-called immune cows would mature ticks. He stated that he did not think that the Government was justified in spending another penny in endeavouring to follow up this claim. These opinions differed directly from those of farmers who were in touch with the experiment. One stated that he had frequently closely inspected one cow and never on any occasion found a tick. Evidently the meeting was not satisfied with the official attitude, as it was decided to ask the local member to bring the matter before Parliament at the first opportunity.

It is certainly advisable that the whole subject should be thoroughly threshed out, and the Government would be wise to have the fullest investigation made into the claim. There is a disposition at times for scientific experts to dismiss such claims too hurriedly, and to assume that it is impossible that an effective remedy could be discovered by a layman. They often are overwhelmed with alleged discoveries and remedies which will not stand the most simple investigation; yet all the same laymen have been responsible for valuable discoveries, remedies, and inventions on many occasions. Therefore it is well to avoid any biassed attitude in such matters. In the case of this tick remedy, while we have not the slightest notion as to whether it is valuable or not, some very strong evidence has been forthcoming in its favour. The Government officials, however, appeared from the beginning to take the matter lightly, so much so, that, if we remember rightly, the Minister for Agriculture decided some time ago to have the claim further investigated, as he was not satisfied that the official trial had been thorough. In this State we are interested directly in the matter, and must wish for the fullest possible investigation and experiment. While, at this stage, nothing would justify any relaxation of the most complete attempts at eradication along proven lines, we should also be ready to experiment with any claim that suggests alleviation. The discovery of a means that would eradicate the ticks effectually, without the expenditure and work required under the present system, would be of enormous value to the State and our stockowners. While we are not inclined to build up any undue hope as to its efficacy, it would certainly seem that the Munro Hull method should be more fully investigated, or some conclusive evidence of its failure furnished.

WOOL-GROWING.

Last month a conference of woolgrowers and those interested in the wool trade was held in America, being convened by the Department of Agriculture. In the course of the proceedings the Australian wool and sheep industry received a splendid advertisement, and the discussion showed that we are considerably ahead of our American competitors, not only as regards the quality of our product, but in the manner of handling the wool on the station and marketing the product. Mr. William Price, woolbuyer for the Arlington Mills at Lawrence, Mass., in reply to Dr. S. W. McClure, secretary of the National Woolgrowers' Association, said there could be no comparison between American territory wools—that is, wools grown west of Omaha—and Australian wools. "I do not think," continued Mr. Price, "that anywhere in the world is wool grown that is better than Australian wool, and I believe that nowhere else can the same favourable conditions be procured as attend woolgrowing in Australia. If in the territories there were sheep from Australia, I do not think that they would produce the same wool as in Australia."

Figures were quoted by Mr. John Fisher, a spinner of worsted yarn at Philadelphia, giving a comparison of consignments of Australian wool and wool from Idaho used by his firm in the manufacture of hosiery yarns. These showed that there was a much greater loss in off-sorts and waste in the Idaho wools than in Australian wools. On the main sort the loss on Australian wools was not more than one and a half per cent., as compared with a loss of 14 per cent. on the Idaho wools. If it were not for these losses, Idaho wools would be worth two cents a pound more in his business than wools from Australia. Mr. Fisher was enthusiastic over the way in which Australian wools are prepared, and almost equally severe in his condemnation of the way in which American wool is shipped to market. He had found tin cans, sheep shears, and sheep shearers' overalls in bales of wool.

Australian methods of raising and handling sheep were described by Mr. W. T. Ritch, a woolclasser from this country, who has recently been in the service of the Canadian Government as a wool expert. His account appeared to surprise most of the members of the conference, who were unaware of the completeness of the organisation here for shearing, preparing and marketing wool. According to the statements made at the conference, wool is not sorted or classed on the station in America. One speaker stated that it was kicked together—filth and all—and put in a sack by a hobo (tramp), who trampled it down with his boots. It took four times as long to sort American wool as Australian wool. The system of buying all wool at the same price, no matter what it was worth, which exists in practically all the wool-growing States in America, is apparently the main cause of the present troubles. It would not suit our growers. The American system of raising and handling wool is evidently very far behind the Australian.

NEPEAN DISTRICT.

POULTRY-FARMING AND FRUIT-GROWING.

THE WARRAGAMBA SCHEME.

The Nepean district is one of the oldest in the State. Originally the district was known as the Evan district. In fact, it is interesting to note, in connection with the old name, that it was called after Sir Evan Nepean, who was secretary to the British Admiralty, and was chief administrative officer in connection with the fitting out of the first fleet that came to Australia in command of Captain Phillip. Thus the noble river that flows passed the town of Penrith obtained its name. When the first settlers came they took up land at Castlereagh, coming in from Windsor and Richmond, and not by the main western road route, as we know it to-day. Some of the descendants of these pioneers still hold the land.

There is not the agricultural activity that once marked the district's progress. In the early days wheat was one of the staple products of the farm lands of the Nepean, but owing to the prevalence of rust it went out of cultivation years ago. Instead, the district has a great record in maize production, and at one time it supplied a good deal of the Sydney produce trade with that cereal. Of late years there has not been the extent of cultivation of the crop as formerly. Many of the old farms are given over to grazing. In the vicinity of St. Marys, near the railway line, are the remains of an old irrigation farm, which probably obtained its water from South Creek, which meanders through the paddocks. Irrigation must have been carried out on a fairly large scale.

That the district is capable of production is shown in the increased settlement that has taken place of late years, caused by the sub-division of estates. This has been principally in the direction of poultry-farming, which is commanding a good deal of attention. In some instances the farms are devoted entirely to egg-production, and many of the cases of "choice suburban" eggs sold in the Sydney market come from the district. The advantage is its proximity to Sydney, and railway service to Richmond. On most of the farms the White Leghorn predominates where its reputation for egg laying is well maintained. Very few of the farmers, however, make any attempt to raise table poultry other than selling the surplus Leghorn cockerels. Those that do find that the Indian game Black or Buff Orpington cross produces a table fowl of good quality. Another breed that has attracted some attention is the Red Sussex, which has good all-round qualities.

A considerable area of country is devoted to vineyards, and the hot, dry climate of the summer months suits the grapes. Fruit-growing is general throughout the district, and at Emu Plains there are some fine orchards in which citrus and summer fruits grow to perfection.

The river banks in the vicinity of Penrith are now being used for the cultivation of vegetables. Several irrigation plants have been installed with satisfactory results. It is surprising that such a small portion of the land along the river should be used for growing crops.

The Nepean River is one of the finest in the State. It has all that a river should have, and in its upper reaches is some of the finest scenery. It cleaves the mountains, which rise hundreds of feet above the stream, and where the Warragamba junctions with it there is a mighty gorge. Across this a great dam will probably be thrown some day to provide the irrigation scheme that will rejuvenate all Cumberland. It is one of the public works which has the attention of the present Government. At the present time at Norton's Basin investigations are being made relative to the flow of water, and its velocity, and the capacity of the supply. The Irrigation Commissioner (Mr. L. A. B. Wade) has already had a survey made with regard to its possibilities.

That the scheme will mean much to the country between the river and Sydney is generally admitted. Not only would it supplement the Sydney water supply, but it would make available much of the land practically at the city gates, now of little use, of great value in growing vegetables and fruit. The market for this produce would be near at hand, and in the years to come, there will be no uncertainty of the demand for it.

POTATO-GROWING.

EXPERIMENT AT GLEN INNES.

The Glen Innes potato experiment plots for last season, which were situated on the farm of Mr. Theo. Farlow, Red Range, have been dug, and the marketable tubers weighed, the following yields being obtained per acre:—

Brownell's Beauty, 4cwt P4 per acre, 4 tons 18cwt.

Satisfaction, 4cwt P4 per acre, 6 tons, 5cwt.

Carman No. 1, 4cwt P4 per acre, 6 tons 5cwt.

Manhattan, 4cwt P4 per acre, 7 tons 5cwt.

Queen of the Valley, 4cwt P4 per acre, 8 tons 15cwt.

Queen of the Valley, 4cwt P4 per acre, 9 tons.

Coronation, 4cwt P4 per acre, 10 tons 5cwt.

These yields are very good for New England, and are the result of good cultivation, good soil, and a favourable season. The tubers were sound, with very few scabby potatoes, and no grubby ones. Deep planting and hilling were against the attacks of the potato moth. The manuring did not prove of very great value, the soil being naturally a fairly rich red loam of basaltic formation. The late manuring varieties, Coronation, Premier, and Queen of the Valley gave the best returns, and can all be recommended to growers. The Manhattan and Surprise also gave good returns. These two varieties produce a very large proportion of marketable tubers. The Carman No. 1 will be tried again next season, as it was handicapped by a poor germination last season. Satisfaction will also be tried again, as it has given some very satisfactory returns in past years. On account of its present and past behaviour Brownell's Beauty will be rejected.

SYDNEY SHEEP SALES.

TASMANIANS DISSATISFIED.

The Hobart correspondent of "Dalgety's Review" writes:—"Tasmanian breeders as a general rule were very dissatisfied with the result of the Sydney sheep sales, more particularly in the merino classes. It was acknowledged that in the turn of fashions, even in sheepbreeding, the Tasmanian had to take a back seat, but they are hopeful that the time will again come when their sheep will meet with the approval and demand that had been characteristic of the State's production in past years. 'Our sheep were completely out of fashion,' said a representative breeder on his return from the sales. 'We have had a fair show in the past, and providing the present high standard is maintained, mainland breeders will later on prove just as keen, competitors as they were formerly. Nevertheless we as breeders of high-class merino sheep cannot but be disappointed with the results of the recent sales.' On the other hand, Lincoln, Shropshire, and Southdown breeders were pleased with the prices that were realised for their offerings."

FRUIT FROM WEE WAA.

Mr. J. M. Gray has forwarded to the Department of Agriculture some samples of Washington navel oranges and Lisbon lemons grown by him at Wee Waa. The oranges are very large and of a fine colour. Some are better flavoured than others, and one of the good quality flavour weighed 1lb 6oz, and was 16½in in circumference. The lemons are very fine samples, and quite equal to any Italian lemon, but some of them are rather large for commercial purposes.

NEW ZEALAND FARMERS.

HOW THEY CARRY THE LOAD.

WELLINGTON, July 24.

"No words of mine could be so eloquent of the state of the Dominion as the fact in plain figures that our Dominion of one million persons had exported £24,000,000 worth of produce." That was the optimistic note struck by Mr. J. G. Wilson in his presidential address at the Dominion conference of the New Zealand Farmers' Union. More eloquent still, he went on to say, was the fact that out of the total $5 per cent. was the produce of the land—in other words, £20,400,000 worth of produce over and above that required for New Zealand's own use was extracted from the soil and exported to pay the Dominion's debts, and to leave a surplus over our imports. He added that our public and private debts are assuming immense sums. We owe no less a sum than £227,575,724, and the interest amounts to nearly as much as the Dominion's Public revenue.

BATHURST FRUIT-GROWERS.

BATHURST.—At the annual meeting of the Bathurst Fruitgrowers' Association it was decided to ask the Minister for Agriculture to support the publication of a booklet on fruit as an article of diet, which was recommended by the Adelaide Fruitgrowers' Conference. The annual report included the following:—"Through the exertions of the association the Government has been induced to permit of the use of the Canadian fruit case on equal terms with that known as the Peacock case. Numerous other important matters affecting the industry generally have also been successfully dealt with. Owing to two successive lean apple years, the progress of the industry has perhaps been hampered, but the prospects for the future are bright, especially when the high quality of the Bathurst fruit and the eager demand for it are taken into consideration; but, notwithstanding the very bright side, growers have had to face serious disappointments. The export trade has had to suffer, and the proposal which was received for a Bathurst apple show had to be abandoned; nor has a display worthy of the district been possible in connection with the A. H. and P. Association." The following officers were elected:—President, Mr. H. S. Wark; hon. secretary and treasurer, Mr. E. G. Webb; committee, Messrs. C. H. Crago, E. Ray, R. G. Edgell, J. C. Webb, E. K. Wolstenholme; auditors, Messrs. A. J. Bond and F. D. Vaughan.

LINCOLN STUD.

By the Wakatipu's last trip from Tasmania a consignment of 50 stud Lincoln ewes, from H. R. Reid's stud, arrived to the order of Mr. E. S. Sievers, of Talune, Garah, Moree district, through the agency of Messrs. Pitt and Eastway, Sydney. Mr. Sievers also purchased a Victorian Lincoln ram (Porter bred) at the last Sydney ram sales, paying 50 guineas for this sire.

FROZEN MEAT.

THE SEASON'S EXPORT TRADE.

GREATLY INCREASED SHIPMENTS.

The 1913-14 frozen meat export season was remarkable in two respects. First, an analysis of the exports shows that no less than 90 per cent. of the total output of mutton and lamb was shipped during the first eight months of the year, and secondly that approximately 80 per cent. of the mutton and 50 per cent. of the lamb was exported from the States of New South Wales and Victoria. Leaving out of consideration the trans-Darling country, a splendid grass season was experienced over New South Wales and Victoria during the second half of 1913. Feed being abundant, and the bulk of the country only lightly stocked, lambs and sheep put on condition wonderfully. As exporters were prepared to pay relatively high prices for stock, graziers availed themselves of the good market, and the works were kept busy until January. A dry spell occurred about this time, with the result that pastures began to go off, and it was remarkable how quickly the supply of exportable stock waned. February clearances were 570,000 carcases mutton and lamb, while in March only 143,000 carcases could be shipped. As unfavourable weather conditions continued to prevail over the major portion of the two States live stock values rose steadily, and by the close of the year they had almost reached famine level. Of course killing for export under these conditions was practically impossible. A small quantity of mutton and lamb was certainly shipped each month, but that went to complete contracts. As a matter of fact a certain amount of meat which had been killed for export and was awaiting shipment was taken out of store and put into consumption in Melbourne and Sydney.

With regard to the other States, South Australia had a very dry season, and was only able to ship small quantities of frozen meat. The season in Queensland ranged from fair to good, and for the greater part of the year the good predominated. The southern works were able to operate on cattle all the year round, and a respectable tally of quarters was shipped every month. Most of the northern factories had opened by the middle of April. The lamb export season opened a good month earlier than last year. Spring lambs were coming into the works in September, and by October the supply was heavy.

The following table, which has been compiled by the "Pastoral Review," summarises the exports to all oversea ports during the season just closed, the totals for the 12 months ended June 30, 1913, being added for the purpose of comparison:—

Exports of frozen meat from Australia to all oversea ports, for the 12 months ended June 30, 1913 and 1914.

South Australia	8,046 ..	25,534
Total	1,278,879 ..	1,655,106

It will be observed that there has been a huge increase in the aggregate output, as compared with the immediately preceding twelve months. This amounts to 665,000 carcases of mutton, equal to 29 per cent.; 560,000 carcases lamb, equal to 46 per cent.; and 382,000 quarters beef, or a 30 per cent. increase. The figures relating to mutton and lamb are the more noteworthy when it is remembered that both Queensland and South Australia shipped considerably less of this class of meat than in 1912-13. New South Wales and Victoria not only made up the deficiency from those two States, they were also able to increase the total export from the Commonwealth to the extent mentioned. Adverse climatic conditions account for the falling-off in South Australia. The reason for the decrease in Queensland is more difficult to explain. That State enjoyed a very fair season on the whole, and it must be presumed that the various meat companies found cattle a more profitable line to treat than sheep. As will be seen later, the average value of beef at Smithfield was roughly ½d per lb more last year than in 1912-13, while mutton hardly realised as much. No doubt this high price of beef accounts for the relatively large shipments of beef from the other three States also.

Of the individual States Victoria figures as the largest exporter. Her clearances of over one and a quarter million lambs represents an increase over the preceding year of 562,000 carcases, equal to 75 per cent. With mutton the increase was 454,000 carcases, or 45 per cent., and with beef 107,000 quarters, or 396 per cent. A proportion of the mutton and lamb shipped from Victorian ports is drawn from the Riverina district in New South Wales. Just how large that proportion is it is impossible to say. It was certainly larger than in 1912-13, but it is doubtful if it amounted to 10 per cent. of the total. The actual exports of mutton from New South Wales ports were last season 548,000 carcases, or 60 per cent. in excess of those for the preceding year; of lambs, 106,000 carcases, equal to 30 per cent.; and of beef, 112,000 quarters, or 280 per cent. Queensland's decrease in mutton output amounted to 266,000 carcases, say, 37 per cent., and in lamb to 15,000 carcases, or 33 per cent., while the increase in beef was 14,000 quarters, equal to 11 per cent. With South Australia the falling-off in mutton was 66,000 carcases (77 per cent.) and lamb 84,000 carcases (70 per cent.); the increase in beef amounted to 22,500 quarters, or, say, 750 per cent. It may be explained that a very large percentage of this beef was fattened in Western Queensland, and sent to Adelaide as the most convenient port for slaughter and export.

BROKEN HILL MINES.

THE QUESTION OF FOUL AIR.

BROKEN HILL, Tuesday.

The Royal Commission on Broken Hill mines sat again on Monday under the presidency of Mr. B. R. Wise, K.C.

William John McBride, analyst, who gave evidence on Friday, made a number of additions to the details in the notes of his previous statements.

By Mr. Hall: Every sample tried contained more than .03 per cent. carbon dioxide, except one in the Proprietary mine, which contained exactly .03 per cent.

The Chairman: In view of the fact that this Commission is asked to inquire into the bad condition of the air in the mines, the figures in these schedules are exceedingly curious. There were 49 samples taken in 42 places, and only in 14 is the temperature shown to be above 80 degrees. In all of these the quantity of foul air is considerably below the amount which all authorities agree to be harmless. There is only one place where the temperature is above the Victorian standard and I do not find a single instance where it is as hot as the Western Australian standard, 87 degrees dry and 86 degrees wet. Either these samples are not fairly representative of the mines, or there has been a great deal of false misrepresentation as to the state of the atmosphere.

Mr. Edwards pointed out that the samples were taken in places pointed out by Samuel Dred, check inspector of the A.M.A.

The chairman said 86 degrees dry and 85 degrees wet were the worst places. Then the amount of oxygen, too, was higher than was required by either Great Britain or any State here. In most places it was over 20 per cent. The conditions of the mines here were better than they were in either Western Australia or Victoria.

RAILWAY SAWMILLERS.

Representations having been made to the Amalgamated Railway and Tramway Service Association that sawmillers and labourers employed in the Eveleigh sawmill were being paid less than the outside rates, the general secretary, Mr. Claude Thompson, got into communication with the department, and after negotiations the Chief Commissioner decided that the rates prevailing outside the service should be made applicable to sawmillers and labourers inside the service. This means a rise of at least 1s a day to all men concerned.

ALDERMANIC INFLUENCE.

SERIOUS STATEMENTS.

INTERFERENCE WITH THE OFFICERS.

Judging by the statements made by members of a deputation to the Minister for Health yesterday, the sanitary inspector's life is by no means that of the policeman of opera fame. According to one gentleman who spoke, the officers never knew when they were going to run foul of the aldermen, and thus lose their positions.

The deputation waited on Mr. Flowers to ask him to consider the resolutions agreed to by the members of the Sanitary Association at their last conference. One of the most important was that which sought to compel the municipal councils to accept the salary of the sanitary inspector from the Government. At present, they said, a council could decline this money, and thus get supreme control of the officer. Even when a council did take the money, it did not allow an inspector to devote his time to the proper work of looking after the health of the district, but put him on ordinary council work. One member stated that nineteen-twentieths of a man's time was taken up in duties apart from those relating to health matters.

Mr. J. L. Waters claimed that more attention should be paid to the health of the community, and that an inspector should not be at the mercy of a council. At Wollongong, he stated, he had commenced a house-to-house inspection, and all went well till he reached the home of a strong friend of one of the aldermen. That was the end of his tour, for he was taken off and put to other work. He had done half one side of a street, and out of the large number of houses he had visited there were only a few fit for habitation.

Other members of the deputation substantiated the statements regarding the interference of aldermen when their friends were affected by the inspectors' reports.

Mr. Flowers said this was a very important statement, and he was glad they had the courage to come to him and be frank about the matter. If they were to get proper service from the health inspectors they must be clothed with sufficient independence to carry out their work without fear of anyone, even if the Government had to pay the whole of the cost. He would call for a report on the matter, and give it his prompt attention. As it was, the Government paid one-half of the salary, and the councils had full control. That was not right.

Mr. Crackenthorpe emphasised the necessity for freedom from interference. He instanced a case where he was employed in a country town. He prosecuted an alderman for a breach of the Health Act, and the job was made that hot for him that he had to retire a month after the court case.

Mr. Flowers: A man should be protected from that sort of thing.

SOCIAL REFORM.

ADDRESS BY THE REV. C. SHELDON.

CHRISTIAN POLICE.

"Half your police force should be women, and your policemen should be big, hearty fellows and good Christians—in reality, missionaries."

This advice was given by the Rev. Charles Sheldon, D.D., the well-known American social reformer, and formerly Mayor of Topeka, Kansas, for the making of happier citizens. The advice was tendered at an informal gathering, at which he was the chief guest, at the Town Hall yesterday.

Dr. Sheldon said that some of the greatest problems of humanity confronted those engaged in civic administration. They could not get as many people as they would like to go into the beautiful country, the tendency all the world over being to flock to the cities. All the time the big cities were growing bigger. Therefore, the duty devolved upon them to make the cities as clean and as healthy and as good to live in as possible. He was a member of the municipal commission of Topeka, in Kansas, and it occurred to him that they might like to hear something of the experiments that had been carried out there. One of the things they had done was to appoint two Christian young women to the police force. Women could deal best with their own sex and with children, and half the police force of any town ought to be composed of them. The policemen ought to be big, hearty fellows, and good Christians. If the authorities in Sydney would let him pick a police force he would guarantee to reduce the crime by half within five years. He would pick Christian young men and Christian women, too—people with large sympathies and good sense.

A Voice: What about the burglars?

Dr. Sheldon said that young men and women from the best homes were sent now as missionaries to the heathen, but folk seemed to have the idea that for the control of the unfortunates in our own land any sort of men would do. That was one of the great reforms needed. Police officers should do really be missionaries. They could help tremendously in the uplifting of humanity; When they got rid of liquor they would have made a gigantic step forward. Vice largely disappeared when the drink traffic disappeared. In Kansas there was not a single drink saloon, thank God. (Hear, hear.) What was the result of prohibition? Kansas had the greatest per capita wealth of any State. There were proportionately more people there who owned their own homes and the land upon which their houses were built than in any other State. They had the smallest pauper and penitentiary population, and their death rate was the lowest. Those facts supplied the answer as to whether prohibition was worth fighting for or not. It was considered exceedingly bad taste to put liquor on a table in Kansas now.

"The world is undoubtedly getting better every day," continued Dr. Sheldon. "It is a far better place than it was when Jesus was born. Think of the things we have that were not in existence when Christ was upon earth. He never saw an organised Church, Sunday school, Public school, peace societies, hospitals, asylums for the blind, deaf and dumb and insane. There were none of those and other institutions for the benefit of suffering humanity in His day. If they wanted one of the finest cities in the world they might have it in Sydney, but they would first have to get rid of the drink traffic root and branch, and then they would be happier, healthier, and wealthier than they were now." (Applause.)

The Lord Mayor and the Rev. R. B. S. Hammond also spoke.

TARIFF INQUIRY.

IRON TRADE.

EVIDENCE OF MANUFACTURERS.

Mr. Charles Henry Hoskins, a director of G. and C. Hoskins, Ltd., of Lithgow, applied to the Interstate Commission yesterday for a bounty of 10s a ton on pig iron made for foundry purposes only; a duty of 15 per cent. advalorem on steel rails of British manufacture, and 20 per cent. on foreign; a duty of 20 per cent. ad valorem on galvanised sheets, plain or corrugated; a duty of £2 a ton on all iron or steel sheets, bar and sections; that the duty on fishplates, fishbolts, and spikes for railway purposes be increased to 25 per cent; that the duty on wrought iron and steel pipes over four inches in diameter be £5 a ton.

Mr. G. D. Delprat, general manager of Broken Hill Proprietary Company, Ltd., who was called by the Crown, said his company was now engaged in laying out extensive iron and steel works near Newcastle.

Witness said he had made no application for duty, because when he contemplated making structural steel and steel rails, he thought if he could not live without a duty he would not live at all. He thought this after he had made his estimate of cost, and he had now no reason to doubt his ability to do so. He would be able to do this without extra duties. With one blast furnace he would be able to make 120,000 tons of steel a year. He would not ask for any additional duty on rails, structural steel, steel bar, and so forth, and could manufacture at a profit without a duty on a small scale. But the existing duty or an increased duty would enable the steel industry to be established on a broader basis, which he desired.

The Commission adjourned until next morning, when further evidence will be given by Mr. Delprat.

OPERATIVE STONEMASONS.

BOORABIL.

MATTER CONSIDERED BY CABINET.

EVIDENCE OF PREMIER.

MINISTERIAL ATTITUDE.

POLITICAL PRESSURE DENIED.

The inquiry into the purchase of Boorabil Estate by the Government was continued yesterday before Mr. Justice Pring, sitting as a Royal Commission.

Mr. Rolin, K.C. (instructed by Mr. Harnett, of the Crown Solicitor's Office), appeared to assist the Commissioner.

The Premier, Mr. W. A. Holman, whose name had been mentioned in the case, was called as a witness.

Mr Holman said he returned from a visit to England on about June 3 or 4, 1913, and then, for the first time, acted as Premier. Asked what he knew of the matter, the Premier said the first he remembered of the matter was Mr. Jones, ex-M.L.A., coming to see him in the Chief Secretary's Office early in July, 1913. It was before July 17, when the matter was finally determined by the Cabinet at Moss Vale. Mr. Jones told him first that he was anxious to go up to his electorate, and he said that he and Mr. Osborne had been engaged in a land matter of some importance, and complained that he could not get the Minister for Lands (Mr. Trefle) to deal with it. He added that the Minister and the Advisory Board were in favour of it. He said that everybody, including the local member and the people of the district, was in favour of it, but he could not get Mr. Trefle to make up his mind. He said: "Can you, as a matter of favour to me, ask Mr. Trefle to take it up and deal with it at once?"

"I had no idea," resumed Mr. Holman, "that the matter had been before Cabinet before. If I attended the Cabinet at which the case came up before it must have been been dealt with before my arrival, and after my departure at the meeting."

THE FIRST CABINET.

The Premier said that if the Cabinet meeting at which it was dealt with was held before he arrived at the meeting, he would not, of course, know anything about it. "My strong impression was," said Mr. Holman, "that I had not heard of it before when Mr. Jones mentioned it." He certainly did not identify it with a matter that had been before the Cabinet. He had no recollection of having seen Mr. Osborne on the matter. "If," he continued, "Mr. Osborne says he spoke to me about it at Moss Vale, I have no recollection of it. It is quite possible, but I have no recollection of it."

Mr. Rolin: Is the interview with Mr. Jones the one interview that you recollect?—Yes; the only one I had with either Mr. Jones or Mr. Osborne about the matter.

His Honor: Did you not know when it was before the Cabinet at Moss Vale that it had been rejected by the Cabinet?

Mr. Holman: No; strangely enough I did not. Mr. Trefle took it for granted, perhaps, that as it had been before the Cabinet before I knew it had been, and he did not mention it. If I was not present on the first occasion I would not, of course, have known of it. As a matter of fact, it was only when I saw the papers two or three weeks ago that I learned it had been previously before the Cabinet.

In reply to Mr. Rolin, Mr. Holman said that the Cabinet had dealt with the Boorabil matter on the line of policy of throwing as much land as possible open along the routes of railways about to be constructed. He had interviewed Mr. Hare, the Under-Secretary of Lands, soon after assuming the Premiership on the broad question of policy of having as much of this class of land made available at once, and had told him that the Works Department would back up this line of land policy by pushing ahead with the railway lines along which any such land lay.

RETURN FROM ENGLAND.

A message had been sent out to ascertain when Mr. Holman had returned from London to Sydney, and the reply came from the Treasury office that he had returned on Thursday, June 5.

His Honor: He could not have been at that Cabinet meeting at all.

Mr. Rolin: You know, Mr. Holman, the suggestion is that an improper motive actuated the Cabinet. Can you say whether anything was said by Mr. Jones or anybody else, or whether any influence was brought to bear upon you or anybody else that you knew of, except what you have already told the Commission?

Mr. Holman: Absolutely nothing beyond what I have said. Nothing else was mentioned by Mr. Jones. The only personal consideration that was mentioned by Mr. Jones was that he wanted to pay a visit to his electorate before the session commenced, and he was being kept hanging about Sydney over a matter that ought to be settled. That was, of course, a consideration from the party point of view, but it was merely an argument for hastening the matter. He was the secretary of our party at that time, I think.

PARLIAMENTARY LAND AGENTS.

His Honor referred to a remark incidentally dropped by Mr. Holman, in the course of his evidence, that the question of Osborne and Jones being land agents was known in Parliament on both sides, and had been the subject of comment, and his Honor asked him to explain what he meant.

Mr. Holman replied: "The majority of members of my own party are opposed to members of Parliament acting as land agents at all. That was not the subject of criticism of Mr. Jones or Mr. Osborne, but it was a principle of the party that it should not be so, and it was said that it was not consistent that members of our party should be acting as land agents when we, as a party, were opposed to the idea that members of Parliament should do that. I may say here that, in my opinion, it was not consistent." The Premier added that he regarded the practice of members of Parliament acting as land agents as a bad one, because it was open to abuse, and laid the members themselves open to suspicion. He said he noticed from the evidence already given that the suggestion had been made that something of that kind had taken place. "There is no question," he informed his Honor "of any political pressure on Mr. Jones's part. I wish to deny that suggestion categorically."

His Honor: Not political pressure in the sense that he intimated you would lose his vote if you did not carry it through. That is what you mean?

Mr. Holman: Yes.

His Honor: But as you say, it is always open to suspicion?

Mr. Holman: Undoubtedly. Nothing else beyond what I have said was ever mentioned by Mr. Jones.

THE VOTE.

Mr. Rolin: Osborne and Jones were not wavering members of the party?—No; I only wish that all members had been as loyal. If they had, I would not have had the time I have had during the last three years. (Laughter.)

Mr. Rolin asked if it would not have been a different thing if the two members were wavering supporters.

Mr. Holman: Yes, if they had been.

His Honor: You know they voted in favour of this?

Mr. Holman: Yes; I have seen that since.

Did you notice it at the time?—No.

I suppose you would not approve of that?—Certainly not. I don't think that possibly can be defended.

Mr. Holman said he did not himself remember to have voted on the occasion.

The Parliamentary votes and proceedings were referred to by his Honor, who intimated that they disclosed that the Premier did not vote in that division.

The commission at this stage adjourned to later in the day to enable the Premier to furnish certain dates.

Mr. Holman, continuing his evidence, said that from newspaper reports he returned to Sydney after his trip on June 5 or 6.

Mr. Rolin: With reference to your policy as to inquiries you made as to land being available on the proposed western railways, what have you to say?

Mr. Holman: The first letter I sent is one dated June 13, a week after my return. It was a letter to Mr. Trefle on the general question of the improvement lease areas. I took up the duties of Acting Premier on June 17. From June 17 to 30 there was a kind of interregnum while Mr. M'Gowen was taking a holiday. The letter I sent was not due to any intimation I received from Mr. Jones, whom I did not hear from till eight or ten days later.

Mr. Rolin: Mr. Hare gives me another document bearing on your land policy with a copy of a note by you, dated June 30.

Mr. Justice Pring: I think we are going right outside the scope of this commission.

Mr. Rolin: What struck me was the apparent change of policy between June 3 and July 14, and it seemed to me that was a matter to be inquired into as to whether that had been induced by any improper means or anything of that sort.

Mr. Justice Pring: Mr. Holman told us his course was to open up the lands in advance of the railways. I don't see the use of this document.

Mr. Rolin: I was producing these documents to bear out that statement.

Mr. Justice Pring: I am quite satisfied with his statement about the matter.

Mr. Holman: Within a week of my return from England I had commenced to make inquiries as to the possibility of developing a new policy—that is to say, before June 13, and whatever was done after that date was done as the result of the adoption of that policy. That had no connection of any kind with any representations made by Mr. Jones. It was before and apart from any representations by him. I moved from the Attorney-General's office to that of the Chief Secretary on June 17, and I saw Mr. Jones after that date. The date of the Cabinet meeting, at which the Boorabil matter was finally settled, was July 14. Clearly, I must have seen Mr. Jones between June 17 and July 14.

To Mr. Rolin: As far as my recollection goes, I was not quite so definite as stated in the letter by Mr. Jones. I took his assurance that Mr. Trefle himself thought the bargain was a good one.

To Mr. Justice Pring: I met Mr. Osborne at Moss Vale, and I do not think that the matter was mentioned. I can make this suggestion, as a reason why Mr. Osborne was pressing the matter on July 17. He might have been unaware of the decision at the Cabinet meeting on July 14.

Mr. Justice Pring: What I cannot understand is that, as soon as he mentioned the matter, it would have been the natural course to say that the matter had been settled. (To Mr. Rolin): Mr. Holman does not recollect Osborne saying anything about it.

Mr. Rolin: All that Osborne said was that he mentioned it to Mr. Holman, who, he said, expressed surprise, and said he would look into it.

Mr. Holman: I have searched my memory, but it is an absolute blank on the matter. Of course I do not say that Mr. Osborne did not mention it.

The Minister for Lands, Mr. Trefle, was the next witness. He said he was having investigations made regarding all the leases along the line, with a view of resuming them as rapidly as he could while the railway was being built, when Mr. Wilkinson put these proposals before him. The matter was eventually referred to the Advisory Board for a report. Wilkinson was a most persistent man. He endeavoured to get a number of interviews, and became quite a nuisance. (Laughter.) He understood from Wilkinson that Niall was anxious to sell the property. It was put to him that Niall was in an awkward position, because he knew the property would eventually go, and he wished to lift the money and place it in leasehold. That seemed a satisfactory explanation of eagerness to sell the property. The Under-Secretary was opposed to the scheme, and he (witness) was equally opposed to it. Witness said to Niall, "Unless you are prepared to accept Government debentures at par I will not submit it to the Cabinet." He said he was prepared, and witness submitted the matter to the Cabinet on June 11. It was late in the day, and the Cabinet did not go into the details of the proposal at all. It put the question to him hurriedly. He said he wanted finality, and, in reply to a question, said he was not prepared to take it at present. The Cabinet then said, "Well, minute it to that effect." The original proposal of holding it for three years was one he would not countenance for a moment. Some time after that Mr. Holman saw him, and said, "What objection is there to taking over Boorabil?" Witness said, "I have one principal objection. I am not satisfied with the pace that Mr. Griffith is building that railway, and I am not inclined to place people on the land two years before they get a railway." They threshed out the question at a Cabinet meeting, and Mr. Griffith thoroughly satisfied him that the railway would be within reach of these blocks within two years. Before taking the matter to the Cabinet he asked the Under-Secretary, Mr. Hare, to go into it again with him, and witness put the question to Mr. Hare, "If we take the land and make it available immediately what would be your opinion?" He said that practically removed his objections. Mr. Hare's minute was written on the original proposal, holding it over for three years. Between those two Cabinet meetings witness saw Jones, who said the late Mr. Kelly had spoken to him about Boorabil, and had expressed surprise at it being allowed to stand over. Witness saw Mr. Kelly, who was ill in bed. Mr. Kelly said, "Wilkinson told me you have put this matter off." Witness said "only for a while. We will take the property all right."

Mr. Rolin: Did you see Jones?—I fancy I saw him once, but not at the office.

Had you more than one visit from Jones?—Only the one.

Mr. Justice Pring: That Cabinet meeting of the 14th was at Sydney. Were you at the Moss Vale one?—Yes.

Did you see Mr. Osborne there?—Yes, I saw him there, electioneering.

Did not you speak to him about the matter there?—I feel confident I did not.

To Mr. Rolin: I took it for granted that Jones and Osborne were acting in a business capacity. At first I thought possibly they were not.

Mr. Rolin: Did Jones mention Wilkinson at all?—I don't remember, but I don't think so. I think he merely conveyed to me what took place between him and Kelly.

Did you in your interviews give him to understand you were more favourable to the matter than the Advisory Board?—No, Wilkinson was all the time trying to persuade me. He used to do the talking and I used to do the listening. I used to leave him alone as much as possible. (Laughter.)

Continuing Mr. Trefle said that in all his land transactions he never budged an inch in liberality towards the vendors beyond the valuers' or the Advisory Board's figures.

Mr. Rolin: If Wilkinson said he was anxious to get it from the board to the Minister, as you were more favourable to it, would there be any ground for the statement?—Absolutely none. At no stage did I want the matter.

"Up to the time that Mr. Holman became Premier," said Mr. Trefle, "the land administrative policy was practically worked on lines I chose myself, but he wanted me to do in three months what an ordinary man could do in twelve, and the amount of information we got out at the time was enormous."

Mr. Trefle said that, for fear a statement made by him on the occasion of the visit of Mr. Niall might be made to appear as if he had something in his mind at the time, he desired to say he had not. No one had seen him before Wilkinson when he first took the matter up to the Cabinet. As he had heard many stories of days gone by, he thought his hesitancy might be made the lever to go to Niall and make the vendors believe that if money were given it would help the matter along. "I called Niall back," said Mr. Trefle, "after the interview with him and Wilkinson and M'Leod. It was at 2.30 p.m. on Friday, May 30, and I said, 'You are a gentleman occupying a high and honourable position. I take it for granted you are a gentleman, and I can speak to you. I have a position that I value highly, but I must protect myself. Should any person go to you—I am not suggesting any person will—and say that extra payments will make any difference to you, I want you to understand there is no truth in that statement, and if Mr. Hare or I get on the track of anything of that kind that will be the end of the resumption.' He thanked me. I had no idea that anything improper would happen, but I had heard that in days gone by stories that in delays of this kind money was needed to make the matter go along. I was afraid that some unscrupulous person might get money by false pretences. This was the first big transaction of this kind, and I was cautious."

MEMBERS AS LAND AGENTS.

Mr. Trefle went on to say that, while he knew of nothing improper on the part of any Parliamentary land agent, he had always had the strongest personal objections to members of Parliament acting as paid agents in these matters. Some years ago, when he was delegate from Temora, he had got inserted in the platform of the party a plank that members of Parliament should not be land agents. He had now the Cabinet's consent to bring in a bill dealing with the matter, but it had been decided to allow the bill to stand over until they got the benefit of the Commissioner's report.

Mr. Justice Pring: How long has that been on the platform?

Mr. Trefle: It has been there for eight years.

Mr. Justice Pring: How comes it, then, that two members of the party are land agents?

Mr. Trefle: It is a matter for their constituents and the executive. It is not on the fighting platform, but forms one of the details. While members of Parliament may act ever so honourably, the public are always ready to suspect them when they would not suspect other people.

Mr. Justice Pring: There is this additional matter, that these two gentlemen voted in favour of this proposal in the House.

Mr. Trefle: Yes. Of course, the majority was two to one.

Mr. Justice Pring: Yes; but they might have been evenly balanced.

Mr. Trefle: Yes; there was that possibility.

The Commission adjourned till this morning.

PARLIAMENT.

THE STATE SESSION.

SUPPLY BILL.

SUGGESTED POLICE COMMISSION.

In the Legislative Assembly last night the Premier and Treasurer, Mr. Holman, gave notice for the following sitting of a supply bill. He intimated that he would move that it be carried through all its stages during the one sitting.

NORTH COAST RAILWAY.

The Minister for Public Works, in reply to Mr. M'Farlane, said that a large number of men who were engaged in railway construction work on the North Coast line had been transferred to the duplication works on the trunk railway lines. He added that, approximately, £491,377 had been expended during the year ended June 30 last on the North Coast railway, and it was proposed to curtail the amount during the current year, but to what extent had not been definitely determined.

It was also stated by Mr. Griffith that the amount expended on the section from South Grafton to Glenreagh up to June 30 last was £261,643.

ELECTION IRREGULARITIES.

The Chief Secretary stated, in reply to the leader of the Opposition, that information was supplied to the department that Florence Slater had voted at the election for Hurstville last year, and that she was not enrolled. It was decided not to take any action, on account of the physical condition of Mrs. Slater. Information was also supplied that three persons of the name of Moran, who were enrolled for Stanmore polling-place, Enmore electoral division, were under age. The collector was reprimanded for not satisfying himself as to the age of the persons named, who were recent arrivals from England, and did not record a vote either at the first or second ballot. No steps were taken to punish the parties on the advice of the Crown Solicitor, to whom the matter was referred.

GARBAGE ON BEACHES.

The Premier promised Dr. Arthur that action would be taken with a view to minimising as much as possible the pollution of the beaches by garbage and offal being washed up from the ocean.

POLICE FORCE COMMISSION.

Mr. Thrower moved,—"That a Royal Commission be appointed to inquire into and report upon the administration of the police force of New South Wales." There were, he said, loud rumblings of discontent throughout the force. There was also distrust in the public mind regarding the administration of the force. When they found policemen being sent to gaol day after day for committing crimes that they were sworn to prevent, there must be something rotten in the State of Denmark.

Mr. Cohen: They are tried before a jury of their countrymen, are they not?

Mr. Thrower declared that he had evidence to place before a Royal Commission that would startle New South Wales as to the system of administration of the Police Department. If the Government would assure him that inquiries would be made in this direction he would not press the matter to a division.

The Chief Secretary (Mr. Cann): I am making inquiries now.

Mr. Larkin seconded the motion.

Mr. Perry secured the adjournment of the debate till next Tuesday.

CARRIAGE OF WHEAT.

Mr. Ball moved,—"That, in the opinion of this House, the Government should introduce a bill to provide for a bonus to be paid growers of wheat at a rate per bushel, or per ton, to cover extra cost of cartage and haulage beyond a 15-mile limit from a railway."

The debate was adjourned till next Tuesday on the motion of Mr. Scobie.

ADJOURNMENT.

The House adjourned at 8.5 p.m. till this afternoon.

RAILWAY TIPPING.

ASSEMBLY DISCUSSION.

DEPARTMENTAL ACTION URGED.

The system of tipping, which is said to exist on the New South Wales railways, was discussed in the Legislative Assembly last night.

The matter came up on a motion by Mr. Dooley:—"(1) That a Select Committee be appointed to inquire into and report upon the question of tips or gratuities, particularly in Government departments; (2) that such committee consist of Mr. Hoyle, Mr. M'Girr, Mr. Lang, Mr. Scobie, Mr. John Storey, Lieutenant-Colonel Braund, Mr. Richards, Mr. Grimm, and the mover."

"I say very emphatically," said Mr. Dooley, "that anyone who travels on the railways realises that this system of tipping is growing to such an extent that something should be done speedily to put an end to it. If anyone takes a cab or a taxi to the Central Railway Station he will find, when he arrives, eight or nine porters waiting anxiously to carry his luggage and put it into a first-class compartment. But, at the same time, you will see some poor woman arrive by tram with a few children and some heavy luggage, and there is not one railway official to see that she is given a hand. (Cheers.) It is disgraceful, and there is sufficient power in the Railway Department itself to frame a regulation providing that the official who fails to give attention to the people who really want it and only pay particular attention to those from whom they will get one or two shillings should be dealt with."

Dr. Arthur, who said that the tipping system in vogue in Great Britain and the Continent was "a sickening state of affairs," thought it was creeping in generally in New South Wales, and had got a hold in the railway service.

Mr. M'Gowen, while approving of the principle underlying the motion, doubted whether effect could be given to it.

Mr. Morrish said that where wages boards awards were operating there was no reason why the tipping system should exist.

The Chief Secretary (Mr. Cann) thought it would be as well if the railway men were given a fixed wage, and were not compelled to rely upon the generosity of the public.

Mr. Perry was prepared to vote for the committee if its efforts were directed towards clearing up the insinuations made against certain officers in the Government departments.

Mr. Edden pointed to the fact that tipping was forbidden by the railway regulations. It was going on all over the place, and he could not see what good the committee could do.

The proposal was denounced by Mr. J. Storey.

Mr. Cohen: We know all the facts, so what do we want the inquiry for?

The motion was negatived by 21 votes to 20.

CITY GARBAGE.

DIFFICULTY STILL UNSETTLED.

Another long debate on the subject of the disposal of the garbage of the city took place in the City Council last evening, the whole matter being referred back to the committee.

Alderman Evan Jones, the chairman of the committee, strenuously protested against "this battledore and shuttlecock business." For the past couple of years, he said, the committee had been striving to solve the garbage problem, but every time it brought forward a proposal it fell on unsympathetic ears.

The proposal the committee made this time was that tenders be invited for punting to sea the refuse that could not be dealt with by the destructors.

Alderman Lindsay Thompson characterised this as a barbarous method of getting rid of the garbage.

The Lord Mayor said he believed in dealing with all the garbage at the destructor, the capacity of which should be increased, and he would bring forward a scheme, provided he was supplied with certain information, that would do away with the necessity for taking any rubbish to sea.

Alderman Jones stated that he had never known an instance of a successful destructor, and he understood that in England this system of disposing of rubbish had come to be regarded as very unsatisfactory.

The Lord Mayor: I think you are wrong.

CEASE-WORK MEETING.

METTERS, LTD., EMPLOYEES.

The employees of Metters, Ltd., stove, range, and windmill makers, of Alexandria, ceased work yesterday, and held a meeting at the Trades Hall. They were addressed by Mr. M. Henwood, who had, as the arbitration representative of the Labour Council, advocated their claims before the wages board. He explained to them what they might expect under the new award, and they decided to resume work this morning.

REV. J. D. JONES.

ENTERTAINED AT LUNCHEON.

A GREAT CHURCH.

Between 250 and 300 lay members of the Congregational Union of New South Wales attended a luncheon at Sargent's Cafe yesterday in honour of the Rev. J. D. Jones, the visiting commissioner from the Congregational Union of England and Wales. Among those present were the Rev. R. B. Reynolds (Chairman of the Union), Sir James Fairfax, Sir Philip Sydney Jones, Rev. Dr. Roseby, Mr. R. W. Hardie, Rev. Mr. Patison, Mr. R. Dalleu, Rev. J. Henwood Thoms, Rev. N. J. Cocks, Rev. J. Dempsey, Rev. Cuniffe Jones, Rev. R. A. Thompson, and Mr. Sutton.

The toast of "The King" was followed by that of the distinguished guest, proposed by Mr. R. W. Hardie, and supported by Sir Philip Sydney Jones, who alluded to Dr. Jones's "personal magnetism and Welsh fire." "Dr. Jones comes to us," said Mr. Hardie, "charged with a very grave and heavy responsibility."

Dr. Jones, in reply, said that one of the advantages of living at Bournemouth, which was one of the most beautiful places in England, was that every visitor to England went there, and he had thus met people there from all parts of the British Empire. He had been privileged to preach to several of his present hosts, and he hoped they were all the better for it. (Laughter.) He had been a Congregational minister for 25 years, 16 at Bournemouth and nine at Lincoln, and in all that time he had never known what it was to have a single unkind speech addressed to him by any of his parishioners or those associated in his work. He firmly believed that if the particular witness of Congregationalism were lost it would be an irreparable loss to Christianity. England to-day would not be what she was were it not for Congregationalism, which, on the whole, had produced, and was producing, more great men of service to their country than any other denomination, the Church of England included. All through her history she had occupied that position, and to-day 71 members of the House of Commons were Congregationalists. The Church in Australia was but the child of the Church in England; her glorious history was equally the birthright of the Church in Australia; and it would have been worth while to travel all those thousands of miles by land and sea if the result of his visit were to cause the old idealism to gleam the more brightly in this new land.

The luncheon concluded by the singing of the National Anthem.

DR. JONES AT MOSMAN.

There was a very large audience in the Mosman Congregational Church last night, when the Rev. J. D. Jones explained the mission of the Congregational Church, and the reason for its existence. He declared that the Church had a great future, as well as a great past. "We have got to the stage in our history when we are asked: 'What can you do?' We have to ask ourselves whether or not we have some service which we can render and which would not be so well done if we were not here. Our Congregationalism was born in Evangelism. When it loses its passion for evangelism, it loses the truth of its origin. It exists primarily, not to make Congregationalists, but to make Christians.

"I think it is the peculiar business of the Congregational Church to translate the old Gospel into terms of modern thought and speech. I believe that the Church that does this will do a great work. The Old Gospel has to be restated. We are absolutely free to do this. It is not a bit of use asking our ministers to go on preaching as if nothing had happened during the past 50 years. The people in the pews are reading, and the policy of 'hush-up' is wrong; but the man who is required is the one who can show the people what they owe to Christ, the saving of their souls. We are a denomination with Christian freedom, that we might give light, and so save life. If the Church does that it will be rendering a great service to the Kingdom of God."

The speaker went on to point out the great facilities that the Congregationalists had for Christianising the democracy. He did not believe in the "divine right of democracies," any more than in the divine right of Kings, which our forefathers fought against. He did not believe also that vox populi was vox Dei. In the long run, the only thing that was going to build up a nation was honour and righteousness.

STEAM HOPPER BARGES.

PURCHASED BY HARBOUR TRUST.

ARRIVAL OF THE SEAGULL.

The steam hopper barge Seagull, which is the first of three similar vessels purchased in Rangoon for the Sydney Harbour Trust, arrived yesterday, and was moored to a buoy in Kerosene Bay.

The Seagull, the Swallow, and the Curlew were specially built for certain work at Rangoon, and, as that has now been finished, the Sydney Harbour Trust has been able to secure them at a reasonable price.

The Seagull has a carrying capacity of 1000 tons, and when she was built, went from England to Rangoon under her own steam. The three vessels frequently conveyed material 100 miles in foul weather and fine, so that the long voyage from Rangoon to Australia did not present any extraordinary difficulties. The Seagull, which was in charge of Captain F. J. Toole, steamed from Rangoon to Sydney in 31 days.

The Seagull is a vessel of 859 tons, and is 206 feet long, 33.1 feet broad, and 14.7 feet deep. She was built by W. Simons and Co., Ltd., of Renfrew, in 1909. Her crew consists of three officers, three engineers, and 27 coolies. She will remain in Kerosene Bay until arrangements are completed for shipping the coolies back to India. Captain Toole is also returning, and will bring out the Curlew, the Swallow being already on her way out.

The Seagull, Curlew, and Swallow will be engaged as tenders to the new ladder dredge now being built for the Commissioners at Cockatoo Dock, and being self-propelled, will be in every way preferable to the ordinary barges hitherto in use in the port. They will cost the Commissioners about £14,000 each delivered in Sydney, which is regarded as a very satisfactory purchase, especially in view of the urgency of dredging operations necessary in the upper part of the harbour, to meet the demand of the increasing trade and deeper draft vessels.

ALLEGATIONS AGAINST POLICE.

"FLINGING MUD AT THE FORCE."

At the Redfern Police Court yesterday, during the hearing of a case, in which George Tall was charged with assaulting a constable, allegations were made by defendant against the police.

Defendant, a young man of 24, pleaded not guilty to the charge. On July 24, he said, the constable had threatened him with a baton, and he told the constable he would be better employed getting the graft money from George Dan.

George Dan, it transpired, kept a billiard saloon in Regent-street, Redfern.

Mr. Barnett: Why did you ask the constable to go to Dan's and get his "graft money?"

Defendant: I saw the proprietor of that saloon giving the constable some money. I understood that it was so that the place could be kept open after 12 o'clock.

Mr. Barnett: Do you say that you saw money pass?

Defendant: I saw something shiny handed over.

Defendant was submitted to a severe cross-examination by Mr. Barnett, and admitted that he had only seen money given. There had been no conversation; but he had heard since that the cash was handed by Dan to the constable for the purpose previously mentioned.

Sub-Inspector Bannan: I would ask your Worship to allow me to send for Dan at once, before there can be any likelihood of collusion between this constable and the saloon proprietor. This is a very serious allegation against the morality of the police. It seems to be fashionable nowadays to fling mud at the police, and I wish a full inquiry to be made into this case.

Mr. Barnett pointed out that, much as he would like to assist the sub-inspector, he could not break the rule of the court by interpolating another case.

Mr. Fealey, who appeared for the defendant, objected to having a herring drawn across the trail. This charge against the police, he said, had nothing to do with the case.

Mr. Barnett said that the sub-inspector could take other steps.

The Sub-Inspector: I will send for Dan and get a statement from him, your Worship.

The defendant was remanded till July 30. Bail was allowed, self in £20, with the usual sureties.

BEAUTIFY YOUR HOME WITH PARIPAN.

The decoration of your home is a matter that requires attention. Paripan, the lacquer enamel which is so durable, artistic, and economical, is far more effective than ordinary paints or distempers. Paripan is made up in a variety of exquisite tints, which can be applied to walls and woodwork, and make your rooms fresh, bright, and sanitary.

FOR THE DINING-ROOM.
You need something darker than the tints selected for the other rooms—walls in self-colour dull Paripan, and the woodwork in Paripan Glossy of a suitable tint.
This combination forms a beautiful decorative effect.

FOR THE BEDROOM.
Dark colours should have no place here. Light and dainty should be the keynote. Paripan Flat for the walls and Paripan Glossy for the woodwork will enable you to get just what is necessary. Paripan keeps the rooms free from germs and dirt.

Write for full particulars of Paripan to the Sole Agents in N.S.W. and Queensland—

HAYES.—In sad but loving memory of our dear mother, Jessie Hayes, who departed this life at Hayesville, Bega, on the 29th day of July, 1913, aged 62 years.

A life made beautiful by acts of love,
And kindly sympathy with those distressed,
Has now ended in its home above,
Her spirit mingles with the ransomed blest,
And we are left to mourn our darling dead,
And pray that unto us grace be given,
To live a life as pure as that she led,
And gain the bliss of meeting her in heaven.
Abide with Me.

Inserted by her loving children.

HENDERSON.—In sad but loving memory of my dear sister, Edith May, who departed this life July 28, 1912, aged 41 years.

She has gone to her rest and her troubles are o'er;
She has done with sorrow and pain;
And the ills of this world, which she patiently bore,
Will never distress her again.

Inserted by her loving brother, Reginald Robinson.

HOWES.—In loving memory of my daughter and our sister, Clara, who departed this life July 29, 1913, aged 20.

Always of you, dear Clara, we're thinking;
Grieved to be torn from you apart.
In tears and grief we watched you sinking
With a sad and aching heart.
It's only those who have lost
Can feel the blow, and what it cost
To be thus reconciled.

Inserted by her loving mother, sister, and brother-in-law, Sophia Howes and Catherine and John Fleming.

HOWES.—In loving memory of our dear sister, Clara Howes, who departed this life July 29, 1913, aged 20 years and 10 months.

Do we forget, ah, no,
For memory's golden chains
Still bind our hearts to you below
Till we meet and touch again.

Inserted by her fond brothers and sisters-in-law, Alf. and Win, Herb and Edie, George and Sarah.

HOWES.—In loving memory of our darling sister, Clara, who passed away to a higher life July 29, 1913, aged 20 years.

Dear, loving sister, gone to that clime,
Waiting for loved ones, coming some time,
Safe with the angels, whiter than snow,
Watching for loved ones waiting below.

Inserted by her loving sister and brother-in-law, Emma and Arthur Mounstephen.

JOSEPH.—In sad but ever-loving memory of my dearly beloved husband and their father, James Joseph, who departed this life July 29, 1909.

Five years have passed, and none can tell,
The loss of a father we loved so well;
But while he sleeps in a peaceful sleep,
His memory we will always keep. R.I.P.

Inserted by his loving wife and family; also nephew, Harold.

JOSEPH.—In loving memory of my dear father, James Joseph, who departed this life July 29, 1909. "Leaves may fade, but memory never." Inserted by his loving daughter, Lena.

LANE.—In sad but loving remembrance of my dear beloved wife and our beloved mother, Sarah Ann Maria Lane, of Crown-street, Granville, who departed this life July 29, 1913. At rest.

Life's weary pains and troubles are past.

Inserted by her loving husband, G. H. Lane, and her loving son and daughter, John Alfred and Clara Lane.

LAVENDER.—In affectionate memory of our loving mother, Mary Ann Lavender, who died July 29, 1913, at Parramatta, suddenly.

A most painful shock,
A better mother never on earth dwelt.
But a few weeks in death were
Dear mother and father divided.
Our memory is the same to-day
As the day God chose to call her
To rest until the great awakening.

Inserted by her loving family, Charles, Joseph, Maude, Emily, May, Minnie, their husbands and wives.

LENARD.—In loving memory of our darling son and brother, Clifford Henry, who departed this life July 29, 1913, aged 6 months.

The rose that is the fairest and rarest
Is the one that is killed by the frost;
And Cliffie, who to us was the dearest,
Is the one whom we have lost.
Our hearts for him are aching,
Aching night and day.
We miss you darling Cliffie;
We miss you in a thousand ways.

Inserted by his ever-loving father and mother, brother, and sisters, Alfie and Violet Lenard.

LENARD.—In sad but loving memory of our dear grandchild and nephew Clifford, who departed this life on July 29, 1913, aged 6 months.

The children of Heaven, all robed in white,
Were happy at play in that City of Light.
When Jesus came smiling, and said to his band,
Here's another wee playmate, give Cliffie your hand.

Inserted by his loving grandma and Aunty Cilla.

McINTOSH.—In loving memory of my dear mother, Fanny Sarah McIntosh, who died July 29, 1901.

You are always in my thoughts, dear mother;
'Tis sweet to breathe your name;
In life I loved you very dearly;
In death I will do the same.

Inserted by her loving daughter Eva.

MOSES.—In loving remembrance of Matilda, the loving and devoted wife of S. S. Moses, late of Manly, who passed away on Friday, July 29, 1910. G.R.H.S.

MUNDY.—A tribute of love to the memory of W. J. J. Mundy, who died July 25, 1900, from his wife and daughter, and Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Sunderland, of Harden, and Baby John.

MURRAY.—In loving memory of our dear sister and auntie, Jessie Beatrice Murray, who was called home July 29, 1913, aged 28 years.

The rose that is fairest and rarest
Is the one that is killed by the frost;
And Jessie, who to us was the dearest,
Is the one that we have lost.

Inserted by her ever loving sister and brother-in-law, Annie and T. Fahey, and nieces, Gladys, Rene, and Jessie.

NEAL.—In loving memory of my dear husband and our dear father, Nathaniel Clamp Neal, who departed this life at Ashfield July 29, 1913. Inserted by his loving wife and children.

RAY.—A tribute of everlasting love to the memory of our darling boy, Arthur Sydney, who fell asleep July 29, 1913, aged 19 years and 10 months. R.I.P.

God took a loved one from our home,
But never from our hearts.

Deeply mourned by his loving parents, Alfred and Agnes Ray.

RAY.—In sad but loving memory of our dear brother, Arthur Sydney, who passed peacefully away July 29, 1913, aged 19 years and 10 months.

Gentle in manner, patient in pain,
Dear Arthur left us, heaven to gain.

Sadly missed by his only brother and sister, Alf. and Eileen, and little nephews, Alfie and Arthur.

RAY.—In ever-loving memory of our darling brother, Arthur Sydney, who fell asleep July 29, 1913, aged 19 years and 10 months. R.I.P.

None knew him but to love him,
None mentioned his name but with praise.

Never forgotten by his ever-loving and sorrowing sisters, Lou and Amy.

RAY.—In sad but loving memory of our dear mate, Arthur Ray, who passed away July 29, 1913.

Rest, dearest Arthur, sweetly rest;
We still remember thee.

Inserted by Harry Baggott, Charles, Henry, Bob Eldridge, and our dear skipper, A. C. Roberts.

RAY.—In ever-loving memory of my dear friend, Arthur, who departed this life July 29, 1913, aged 19 years and 10 months.

To know him was to love him.

Never forgotten by his loving friend, Hilda Pressfeldt.

RODGERS.—In loving memory of our dear mother, who departed this life July 29, 1911. Inserted by her daughters, Stella, Lucille, Hattee, and Dora.

SARCHFIELD.—In loving memory of my dear husband and our dear father, Edward Sarchfield, who departed this life July 29, 1905.

Our home is always lonely, my heart is always sad.
I miss my loving husband, the little ones their dad;
We miss our loving father, no matter how we call,

Inserted by his loving wife and children, Mabel, Eric, Jack, and Roy.

SARCHFIELD.—In loving memory of my dear father, Edward Sarchfield, who departed this life July 29, 1905.

Roses may wither, fade, and die.
If others forget you, dad, never shall I.

Inserted by his ever-loving daughter, Mary.

SARCHFIELD.—In loving memory of my dear father, Edward Sarchfield, who departed this life July 29, 1905. At rest. Inserted by his loving daughter, Millie.

STEVENS.—In loving memory of our dear son, Frederick, who departed this life on July 29, 1902. His sun went down while yet 'twas day. Inserted by his loving parents, John and Elizabeth Stevens.

WATSON.—In loving memory of my dear husband and our dear father, David A. S. Watson, who was killed at Walker's Hospital, Saturday, July 29, 1911.

Good to many, but remembered by few.

Inserted by his loving wife and daughters, Neridah, Elva, and Vera.

WATSON.—In loving memory of my dear father, David Watson, died July 29, 1911. Gone, but not forgotten. Inserted by his loving son and grandchildren, Bert, Doris, and Birt.

WATSON.—In loving memory of our dear father, David Watson, who departed this life on July 29, 1911. Gone, but not forgotten. Inserted by his loving son and daughter-in-law, Harold and Tot.

TO-MORROW'S WRITS.

At six o'clock to-morrow evening the writs for the Federal elections will be taken as issued; and this article, therefore, represents almost our last word of comment or exhortation in the present campaign. Thanks to Labour legislation the press will be gagged from to-morrow on, until the writs are returned. It is just as well to make the point, because Mr. Fisher, speaking last Saturday night at Hobart, and Mr. Hughes addressing an audience at the same time at Wagga, declared that the glorious victories of their party had been won in spite of the press. The two things surely cannot be thus separated. Candid criticism so moved Labour members in a Federal Parliament which gave them majorities for both Houses that they decided to put on the extinguisher; and the suppression of comment, under conditions honoured by long usage and consonant with the spirit of liberty in a British community, was made effective. Mr. Fisher and his friends could never fairly complain that they were unable to get their speeches to the people. The Australian press has been the Labour party's best friend in this particular. It has made little distinction between leaders; and most speeches worth reporting, and many speeches not worth the space, have been given to the great public to whom Governments and Oppositions alike turn for approval and sympathy. What Labour candidates have objected to is free and forcible comment—hence the gag. But the curious thing is that Mr. Fisher and Mr. Hughes should still be attacking the press after laying their bludgeons upon it. True, they were unable to retain power on appeal to the electors a year ago, and they have been hauled again before their masters, with the Press Suppression Act still in existence. Yet, no two men are getting more space in the newspapers to-day than they are, and Mr. Fisher's references to the Labour party's disabilities becomes ludicrous in the circumstances. Speaking of all that it had been able to accomplish, he said: "It was marvellous that the Labour party was so successful as it was, without a press to protect it against the slanders that were made against it;" yet, as a matter of fact, this very quotation is taken from the pages of one of its most vigorous critics in a speech running through several columns. Truly Mr. Fisher has no sense of proportion, if this is all he can see of newspaper service to the community; but, of course, any stick is good enough when one is posing as a punisher of other people. The report of the Hobart speech, as far as the press is concerned, is a fine shield against any charge which Mr. Fisher may bring, as are the reports of his several long deliverances appearing in our own columns. We choose the last of the series, however, because it points a moral in many ways, if it does not adorn a tale. The people of Australia from it will be able better to understand how the Labour leader trims as he travels. His appeal to Tasmania is full of island bait, while in Queensland and New South Wales he can only hope to catch votes by laying nets as wide as the continent. Here he takes unionism and preference as his texts, and the average elector is to find Paradise a possession if he will but surrender everything to the demands of a class. There he made a Commonwealth line of steamships his great lure, and special advances and concessions to producers his most tempting bit of tinsel.

This idea of a Commonwealth line of steamers was discussed first from the Tasmanian standpoint, since it is a Tasmanian disability that communication with the mainland is not as full and frequent as it might be in the pressure of the tourist season. Anything that promises relief is, therefore, bound to get a fine hearing, and Mr. Fisher was very impressive last Saturday night upon the prospects if Labour were returned to power. It was unkind of critics to remind him on Monday morning that during its three years of power, with majorities in both Houses of the Federal Parliament, a Labour Government did nothing to provide Tasmania with a line of Commonwealth steamers. That was, of course, so much injustice, because not even a Labour Treasurer, with an extra £22,000,000 to spend in three years from increased revenues, could be expected to do everything at once. No one dreamed, certainly Mr. Fisher never imagined, that Tasmania's vote might become vital in the succeeding three years, otherwise some of Mr. O'Malley's fly-away contracts might have been held over to provide money for the island which had returned that irrepressible gentleman to the House of Representatives. Leaving this, however, it may be noted that Mr. Fisher speaks now of a Commonwealth line of steamers as quite as reasonable a proposition as a Federal line of railway. From his remarks one may expect every State to be served by sea as by land. But Mr. Fisher did not say whether his 15,000 or 20,000 ton steamers are to be built in the Commonwealth by day labour. Are we to have a repetition on a vast scale of the farce, or tragedy, of the Cockatoo Island cruiser still unfinished, and certain to cost more than double the original estimate? The leader of the Federal Opposition wisely refrained from any discussion of details. All he was concerned with was a fine picture of steamers owned by the Commonwealth, built by a Labour Government, flying the Australian flag, and carrying no awkward notes of interrogation along the lines of rivets in its massive sides, because they were all in the air and not wrought of steel or iron. Then, as to the Tasmanian producers, they were to find their crops carried to market for them, money advanced, and the finest prices obtained—all by the same delightful paternal body run by organised trades-unionism. How was the financing to be done? Mr. Fisher said never a word on that point. Possibly had he given some of his supporters a chance they would have repeated the words of an interjection at Sir William Irvine's meeting in Brisbane on Saturday afternoon. "Where is all that money to come from, in addition to the present heavy expenditure?" asked Sir William. The chorus rang from the noisy section of Labour units: "Out of the big bugs." But the speaker proceeded to show that if everybody with an income above £200 were forced to give up his earnings there would only be 6s 4d per week, or less than an old-age pension, for the rest of the community. Taxing "the big bug" may be Labour's way out of a manifest difficulty, but, unfortunately for Mr. Fisher and all who swear by him, such a process will work out like a line of Commonwealth steamers. It will be infinitely disappointing and cruelly burdensome for the very people who expect to benefit. Of course there was no suggestion of such trouble in the Hobart speech. Labour finance is a thing of light and joy and enduring happiness. All that is needed is to wave a rhetorical hand, make a humorous point at the expense of "the big bug," and the rest is easy. But electioneering and the solid truth do not always agree, and we would remind our readers to vote for Liberal candidates on September 5, and to vote in strength—otherwise they will live to regret it.

GREAT BRITAIN AND THE POWERS.

The events of the last few days have once more justified the changes in British foreign policy introduced and enforced by two successive Ministers with the support of the late King. From the end of the Boer war until to-day Great Britain has sought the golden mean between the system of alliances, and of checks and balances prescribed for the German Empire by Prince Bismarck, and the splendid isolation of the Victorian period. At intervals there has been a danger lest her specific engagements to France would lead her into war. Until the rival claims to Morocco were settled she was under an obligation which limited her freedom and coloured any offer of friendship she might make to the other Powers. But, even while this definite obligation continued, British Ministers were careful to distinguish between their friendly understanding and the alliance that was often pressed upon them. Time after time Frenchmen who hold the views of the President now in office have expressed a desire that their relations to Great Britain should be stated in as definite a form as their relations to Russia, and each time they have concluded that the understanding alone was sufficient. Russia, too, has remained on terms of friendship without a treaty, or even without the naval convention said by the German newspapers to have been offered during the King's recent visit to Paris. The Anglo-Russian Convention accepts the logic of events. It defines the sphere of operations for each country in Persia, and marks the end of a struggle a century old to retard Russian progress in the Near East. But, though it is a symptom of friendship, or, at least, of the end of hostility, it is in its result very different from a treaty of alliance. So far from giving England new interests by virtue of new obligations, it leaves her freer than ever by the renunciation of means to an end which is no longer in need of them.

The advantage of this freedom is seen in the position of the British Foreign Secretary to-day. The assumption by Great Britain of the office of mediator is accepted by the other Powers because her actions alone are devoid of any suspicion of self-interest. The assent of Germany is essential to success by reason of the influence which she can bring to bear upon the Dual Monarchy. But Germany and all the other Great Powers are bound too firmly by treaty obligations to be able successfully to summon a conference, or to influence its deliberations. Sir Edward Grey's message is supported by the respect which his long tenure of office has gained for him in all the Chancelleries of Europe, but no Minister could have issued it with authority had not his country been on friendly terms with both groups of Powers. The reception of the message is proof of another advantage which Sir Edward Grey's policy has gained for him, and through him for the British people. By lifting foreign questions as far above party as any question which involves a vast annual expenditure can be, he has enabled himself to speak with the authority of a united people, even at such a time of internal crisis as this, and to inspire the confidence which follows only from a consistent line of action. The French, on the other hand, are exhibiting to the world how the action of a Government may be crippled by party divisions at a critical period. The capital seems to have relapsed into the Dreyfus period, when peace or war, victory or defeat, were less important than the success of one faction or the other. The President's followers point to the delay of Austria in accepting a fair offer as a mark of her insincerity; the Socialists redouble their cries of down with the army. The most hopeful sign comes from St. Petersburg, where the thought that a conference will succeed is evidently fathered by the wish to preserve peace. Obviously the conference may have two results worth striving for. It may delay an outbreak of war at a time when every moment of delay is precious, and failing the preservation of peace, it may localise the conflict by limiting the objects of Austria to those of a punitive expedition. Such a limitation would satisfy the intentions of Russia as expressed by M. Sazonoff, as well as those of Great Britain, expressed by Sir Edward Grey. The first object of Great Britain is the preservation of peace, but it is impossible for her to say what part her navy might be called upon to take if this frontier quarrel should lead to a war between two or more of the Great Powers.

A TIME LIMIT IN PARLIAMENT.

The Government of New South Wales has at last recognised a fact of which the people of New South Wales have long been cognisant, namely, that Parliament is too fond of talking. It proposes to introduce a new standing order which will impose a time limit on speeches. Certain individuals on special occasions are to be wholly exempted, but apart from these, even Ministers of the Crown will have to curb their eloquence. The rank and file are to be treated with less consideration. When they have given free rein to their rhetoric for the space of an hour they will have to commence their peroration, however much they have left unsaid. The end of the sixty-fifth minute must see them back in their seats. If the Government can persuade Parliament to pass this self-denying ordinance it will have accomplished a most salutary reform. The Lower House has become a by-word for its faculty for endless and often aimless talk. It meets and talks, sometimes the whole night long. It adjourns, and after a brief interval, returns jaded and irritated, but continues to talk with unabated glibness. The House of Assembly almost deserves the title of the House of Verbosity. Any occasion or none is the pretext for a perfect cataract of speechifying. The wheat in these discussions is apt to be lost amidst the tares of platitude, and self-advertisement.

Parliament suffers this, not gladly, perhaps, but with some degree of resignation. Though its members may be thoroughly bored by the constant repetitions of the common-place, the irrelevancies and the bombastic oratorical flights of their colleagues, they endure them because they hope for a similar indulgence in their turn. Of course, we do not suggest that all are in the same category. There are notable exceptions on either side. But the fact remains that whether Liberal or Labour, too many members talk at large and at length. Their irresistible flow of words does no one any good, and does Parliament a great deal of harm. Parliament may tolerate it, but the public is getting tired of it. The public is beginning to object very strongly that valuable time should be wasted and money spent in order that Messrs. X., Y., and Z. should air their stereotyped opinions on some matter in which they are not really qualified to judge. Parliamentary debate has been reduced to an absurdity on account of the perpetual interference of glib nonentities. As a result, the community has to a very large extent lost interest in its deliberations. People do not bother to read the discussions beyond the principal speeches on either side; they simply look at the final division. Perhaps some legislators still cling to the fond delusion that the country hangs on their lips. We are sorry to disenchant them, but this is not the case. The country has not the opportunity of adopting this flattering attitude. No paper could report in extenso these contributions to the wisdom of Parliament. These jewels of oratory are buried in "Hansard," whose dimensions are annually greater, and whose readers are annually both fewer and more inclined to "skip." These magnificent efforts which Parliament reluctantly listens to make no stir outside the walls of the House, nor does the community greatly worry over what it is losing. It knows from bitter experience that the ratio of bread and sack is disproportionate. We do not pay our legislators because of their ability to get on their feet at a moment's notice and talk for hours without saying anything. Speech may be silvern, but silence is often golden. The new standing order, we hope, will remind them of the rule which every speaker, whether in Parliament or not, should regard as his oratorical decalogue: "Have something to say; say it quickly; sit down."

The "Sydney Mail."—This week's "Mail" is an admirable pictorial issue, marked by great variety. A fine coloured cover represents a golf girl, and all lovers of the "ancient and honourable" game will appreciate an entertaining article on "Golf for Women; An Ideal Sport." There are numerous portraits in connection with the trouble between Austria and Servia, and a fine picture of troops massed in one of the squares at Berlin. A beautiful "double-page" contains several striking illustrations of the Alpine carnival at Kosciusko. A photograph taken last week suggests that the great reservoir at Barren Jack will become a noted pleasure resort; it shows how the country is being gradually submerged by the rising waters. There are portraits of nearly all of those who are to receive the awards of the Royal Humane Society next week. An illustrated article describes the work of the Fairbridge Farm School in Western Australia, and another deals with Australian midshipmen in the making. The title-page is occupied by a large portrait of Mr. A. K. Trethowan, the farmers' choice for the Senate. There are several views in connection with the new railway line between Nimitybelle and Bombala; and among many other interesting features are an illustrated account of Dr. E. Angas Johnson's collection of curios in Adelaide, a special page for motorists, and a group of the Commonwealth divisional returning officers, who recently met in Sydney.

Custody of Divorcees' Children.—Mr. Justice Gordon, sitting in divorce jurisdiction, delivered an important dictum which he said he proposed to follow in all future cases. The case before his Honor was one in which the husband (petitioner in a successful divorce suit against his wife) sought to gain the custody of two children who were still with their mother. The case going against the mother, counsel asked that if the children were to be taken away from their mother, they should not be taken out of the State, because access was desired by the mother. His Honor then said that he proposed always in future to make that kind of an order. It was, he said, always made in England, and he thought it right that it should be made here. "In all future cases," said his Honor, "I propose to make an order that the children shall not be taken out of the jurisdiction of the Court without an order of the court permitting it." During the same case, his Honor declared that the successful party in a divorce suit was, prima facie, entitled to the custody of the children, but he would require to know, in the case of young children, that the father was in a position to care properly for them, before he would separate mother and child.

New Woolloomooloo Road.—Some sharp animadversions upon the delay that has taken place with regard to the construction of the new road from Woolloomooloo Bay to College-street, through Cook and Phillip Parks, were made by Alderman Hagon at last night's meeting of the City Council. He asked whether there was any time limit to the work, which had been in hand for over 18 months. "Unfortunately, there is no time limit for day labour jobs," replied the Lord Mayor. He was not surprised at the complaints made, he said, but explained that the final stages of the work had been delayed pending the laying down of the tram-rails. This, he had been informed, was to be undertaken at once, and so it should not be long before the road was opened for traffic.

First Church Bells.—Mr. A. B. Joyner delivered an address on "The History of Church Bells and Bellringing in New South Wales," under the auspices of the Australian Historical Society, at the Royal Society's House last night. "The first peal of bells introduced to Australia," Mr. Joyner said, "were presented to the settlement at Sydney by the Duke of Clarence afterwards William IV., and hung in the round tower of the original St. Philip's Church at Church Hill. They were eight in number, and though small, it is said they were a harmonious peal. In 1843, although eight frames still existed, only three of the bells were left, the Government having taken five of them for various public purposes. One of the bells was presented to St. Jude's School at Randwick, in 1858, where it still hangs, but so rusted in its bearings that it cannot be used."

Stamp Duty.—The amount received in Sydney for the week ended July 25, in respect of probate and letters of administration, was £4273 4s 9d, of which £1449 14s was paid by the trustees of the late Mr. Charles Oatley, of Coogee, whose estate was valued at £20,710.

NEW ZEALAND'S PROGRESS.

WELLINGTON (N.Z.), Tuesday.

Addressing the conference of agriculturists and pastoralists, the Premier (Mr. Massey) said that from the points of view of prices and productiveness everything was satisfactory. There never was a time when the outlook for the producers was as satisfactory as at the present. The value of the exports for the year ended June 30 was £22,960,468. He thought that the wonderful agricultural and pastoral industries were responsible for a very large proportion of the account. There was no reason why they should stop at twenty-five millions. He was satisfied that New Zealand could go on increasing her exports, and the Government and people should do everything possible in this direction.

CAUCUS AND BEEF TRUST.

MR. W. H. KELLY'S REPLY

TO MR. HUGHES.

The Acting Minister for Home Affairs yesterday said: "Boiled down, Mr. Hughes's rejoinder resolves itself into three statements—firstly, that Sir William Irvine is no lawyer; secondly, that I am not honest; and thirdly, that Mr. Hughes (who is both honest and a lawyer) is in despair.

"My charges, which Mr. Hughes's rejoinder was intended only to obscure, still remain, and show—

"(1) That Mr. Tudor, after an interview with Mr. Malkow, the Beef Trust magnate, stamped his official approval upon the plan for the first buildings to be erected for the Trust in Australia.

"(2) That, as Mr. Tudor now says, his action was a mere formality required of him by the Commerce Act.

"(3) That Mr. Malkow, who also knew it was a formality, acted as his own postman by going all the way from Brisbane to Melbourne to have the pleasure of personally obtaining that purely formal signature.

"(4) That his reason for going to this trouble and expense was obviously to gauge whether Mr. Tudor was the sort of man who, after the buildings had been erected, would be likely to be harsh to the "Octopus" (for Commonwealth Constitutional powers over exports were already unlimited.)

"(5) That the judgment, which our clever American visitor apparently formed of Mr. Tudor at the interview in question turned out to be correct, inasmuch as Mr. Tudor's administrative energy was apparently completely exhausted as soon as he had compiled with the formality which Mr. Malkow required of him. Certainly Mr. Tudor did nothing to advertise his interview with the "Octopus," and took no steps to prevent the Trust, which is here to export, exporting under conditions perhaps damaging to Australian producers.

"This touching picture of two deadly foes quietly fraternising over formalities, while publicly assuming a correct attitude of mutual abhorrence is not uncommon in caucus administration. Has Mr. Hughes forgotten, for instance, the monopoly over the Australian coastal passenger trade, which, after quite a number of amicable private meetings of a similar nature, he was instrumental in giving to the shipping ring by virtue of the Navigation Act? And has he forgotten the right-about-face of the Labour party in the matter of the Tobacco Trust? For such facts as these are certainly more worthy of the attention of the Australian public than the excursions of Mr. Hughes's wholesale imagination to America, where he now tells us that the Beef Trust, which is on terms of such friendly formality with Mr. Frank Tudor, "has corrupted courts and legislatures, and made them its creatures."

"I quite agree with Mr. Hughes that one must be prudent how one deals with exports; and it is for this reason that the Government proposes not to restrict exports, but to regulate the operations of such individual exporters as are in the opinion of the Interstate Commission damaging Australian production and Australian interests. I suggest, therefore, that he should direct his remarks to his own colleagues in the Labour movement, who have been suggesting export taxes on wheat and other Australian products in the fallacious hope of thus cheapening them in the local market."

NORTHERN TERRITORY.

WELSH AND SPANISH SETTLERS.

MELBOURNE, Tuesday.

The representatives of a number of Welsh and Spanish settlers who had established themselves in Southern Argentina visited Australia some months ago, with a view to inquiring as to the prospects of the party emigrating to the Commonwealth, and taking up land in the Northern Territory. The delegates paid a visit to the Northern Territory, and after an examination of the land, especially on the Adelaide River, they returned to Melbourne, and had an interview with the Minister for External Affairs (Mr. Glynn), who put before them the advantages, as well as some of the difficulties, incidental to settlement.

Information has now reached the Minister that the South American party, which consists chiefly of farmers and farm workers, intend coming to Australia as soon as possible, and that they will settle in the Northern Territory.

PERSONAL.

VICE-REGAL.

With reference to the garden party to be given by their Excellencies Sir Ronald and Lady Munro Ferguson on Friday, 31st, the launches that are to convey the guests to Yaralla will leave Fort Macquarie, and not the Man-of-War Steps, as previously arranged.

Captain Hacking, Superintendent of Navigation, will enter upon three weeks' leave of absence on Monday next, and during his absence his place will be filled by Captain Cumming, of Newcastle.

At yesterday's meeting of the State Executive Council, Judge Hamilton was appointed to act as a Judge of the Supreme Court at the special sitting to be held at Lismore. Mr. J. P. Sheridan will prosecute on behalf of the Crown.

The secretary of the Royal Colonial Institute (Mr. James R. Boose) was to have left England in July for the purpose of visiting Australia and New Zealand to confer here with the honorary corresponding secretaries of the institute, and to advance the interests of the institute.

Miss Ebery and Miss A. G. M. Skinner, who have been appointed to Korea by the Presbyterian Women's Missionary Union of Victoria, arrived from Melbourne yesterday, en route to Seoul.

Dr. M'Kee, of Cincinatti, U.S.A., was a passenger by the Sonoma, which arrived on Monday, having come to Australia to attend the Science Congress.

Professor E. S. Moore, M.A., Ph.D., professor of geology and mineralogy at the Pennsylvania State College, who is in Sydney, will leave in a couple of days on a visit to Broken Hill.

The Bishop of New Guinea (Dr. Sharp) will leave for his diocese by the Matunga to-day.

Father O'Reilly is suffering from the effects of a fall from a tram some weeks ago. He is rapidly regaining his health, being now able to leave his bed during portion of the day.

A smoke concert was tendered at Aarons' Exchange Hotel on Saturday evening by the employees of Robert Reid and Co., Ltd., to Mr. William Johnstone, manager, who is severing his connection with the company after 29 years' service. The guest was presented with a gold watch.

NAVAL COLLEGE.

NEW CAPTAIN APPOINTED.

The Admiralty, which was some time ago requested by the Commonwealth Government to choose, on its behalf, a captain to succeed Captain Chambers, R.N., in command of the Royal Australian Naval College, has nominated Captain C. H. Morgan, R.N., for the position.

He is at present in command of the battleship Venerable, but it is expected that he will be relieved in England on August 14. He will spend a fortnight in visiting the British naval colleges at Osborne and Dartmouth, and will probably arrive in Australia early in October.

Since Captain Chambers' departure, Commander Grant, who was previously second in command at the college, has been acting as captain in charge. Commander Grant is distinguished for his work in connection with the training methods of the British Admiralty.

CONTEMPT.

DISREGARD OF THE LAW.

WORKERS' ATTITUDE.

A JUDGE'S STRONG COMMENTS.

In the Industrial Court yesterday in the matter of the appeal by the Amalgamated Society of Engineers with reference to the Gasworkers and Engineers' Special Demarcation Board, Mr. Justice Heydon referred to what he considered was absolute contempt for the law which had fallen among the industrial classes.

Mr. Rowley, who appeared for the society, asked that the case be adjourned for a week, stating that Mr. Croft, who represented the Gas Employees' Union, offered no objection.

Mr. H. N. MacLaurin, who appeared for the Minister for Labour and Industry, objected to the application. He said that there were certain facts which the Minister wished to place before the Court really to show that the Amalgamated Society of Engineers had passed a resolution forbidding its members to work with those who were not members of the society, and had, in fact, declared a strike against those persons who employed men who were not members of its society. "I shall be able to show the Court that the society has deliberately violated the intention of the Act, and has endeavoured to take the matter into its own hands, to compel employers to submit to its terms of employment," continued Mr. MacLaurin. "That being so, the question arises whether a society which has done these things ought to be permitted to take advantage of the procedure of the Court and ask it to revise an award in which it is interested. Possibly the Court may think fit to direct that the appeal shall not be taken as long as the society acts as it does."

His Honor said that he had seen things mentioned with reference to the society in the newspapers, and it seemed to him remarkable that none of them were denied. There were what purported to be statements by officials in the Amalgamated Society explaining their object and their intentions, and there were reports of actions which were apparently a carrying out of such intentions—strikes first at one place, then at another place, and then somewhere else. "One cannot take statements in the newspapers as evidence in Court," continued his Honor, "but it did seem to me remarkable that none of them appeared to be denied; they were followed on by statements by responsible officials of the society day after day."

At a later stage his Honor said that everybody reads the newspapers, and when people saw a series of statements about the Amalgamated Society of Engineers, such as have appeared from time to time, purporting to be statements by responsible officials of the society, and when none of them were denied, no indignant repudiation written to the newspapers, they took them to be true. "And the effect in exhibiting a picture of contempt for the law and flouting its provisions is just as great as if they were proved," continued his Honor. "A failure to deny such a series of statements, if they were untrue, would be showing almost as great contempt for the law and indifference as to protecting it as if they were true. I should have thought myself, in view of these statements in the papers, that the Amalgamated Society of Engineers ought to have expected somebody would be present to call attention to the facts, instead of Mr. Rowley now appearing to be surprised. The very fact of his being surprised is only an additional fact to show in what absolute contempt the law has fallen among the industrial classes. The law is becoming non-existent, it seems to me, and it is a thing that calls for very serious consideration on the part of the Court to see if something can be done. It is not only the Amalgamated Society of Engineers, but quite a number of things appear in the papers to show that the only attention that is paid to the provisions of the law in regard to strikes that I can see is to refer to them sometimes as things which it is very meritorious to do, very highly advisable and praiseworthy to ignore and to disobey."

His Honor went on to say that the law had evidently fallen into utter contempt and disregard, and he must consider whether the Court should not adopt within its powers a course which would show that the law should be respected, or that the consequences of flouting it in that way were more serious than had been considered.

TIME LIMIT.

ON MEMBERS' SPEECHES.

STATE MINISTRY'S INTENTIONS.

A meeting of the State Cabinet was held yesterday.

Consideration was again given to a proposal to follow the example of the Federal Parliament, and impose a time limit on speeches. Finality was not reached, but it is understood that in the near future the standing orders will be amended in the direction of making one hour and five minutes the maximum time to be allowed a private member on ordinary occasions, and one hour and 35 minutes when a Minister or member is moving the second reading of a bill. Special provision will be made in the case of the leader of the Opposition moving a vote of censure, the Premier in replying, and the Treasurer in delivering his Budget statement.

A meeting of the caucus has been convened for to-day. It is expected that the Labour party will decide to nominate Mr. Thrower for the position of chairman of committees.

FOSSILS.

DR. WATSON'S INVESTIGATIONS

IN MAITLAND DISTRICT.

WEST MAITLAND, Tuesday.

Dr. D. M. S. Watson, D.Sc., F.Z.S., lecturer in paleontology at University College, London, will be unable to accompany the British scientists on their visit to the district next month, and is now making himself acquainted with its geological history. Dr. Watson, on Saturday, visited Mount Harris, and was delighted with the number and size of the fossils, some of them belonging to the coral group, to be found there. He was also surprised at the formations in which they were found. From his knowledge of the position of the rock and the condition of the fossils, the only conclusion to be drawn, he said, was that volcanic ashes had been deposited in a shallow ocean, the bed of which had subsequently been uplifted into its present position. From Mount Harris he went to Largs, where an inspection was made of a raised beach, the shells of which (it is estimated) existed there 3000 years ago, when the rich flats of the Lower Hunter were the bed of an estuary. The raised beach at present is about 15 feet above sea level. All the shells found were of the existing species, but some are no longer to be found living on the coast of New South Wales.

Dr. Watson inspected beds at Allandale and made a rich haul of fossils. Some of the specimens were the finest he has ever seen in rocks of that age. The amazing thing to him was the existence of fossils in such coarse conglomerate.

Dr. Watson continued his rambles yesterday, visiting Allandale and Pokolbin. In Pokolbin hills rocks of no fewer than four different ages were seen. They were the triassic, permo-carboniferous, carboniferous, and pre-carboniferous. Dr. Watson will leave for Newcastle to-morrow to examine the cliff formations there.

FOR PEACE

POWERS' EFFORTS.

WAR FORCES STILL MOVING.

MOBILISATION COMPLETE.

MINOR CONFLICT REPORTED.

Though there are no authenticated reports of further hostilities, military preparations have been pushed forward by both Austria and Servia.

Servia is ready to resist invasion, while a message from Vienna to Paris indicated that Austria contemplated military action yesterday morning.

Sir Edward Grey, on behalf of Britain, has asked the Ambassadors of France, Germany, and Italy to confer with him, with a view to securing a suspension of hostilities pending arbitration.

Unofficially the situation is regarded as more hopeful, but the evening press of Vienna pointed out on Monday that in any case it would now be impossible for Austria to cease action.

The Servians think that if Austria had been sure of the support of Germany her army would by this time be across the Danube.

Advices from Vienna state that the Servians have blown up a bridge and opened fire on Austrian troops, but a report in an Austrian paper that Servia had been invaded was not confirmed.

ACTION THIS MORNING.

AUSTRIAN PREPARATIONS.

LONDON, July 28.

A telegram from Vienna received in Paris states that very important preparations are being completed with a view to military action this morning.

The "Berliner Lokal Anzeiger" states that the Austrian army invaded Servia at Mitrovitsa, and that the Servians retreated.

Both these alarmist reports are unconfirmed.

BRIDGE DESTROYED.

BERLIN, July 27.

Telegrams from Vienna state that the Servians have blown up a bridge over the Danube, and opened fire near Temiskubin.

SERVIAN OPINION.

VIENNA, July 28.

Telegrams from Nish, the temporary Servian capital, state that it is generally considered that the situation is less critical than on Sunday, and that if Austria were assured of being backed by Germany she would already have poured troops across the Danube.

Servia expects that Austria, in order to preserve the peace of Europe, will eventually accept arbitration by a conference of Ambassadors.

The mobilisation of the army is practically complete. Two battalions have been ordered to retire from Belgrade immediately the Austrians arrive.

THE SERVIAN REPLY.

A semi-official communique states that the Servian reply to the Austrian Note is intended to create a false impression.

While apparently complying with the demands made, it contains far-reaching reservations making the concessions insignificant.

The evening newspapers of Monday state that the Servian reply shows that they are only seeking evasion. It is considered impossible for Austria to cease action. Even if the demands were unconditionally accepted, and the costs of mobilisation paid, the Government would now make other quite different demands.

MORE HOPEFUL VIEWS.

ENCOUNTERS UNIMPORTANT.

LONDON, July 28.

The general unofficial opinion is much more hopeful in all the European capitals, with the exception of Vienna, where Servian news is belated, as it has to come via Roumania.

Diplomatic circles attach little importance to the encounters between Servian and Austrian troops on the Danube. They recall similar encounters as taking place during the Bosnian crisis of 1908.

OFFICIAL OPINION.

PARIS, July 28.

The more hopeful feeling is not endorsed in official circles. It is pointed out that the communique issued from Vienna shows that Austria is disinclined to meet the Servian concessions.

The newspapers say that the question of peace or war rests with Germany. If she desires peace she can easily urge Austria to declare herself satisfied, since Servia has given way.

MEDIATION.

BRITAIN'S SUGGESTION.

LONDON, July 28.

Sir Edward Grey (Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs) made a statement in the House of Commons yesterday evening on the European situation, in reply to a question by Mr. Bonar Law (leader of the Opposition). He said if the dispute were confined to Austria and Servia Great Britain would not interfere. The moment, however, that another Power became involved, the position would become critical, and the question would be one affecting the peace of Europe.

It appeared to him that Great Britain, Germany, France, and Italy should work together at St. Petersburg and Vienna simultaneously, to secure the suspension of military operations, pending discussion.

The co-operation of the four Powers, he declared, was essential. If their efforts failed, it would lead to the greatest catastrophe which could befall the European concert, and the consequences would be incalculable.

Sir Edward Grey added that he had asked France, Germany, and Italy if they were willing that their respective Ambassadors should meet him in conference in London.

Lord Crewe, speaking in the House of Lords, said that the urgency of the situation necessitated Sir Edward Grey taking the unusual course of making a proposition without finding out before hand whether it was acceptable to the different Powers. Britain's view was that Servia's reply seemed to afford a basis whereon a friendly and disinterested group of the Powers ought to be able to arrange a generally aceptable settlement.

It is understood that France and Italy have accepted Sir Edward Gray's proposals for a conference at London.

A FAVOURABLE EFFECT.

ROME, July 28.

It is believed that Sir Edward Grey's proposals have radically and favourably modified the situation.

GERMAN OPINION.

BERLIN, July 28.

It is understood in diplomatic circles that Sir Edward Grey does not desire to interfere in the Austro-Serb conflict, which is no affair of Britain's, but that he desires to prevent complications which would be likely to cause the conflict to spread.

Replying to the representations of the Triple Entente, Germany has hitherto replied that she has no objection to other Powers attempting to secure concessions, but as an ally of Austria she cannot interfere with Austria's freedom of action.

EXCITEMENT IN BERLIN.

Demonstrations were renewed in Unter-den-Linden. A procession passing the British Embassy greeted it with cries of "Hoch, England!"

The run on some of the savings banks quickly subsided. One of the great banks declined to pay out goid, and suggested that its customers should change their notes at the Reichsbank.

The German Emperor was tumultuously welcomed on his arrival at Kiel. His Majesty has proceeded to Berlin.

The High Sea Fleet has stopped the exercises in the North Sea, and returned to Kiel and Wilhelmshaven.

RUSSIAN PATRIOTISM.

STRIKERS RESUME WORK.

ST. PETERSBURG, July 28.

Animated by the general patriotic outburst, all the workmen who were on strike have resumed work.

The situation is calmer in the expectation that British and German influence will be successful.

Prices on the Bourse have risen.

DISORDER IN PARIS.

PARIS, July 28.

Disorderly scenes have occurred on the Boulevards.

The socialists and anarchists organised a demonstration against war and paraded the streets shouting "Down with War. Down with the Army!"

The patriots replied with a counter demonstration. The police and mounted Republican Guards frequently charged the crowd, knocking many down.

BRITAIN'S NAVY.

LONDON, July 28.

The first fleet is coaling at Portland, and it is believed it will proceed to the North Sea. The second fleet could be ready in 24 hours, as the so-called balance crews are already aboard. A patrol of flotillas has been mobilised. The third fleet could be ready in 48 hours.

The crews know their way about the vessels as they have just had ten days' training.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

The Stock Exchange was demoralised yesterday owing to sensational telegrams from the Continent.

Consols touched 71—the record—but they recovered during the afternoon, and closed at 72½.

Colonial Government stocks were nominally unchanged.

July 28, 11.40 a.m.

The Stock Exchange opened in a nervous state, consols being quoted at 71½.

unchanged, but business was almost at a standstill.

Genuine sales of stock are reported from the Continent.

The main cause of the weakness on the Stock Exchange was due to the fact that London dealers are unwilling to take undue risks.

Canadian Pacific shares declined to £176; a fall of £22 since "makings up."

WAR RISKS.

MELBOURNE, Tuesday.

The Marine Underwriters and Salvage Association of Victoria, Ltd., advise that the following extra rates for war risk on steamers to or from the United Kingdom or Continent, via the Suez Canal, have been brought into force:—Steamers outward, 5s per cent; steamers homewards, British-owned, 7s; others (except Austrian and Russian), 10s; Austrian and Russian, 20s. These rates are chargeable day by day, and no forward contracts are to be made.

WILL RUSSIA HELP SERVIA?

Sir Edward Grey's statement amounts to this—that the question of all questions at the present moment, one which may affect the lives and happiness of Australians more than any issue which they have ever known, is, Will Russia help Servia? One of the dangerous factors in the situation is that Servia is convinced she will. Servia has always been convinced of it—in spite of all Russia's official denials in various crises in the past—and the conviction has always made Servia more bellicose. Last year, when Servia was determined, in spite of all Austria's objections, to get a port on the Adriatic, it was almost impossible to convince the Servians that Russia would not support them if war came. The fact that the Russian Government officially told Servia that it would not support her made not the least difference—for a very good reason. Servia had heard all that before. Her former King, Milan, once said that when he was officially rebuked by Russia for doing what he had been recommended to do by Russia's unofficial representatives at Belgrade, he always received a Russian star shortly afterwards. Servia has not forgotten that—it is the penalty Russia pays for her diplomatic methods of older days.

WHAT RESTS WITH THE KAISER.

Russia, according to the cables, is waiting in the hope that Great Britain, France, and Italy (who are now said to be acting together for peace) will persuade Germany to act with them, because Germany can easily prevail upon Austria to show some signs of moderation. The power of inducing Austria to moderate her tone rests with Germany alone. If Germany gave Austria so much as a hint that she would not support her unless consideration were given to any fair offer on the part of Servia, Austria would be forced to take the hint. In that case Russia also would restrain herself, and the quarrel would be confined to Austria and Servia—to which Sir Edward Grey is endeavouring with all his might to confine it. The issue, therefore, all seems to depend for the moment upon whether Britain, France, and Italy can induce Germany to join them in holding back their respective friends. The German Emperor has thrown all his weight on the side of peace before. On this occasion, when the quarrel is over the murder of an heir to a friendly throne, a personal friend of himself, assassinated with the connivance of Servian officials, will the German Emperor sacrifice all his natural prejudices for the sake of peace?

THE MAN WHO KEPT THE PEACE.

The man to whom the generally peaceful and moderate attitude which Austria took up during the Balkan crisis last year, is mainly due, is Count Leopold Berchtold, the Austrian Foreign Minister. Austria's Foreign Minister is invariably the most important member of her Cabinet, because it is his duty to strike out a line of foreign policy upon which the two discordant halves of the Austrian Empire can agree. What binds Austria and Hungary together is simply the fact that their fear of the other nations around them is greater than their hatred and jealousy of each other. Their foreign policy is, therefore, the most important common interest which they possess—and Count Berchtold, like his predecessor, Count Aehrenthal, has to provide them with a foreign policy which will induce each of them to provide its share to the "common army." The man who can do that must always be acquainted with the affairs of their great common enemy, Russia, and both Berchtold and Aehrental were the Austrian Ambassadors at the Russian court, before they were called to the Foreign Ministry. Count Berchtold, is a holder of immense estates, both in Austria and Hungary; but since he was 20 he has been in the diplomatic service—in Paris, London, and St. Petersburg—and his estates have suffered a good deal by his absence. He is technically a Hungarian citizen, and, therefore, the other two chief Ministries of the Empire are by custom held by Austrians; but his Hungarian leanings are probably not dangerously strong. His term of office as Ambassador in Russia was made exceedingly difficult by the fact that Austria was at the time planning certain railway construction, which was bitterly objected to by Russia. But Berchtold's simplicity of character and straightness, quite unusual in one holding his particular office, managed to keep him the personal friendship of Russian society, in spite of all national differences.

THE SERVIAN "PIG-WAR."

Servia can scarcely be blamed for having wanted a port. If Australia were a small country, entirely closed round by other countries, through some one of which she had to send her goods whenever she had anything to export, Australia would want a port also. There is no right of way through another nation's territory; and the only way that Servian goods can get overland to their destination is by paying whatever Customs dues their neighbours choose to put on them. The main railway outlet from Servia leads straight through Austria, and Austria for years has been fighting Servia with Customs dues. Austria had the whip hand over Servia in this way. When Servia wanted to raise money she had either to borrow it from Austria at whatever rate Austria wished, or else risk her pigs being declared by Austria to be suffering from swine fever, and therefore prohibited from export altogether. Austria-Hungary's fixed policy since 1878 (when Servia became a State independent of Turkey) has been to prevent Servia from getting access to the sea. At the height of the pig war with Austria Servia managed to arrange a treaty with Bulgaria; much to the annoyance of Austria, she was able to arrange with a French syndicate to open slaughter-houses in Belgrade, and send the pigs down the Danube to the Black Sea, and so to the outside world. At the same time, she raised a loan in Paris—instead of in Austria—and ordered 47 batteries of field artillery, not from the Skoda factory in Austria, nor even from Krupp, but from the Creusot works in France. She also retaliated by practically taxing Austrian manufactures out of Servia.

SERVIA'S LONGED-FOR SEAPORT

Servia wanted a port—even one of the miserable half sand-choked inlets on the Adriatic coast. And that was why, in the Balkan War, she sent to the Adriatic coast to seize one. The correspondent of the London "Daily Chronicle," when first he saw one of these much-desired ports, wrote:—"It is Skutari's other so-called port upon the wild river Boyana. . . A Hungarian 'tramp' took me down the winding and violent stream and out to sea. As far as I discovered, she had no cargo but bugs; yet she bumped upon the sandbanks, and was almost wrecked in the turmoil of breaking waves and furious currents at the bar. Far to the south—some 35 miles away—I could just make out the long promontory of Durazzo, where Caesar was. (Durazzo is the old Dyrrhachium where Caesar and Pompey's armies faced one another). It is about as bad as any other Turkish harbour now. I did not think that these wretched ports were so soon to be the danger-point of Europe. Are all the most intellectual nations in the world to fly at each other's throats because a semi-civilised country like Servia asserts a claim to this miserable gateway on the Adriatic, chiefly for the exportation of her hogs? . . Yet that very piece of coast—worthless harbours, fever swamps, and all—is just the thing that M. Pashitch, the Servian Premier, publicly claims as the 'minimum' of his country's demand. And it is just that 'minimum' which Austria resolutely refuses." Neither Austria nor Italy wanted to see a third maritime power in the Adriatic—and they had their way. Servia withdrew her troops, and is an inland country still.

BALANCE OF POWER.

ALLIANCE AND ENTENTE.

DELICATE SITUATION.

Germany, Austria, and Italy—the Triple Alliance—on the one hand; Great Britain, France, and Russia—the Triple Entente—on the other hand. Thus are the great Powers of Europe divided, and thus is the balance of power preserved. Once disturb that balance, once upset the international equilibrium, and, as the Secretary for Foreign Affairs, Sir Edward Grey, remarks, we shall have a catastrophe the end of which no man can foretell.

Triple Alliances may be said to have begun with the ratification between the States-General and England of an alliance against France for the protection of the Spanish Netherlands. Sweden afterwards joining the league, it took the name of the Triple Alliance, on January 23, 1668. Another Triple Alliance was that between England, Holland, and France against Spain, January, 1717. Then came a Triple Alliance between Great Britain, Russia, and Austria, September 28, 1795; and finally came what is known as the Triple Alliance to-day—the alliance of Germany, Austria, and Italy—which was signed on March 13, 1887, and which has since that time been twice renewed.

The Triple Entente—an understanding between Great Britain, France, and Russia is the outcome of the alliance between Germany, Austria, and Italy. It is simply the means taken to preserve the balance of power. In some quarters it is believed that Roumania, though not one of the signatory Powers, has given her adherence to the Triple Alliance. Her cordial relations with Germany and Austria certainly give some ground for the belief. At one time Germany also wanted to make Turkey a party to the agreement.

RUSSIA AND GERMANY.

The accession of the present Czar of Russia, in 1894, was followed by a series of incidents which seemed to indicate the probability of a new grouping of the European Powers, in which Russia would side rather with England and the Triple Alliance than with France. Relations with Germany were immensely improved by the conclusion of a commercial treaty. In a significant speech at the time, the German Emperor said: "Never before has the Reichstag had to make a decision fraught with such important consequences. The rejection of the commercial treaty by it would inevitably be quickly followed by a tariff war, and at no remote period by a real war." And Count Caprivi, the Chancellor, said: "We care not for martial glory. The only fame we desire to have is that of solving problems touching the social and intellectual improvement of the people of enabling the nations to live together peaceably, of drawing together the forces of Europe, of preparing the way for some future time when it may become necessary to bind together a larger group of nations in the interest of a great economic policy in common." The treaty passed, and remained in force for ten years, when another one was signed.

At about the same time as the commercial treaty between Germany and Russia was first signed an Anglo-Russian rapprochement took place, and was followed by a scarcely veiled hostility to Britain on the part of the German Government, which seemed to apprehend a combination of Russia, France, and England against the Triple Alliance. That combination did come, but not for many years afterwards. Though an agreement was entered into between Russia and France—the exact nature of which was not published—the Triple Entente, which includes Great Britain, is a thing of quite recent history.

What is the understanding between France and Russia?

M. Valfrey, formerly of the French Foreign Office, wrote in the "Figaro" on July 3, 1895: "If there exist Frenchmen so blind as to suppose that an understanding has been come to between France and Russia with a view to the contingency at an early date of a war of aggression against Germany, I can formally and absolutely declare that they are mistaken. No doubt, if Germany were to be beset by such difficulties as to paralyse her movements against us, no Power, human or divine, could prevent us from attempting to tear up the Treaty of Frankfort, but in the meantime we have got to live on and promote our development. Therefore, the Franco-Russian Alliance is strictly defensive. If we had asked Russia to assist us in reconquering Alsace and Lorraine, Russia would have replied by an absolute refusal. If, on the other hand, Russia had applied to us to take up arms against the Treaty of Berlin, we should have declined her advances. Russia and France have made their compact on the basis of the existing territorial status quo—nothing more, nothing less."

M. Valfrey further pointed out that the advantage France had reaped from her understanding with Russia was an absolute security against the possibility of a German attack. He also hinted that when the Egyptian question should cease to be an "unequal duel between France and England, the co-operation of Russia and Germany might help to counteract the Anglophile zeal of Italy."

Another writer has said that the real strength of the basis of the Franco-Russian Alliance is the complete ignorance which the two contracting nations have of each other.

RUSSIA AND THE BALKAN SLAVS.

There was, some years ago, talk of a partition of Turkey between Austria and Russia, but it has never been viewed with favour in St. Petersburg. Russian policy now, as formerly, cannot refuse moral and political solidarity with the Balkan Slavs; but Russia does not think of a partition so much as of preserving those peoples from being swallowed up by Austria. This question of spheres of influence has always been a delicate one between Russia and Austria. As one of the St. Petersburg papers has put it, "Russia has historical traditions, and will always watch over the weal of the Balkan Slavs, quite independently of the direction of her general policy."

BRITAIN'S POSITION.

The understanding between Great Britain, France, and Russia, known as the Triple Entente, followed on the "Entente Cordiale" between Britain and France, and was largely the work of the late King Edward VII. In a statement on the subject some months ago the Prime Minister, Mr. Asquith, indicated that the understanding was a defensive and not an offensive one. There was, he said, no agreement in writing; there were no secret engagements, and Great Britain had no commitments except such as were well known. The position has again been defined by the Secretary for Foreign Affairs, Sir Edward Grey. If the dispute were confined to Austria and Servia, he said, Great Britain would not interfere; but the moment another Power was involved the position would become critical and would involve the peace of Europe. The co-operation of Britain, Germany, France, and Italy would then be necessary if a satisfactory settlement was to be reached, and if their efforts failed the greatest catastrophe which could befall the concert of Europe would follow. Britain, France, and Italy are already co-operating in an endeavour to prevent a general conflagration; the question that is being asked is—"Will Germany join them?"

Although Great Britain is not bound by any hard and fast agreement, undoubtedly she is, in certain cases, in honour bound to France and Russia, just as she would consider France and Russia bound to her. Sir Edward Grey has frequently made it clear that the Triple Entente is part of Great Britain's defensive system, and that she has not the slightest intention of being false to it.

EFFECT ON WOOL TRADE.

A number of foreign buyers received cables on Monday, cancelling their orders for wool. This gave rise to all sorts of wild rumours about the suspension of sales.

When the first news of the outbreak of hostilities came through a meeting of woolbrokers was held at the rooms of the association, and another conference took place yesterday. It was decided to hold the sales as usual, and about 10,000 bales will be submitted this afternoon.

The opinion of several brokers seemed to be that the rumours were circulated by the bears. "It is quite likely," said a leading broker, "that these agents have been instructed not to buy, but some of them may exercise their own discretion. Bradford is always ready to take advantage of a drop. At all events, it is a good time for such a move, as the supply is at present light."

Another seller was even more emphatic. "The market isn't going to pieces just because two European States are having a fight. Austria, through Germany and France, is a big buyer, but even if Germany was at war we would still have other markets open. America, for instance, is ready to take more wool than she does at present."

WOLFE'S SCHNAPPS is always opportune. It is a Drink—a Tonic—a Medicine.—Advt.

DUBLIN TRAGEDY.

CONDUCT OF TROOPS.

MINISTERIAL STATEMENT.

POLICE OFFICIAL SUSPENDED.

LONDON, July 28.

The conflict between the authorities and the Nationalist volunteers on Sunday, and the subsequent shooting down of riotous sympathisers with the latter in Dublin, by a detachment of the Scottish Borderers were referred to as soon as the House of Commons met yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Birrell (Chief Secretary for Ireland), in reply to a question by Mr. John Redmond (leader of the Nationalist party), said that Mr. W. V. Harrel, Assistant-Commissioner of the Dublin Metropolitan Police, had requisitioned for military assistance on his own responsibility. Mr. Harrel had been suspended pending an inquiry.

Mr. Redmond: He ought to be hung.

Lord Robert Cecil: Ministers ought to be hung. (Opposition applause.)

Mr. Charles Amery: They are the murderers.

Mr. Birrell added that some of the soldiers became exasperated, and fired without orders. The officers succeeded in stopping the firing immediately, but three people were killed and 32 injured. A considerable number of soldiers were severely injured. A full inquiry into the conduct of the military would be held immediately.

Mr. Devlin: Should there be any differentiation between armed Ulster volunteers marching through Belfast and armed Nationalist volunteers marching through Dublin?

Mr. Birrell did not reply.

Mr. Birrell's statement caused a sensation in the lobbies, but the European crisis overshadows everything else.

DISCRIMINATION.

MR. REDMOND INDIGNANT.

Mr. Redmond moved the adjournment of the House of Commons at a later stage to draw attention to the action of the police and military.

Mr. Redmond said that no attempt had been made to disarm the Ulster volunteers, and wanted to know who was responsible for this monstrous attempt to discriminate. He understood that Sir J. Ross, Chief Commissioner of the Dublin Police, who was Mr. Harrel's superior, and a well-known political partisan, was in Dublin. He demanded that Sir John Ross should be suspended, and put on trial. He also asked for the Scottish Borderers to be removed from Ireland

Mr. Redmond added that the Irish Executive in Dublin was in such a state of impotence that a subordinate official was able to call in the military without even informing the Executive. The soldiers did a cowardly thing in firing on a motley crowd of men, women, and children, and must be fully punished if they committed the crime.

He concluded by demanding a revocation of the proclamation prohibiting the importation of arms into Ireland. He wished the House to understand clearly that four-fifths of the Irishmen would no longer submit to be bullied, punished, penalised, and shot for conduct for which people were permitted to go scot free in every Ulster country.

Mr. Birrell denied that the soldiers had fired on a defenceless mob. The Government had not taken action against the Ulster volunteers, and, consequently, it ought not to take proceedings against the Nationalists.

Mr. Birrell stated that Mr. Harrel had taken the whole responsibility, but Mr. Birrell had since communicated with Sir John Ross, and asked whether he associated himself with the act.

There were loud Opposition cries of "Shame!"

Mr. Birrell: If that were so it would confirm my original view, that both Mr. Harrel and Sir John Ross should be suspended.

Mr. Bonar Law (leader of the Opposition) said that the Government were trying to find a scapegoat to save themselves, and had condemned Mr. Harrel without trial. He deplored the incident, which was due to the fact that the Government had abrogated authority in Ireland.

He complimented Mr. Redmond on the latter's temperate speech. Mr. Birrell's speech, he said, was amazing. Mr. Bonar Law asked also if Mr. Harrel had been instructed to permit gun-running.

Mr. Asquith (the Premier) said the soldiers had been exposed to great provocation. They had not exceeded their duty, which was to support the civil power. He believed the soldiers would emerge with credit from the inquiry.

Out of 160 Borderers, not a single man or officer escaped some injury. Eighteen soldiers were taken to the hospital. When Mr. Harrel took action the arms proclamation had already exhausted itself.

Opposition cries of "That's the limit!"

Mr. Asquith: Customs officers have the right to search with a view to prosecution, but no right to seize. I am certainly unaware that the police have a right of seizure. Mr. Harrel was taking an entirely new departure when he requisitioned the military to assist him to deprive persons of arms.

The Premier added that personally he regarded the importation of arms as of minor importance.

Mr. Asquith, in conclusion, said the difficulty of governing Ireland had been immeasurably increased by the Opposition treating the violation of the law as a cardinal virtue. He warned the Opposition that if it came into power it would find it an impossible task.

Mr. Balfour (Unionist) said that Mr. Harrel was condemned because he had not the insight to see that, as the Government did nothing with Ulster, therefore they were expected to do nothing anywhere. "They are also wrong," he said, "in condemning a man because he does not see with the subtle eye to votes which the Government have."

Mr. Ramsay MacDonald (Labour) warned the Opposition of the danger of openly abetting lawlessness. The Tory doctrine would be remembered during any big strike.

Mr. T. Healy (Nationalist) said Mr. Churchill had filled the creeks and coasts of Ireland with gunboats. Gun-running was now heard of for the first time. If they got guns past the seaguard, let the Government official who interfered then be condemned.

Lord Robert Cecil (Unionist) moved that the debate be closured, but the motion was defeated by 249 votes to 217, and the motion for the adjournment was then talked out.

CHIEF COMMISSIONER RESIGNS.

FEELING IN DUBLIN.

SCOTTISH BORDERERS TRANSFERRED.

Nationalist feeling in Dublin is intense, and all soldiers are confined to barracks.

The Scottish Borderers have been ordered to Curragh, and the men left for that place last night.

The crowd on Sunday afternoon remained near the soldiers as it was believed they would fire blank cartridges.

Large and excited crowds paraded the streets of Dublin last night, singing patriotic songs, and threatening the barracks. The latter were surrounded for two hours by Irish volunteers, who did not carry arms, for the purpose of keeping order.

When the Nationalist volunteers were ordered to disarm, they handed their rifles to residents living at Dublin Bay, who buried them. The weapons were removed to a secret depot of the Nationalists to-day.

NEWS IN BELFAST.

When the news reached Belfast priests paraded the Nationalist quarter, and exhorted the people to remain quiet.

DUBLIN POLICE.

STRIKE THREATENED.

The constables who refused to charge the Nationalist Volunteers at Clontarf were arrested.

Sir John Ross has dismissed Constables Gleeson and O'Neill for refusing to obey Mr. Harrel's orders. The other members of the Dublin police force threaten to strike unless the two constables are reinstated.

VERSION OF VOLUNTEERS.

COMMANDING OFFICER'S STATEMENT.

LONDON, July 27.

Mr. Figgis, a well-known writer, who commanded the Nationalist Volunteers during the gun-running episode in Dublin on Sunday, states that he told Mr. Harrel, Assistant-commissioner of the Dublin Metropolitan Police, when the latter demanded every rifle in the possession of the volunteers, that it was not likely 2000 men would yield without a struggle.

Mr. Harrel replied, "I mean to have those guns."

Mr. Figgis retorted that the men had ammunition, and were sure to use it.

Mr. Harrel said that his men had also ammunition, and intended to use it.

Mr. Figgis' answer was: "In that case, the bloodshed will be on your head."

The volunteers then resisted, and the soldiers made a bayonet charge.

Mr. Figgis declares that the soldiers then fled, and added that an officer of the Scottish Borderers asked to be allowed to fire, but Mr. Harrel refused permission.

TOO LATE.

AN UNDELIVERED ORDER.

Sir J. B. Dougherty, Under-Secretary, on hearing that Mr. Harrel was taking action, sent a minute to his office instructing him not to attempt forcible disarmament, but to take names with a view to prosecution.

Mr. Harrel did not receive the note, as his office was closed on Sunday.

THE AMENDING BILL.

ATTITUDE OF NATIONALISTS.

Mr. John Redmond, M.P., presided at a meeting of the Irish Nationalist party in the House of Commons yesterday.

It is understood that the party decided not to oppose the Amending Home Rule Bill, on the understanding that the Government will propose drastic changes in committee.

Subsequently the Premier, Mr. Asquith, announced, in the House of Commons, that the Amending Bill would not be taken next day, as it would not be fair to ask the Nationalists to proceed with the bill in view of the deplorable events in Dublin.

THE GUN-RUNNER.

The yacht concerned in the gun-running is stated to be owned by a lady of title. There were three ladies aboard, and the vessel was navigated by the owner's daughter.

MEXICO.

HUERTA'S OBLIGATIONS.

CARRANZA REPUDIATES.

TAMPICO, July 27.

General Carranza announces that, when he secures power, he will not recognise the financial obligations of the ex-President, General Huerta.

It is reported that General Huerta gave the Rothschilds, Lord Cowdray, and other British citizens, oil concessions in Lower California at nominal prices.

General Carranza says he will refuse to recognise these.

ANTI-CHURCH DECREE.

EXTRAORDINARY PROHIBITIONS.

Senor Villa Real, Governor of the State of Nuevo Leon, has issued a decree forbidding Roman Catholic churches to open, save at the orders of the Government, forbidding priests to participate in politics, prohibiting people from entering the sacristy of any church, prohibiting confession, and closing Roman Catholic colleges unless duly authorised.

Villa Real indicts the Church as the upholder of every abuse Mexico has suffered from during the last half century.

Many churches have been recently closed.

PEACE CONFERENCE.

WASHINGTON, July 27.

A peace conference is proceeding at Saltillo between the Constitutionalists and Federals, with a view to the former taking over the reins of government.

ATROCITIES.

GREEKS IN ALBANIA.

WHAT WAR MAY MEAN.

LONDON, July 28.

Mr. Aubrey Herbert, in a letter to the "Times," quotes the statement of an eyewitness that hundreds of Greeks, commanded by Greek officers, are exterminating the villagers of Southern Albania.

A hundred thousand refugees are crowding into Valona from Berat and Koritsa. At these places the streets are full of the naked bodies of women, each bearing the mark of strangulation, with the bodies of little babes hacked to pieces with knives.

The Greeks have burnt the whole countryside to cover the traces of their atrocities.

GOVERNOR-GENERAL'S PERIL.

LAUNCH STOVE IN.

OTTAWA, July 27.

It has just been disclosed that the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, and Princess Patricia, narrowly escaped drowning while motor boating on the Lake of the Woods, near Kenora.

The boat struck some floating logs, and was stove-in. It was beginning to sink when other launches passing noticed their plight, and rescued the party just before the boat sank.

LINER IN COLLISION.

DAMAGE NOT SERIOUS.

NEW YORK, July 27.

The Red Star liner Zeeland collided in mid-ocean with the freighter Missouri in a dense fog. The Zeeland was slightly damaged, the rails being smashed. The extent of the damage to the Missouri is unknown.

No one was injured, and the liner proceeded on her journey to London.

PRIVY COUNCIL APPEAL.

LONDON, July 28.

In the matter of Syme v the Victorian Tax Commissioners, the Privy Council to-day allowed appeal, with costs.

RAILWAY ACCIDENT.

AT MILSON'S POINT.

TWO PASSENGERS INJURED.

There was a severe smash at Milson's Point yesterday morning, when a fast train which left Hornsby at 8.42 and timed to arrive at Milson's Point at 9.17 a.m. ran into the dead-end with considerable force. Two persons were severely injured, one rather seriously, and a number received a severe shaking.

The brakes apparently failed to act as the train drew into the northern platform, and the engine struck the dead-end with a bump which threw the passengers—most of whom had already risen preparatory to leaving the train—in all directions. Many were thrown to the floor, and R. J. Tillyard, of Dural-road, Hornsby, was thrown through the open door, striking his head on the iron railings. He was rendered unconscious, and after receiving first aid by the officials was taken to his home by a railway official, and met at the station by Dr. Watkins, of Hornsby.

Last evening he was still unconscious. Mr. Tillyard is doing research work at the Sydney University, and is 33 years of age. A. S. Callachor, tea merchant, of Bridge-street, Sydney, and residing at Orme-street, Pymble, was cut on both knees, and returned to his home.

The dead-end was considerably damaged.

DEFENCE.

SOME IMPORTANT CHANGES.

ESTABLISHMENT AT LIVERPOOL.

The Minister for Defence, who spoke at Liverpool last night in support of Mr. R. B. Orchard, M.P., the Liberal candidate for Nepean, elaborated his scheme for transferring portion of the Victoria Barracks military establishment to Liverpool.

"The Royal Australian Garrison Artillery, now at Victoria Barracks," the Minister said, "will be located at their respective forts, where there is ample Commonwealth ground available for the purpose. The necessity for a military hospital where facilities are otherwise provided by public and private hospitals is not apparent, and it has been decided to dispense with this building. The present parade ground at Victoria Barracks will be retained, with sufficient space surrounding it to provide for the erection of drill-halls, etc. that will leave available for sale about 15 acres of the Victoria Barracks area, including the whole of the frontage to Oxford-street, to a depth of 70 feet, and about 16 acres of the Moore Park area.

"It is estimated that within the next few years there will be required in Sydney for rifle club purposes approximately 500 targets. Arrangements are now in progress to secure a site for a range of 20 targets in the vicinity of Chatswood, which will serve for the greater part of North Sydney. A site for 200 targets is still required, and it has been decided to erect these targets on the Liverpool manoeuvring area.

"The Liverpool area will be used for the following purposes:—Ordnance stores, mobilisation, R.A.F.A. Barracks, remount depot, metropolitan rifle range, training area.

"The following will be housed at Victoria Barracks:—10th, 11th, and 12th batteries of Field Artillery; 5th field company Engineers; 16th signal troop Engineers; 24th signal company Engineers; 33rd and 37th companies fortress Engineers; wireless company Engineers; 24th and 26th infantry battalions; headquarters of the 6th and 7th Infantry Brigades, and headquarters Army Service Corps; 6th and 7th field ambulance, Army Medical Corps; 37th and 38th companies of A.M.C.; 24th and 26th battalions of senior cadets.

Following is the estimated cost of the various alterations:—Additional barrack accommodation, £3000; site for remount depot, £5000; barracks at Liverpool for R.A.F.A., £30,000; new headquarters office, £30,000; new ordnance stores, including R.A.A. store, £50,000; metropolitan rifle range, £40,000.

The estimated value of the ground to be made available for sale is:—Victoria Barracks (15 acres), £80,000; Moore Park (16 acres), £25,000; Darling Island stores, £50,000. Total, £155,000.

ANTI-RAT CRUSADE.

INSURANCE AGAINST PLAGUE

The Board of Health, at its meeting yesterday, had under special consideration the question of the destruction of rats in the city, in relation to the possibility of the reintroduction of bubonic plague.

Although it is now five years since the last occurrence of plague in man, and over four years since the last discovery of a plague-infected rat, the board has not relaxed its vigilance in regard to rat destruction. A staff of rat-catchers is still retained, inspection is made regularly of wharfs and other places deemed liable to infestation, and numbers of rats are examined constantly as to infection, weekly report being made of the work.

The board is not apprehensive in regard to a recurrence of plague, and has no desire to alarm the public, but wishes to impress upon all householders the need for maintaining a continuous crusade against rats, destroying them whenever they make their appearance, and being careful not to afford them harbourage or encouragement in any way. By this means increase of rodents will be prevented, and the danger of recrudescence of the disease reduced.

RELEASED PRISONER

MOTION OF PROTEST.

PERTH, Tuesday.

A largely attended indignation meeting of citizens at Midland Junction last night passed the following resolution in regard to the liberation of Bennett:—"That this meeting enters an emphatic protest against the action of the Attorney-General (Mr. Walker) in releasing from prison Robert Bennett, who was sentenced to imprisonment for life by a Supreme Court Judge for a crime which his Honor characterised as the most horrible and most disgusting which had ever come before him."

An amendment to the effect that no good purpose could be served by the resurrection of the case was moved, but was negatived.

In the Assembly to-night Mr. Wilson, leader of the Opposition, gave notice of motion of censure on the Attorney-General for having advised the Governor to liberate Robert Bennett, as an act not in the interest of the administration of justice, and calculated to weaken the protection afforded children under the laws.

Mr. George, ex-Commissioner for Railways, gave notice of motion for an address to the Governor, requesting his Excellency to furnish a list of convicted felons, their sentences, and times served, who have been released or have had their sentences commuted or remitted from November, 1911, to June 30, 1914. This period nearly covers the term during which Mr. Walker has occupied the Attorney-General's office.

THE NEWCASTLE TRAGEDY.

A MAN CHARGED.

NEWCASTLE, Tuesday.

Herbert Ashman, 22, a labourer, appeared before Mr. T. C. K. M'Keil, S.M., at the police court this morning, charged with feloniously and maliciously murdering Ethel May Houghton, at Broadmeadow, on July 25 last. On the application of the police a remand for a week was granted.

COAL CRISIS.

A GRAVE SITUATION.

STRIKE TO CONTINUE.

ATTITUDE OF THE MEN.

Mr. E. Peters, delegate of the Northern District Colliery Employees' Federation, who, with Mr. A. Teece, is representing the case for the Maitland miners before the unions of Australia, stated yesterday that the men were now, since learning the views expressed by Mr. John Brown, more determined than ever to continue the strike—until the proprietors were prepared to come to terms for the abolition of the afternoon shift.

Mr. W. Rosser, the secretary of the Federation of Labour, said that it was now nine weeks since the miners at Pelaw Main, Hebburn, Stanford Merthyr, East Greta, and Whitburn were locked out, and the men were as firm to-day in their attitude as they were when work ceased.

"Three collieries—Abermain No. 2, Bellbird, and Rothbury," Mr. Rosser said agreed to terms for the abolition of the afternoon shift, these terms being mutually satisfactory to the owners and the Miners' Federation, and at the present time everything is working smoothly at those places.

"It is unfortunate for the miners that the Neath colliery, which abolished the afternoon shift last January, should have caught fire at this stage, one effect being to throw 300 men out of work. Now that certain colliery proprietors, who do not want to abolish this shift, have declared that they will not negotiate with the federation, there is nothing left but to fight the matter out. The miners are willing to give the proprietors time to make arrangements to prepare their mines for the one-shift system, and nothing could be fairer than that.

"The contention of Mr. Brown that the output cannot be preserved has been disproved by the other large collieries in the district that have adopted the one-shift system. The Pelaw Main seam in New South Wales is specially suited to the proposed change, being capable of handling 3000 tons in one shift. It has actually put out coal at this rate, this being when the wages board visited the colliery in June last. Yet the mine's output, when working, is 2300 tons for the day of two shifts.

"The miners who are at work in the district are levying themselves 10 per cent. That means, each man who earns £6 per fortnight has to pay 12s.

"The fight, although it has been on for nine weeks, is only starting in earnest now. Mr. Brown shall not have his own way, and he can rest assured that no more afternoon shifts will be worked at Pelaw Main.

"The unionists of Australia are responding to the appeal made to them. Representatives of the miners have been sent to New Zealand, Western Australia, Victoria, South Australia, and Tasmania. The Queensland miners, only a small body, have responded with £100, and promise to continue their support. The miners who have been agitating for the abolition of the afternoon shift for seven years have made up their minds now that they are out to settle this question once and for all, and the only way in which it can be settled is by abolishing it."

SCHOONER ASHORE.

ON BELLINGER BEACH.

A telegram was received from Urunga, Bellinger River, yesterday stating that the schooner Tramp had gone ashore on the north beach there whilst endeavouring to enter with a light wind behind her.

The vessel, which is high and dry at low water, is not in danger of breaking up.

The tramp is a wooden vessel, of 86 tons, belonging to E. D. Pike and Co., Ltd., and was built in Auckland in 1902.

A LABOUR CONFERENCE.

The question which is agitating trade unionists at present—whether industrial or craft unionism should be the leading feature of the Government's new proposed Arbitration Bill—will be discussed at a conference to be held at Bowen's-buildings, Central-square, on Friday, at 4 p.m., the meeting having been called by the newly-formed industrial unions committee. A report will be given of the work done during the past couple of weeks, and the delegates will be asked to decide upon the policy for the future. An important matter which will also come up for discussion will be the question of having a conference with the Labour Council of New South Wales, which is in favour of craft unionism. In sending out the circular yesterday, the secretary pro tem. of the industrial unions committee, Mr. Claude Thompson, stated that a Labour member had pointed out that much good might accrue from a joint discussion with representatives of the Labour Council, and he added that the Premier would be glad if, before the introduction of the proposed legislation, the unions could come to some settlement on this important matter of craft v industrial unionism.

QUEENSLAND RAILWAYS.

MEN'S ULTIMATUM.

BRISBANE, Tuesday.

The latest development in connection with the railway strike in the north is that the Minister for Railways has received an intimation that the whole of the 1200 men in the north who signed the petition requesting a 25 per cent. increase in wages will cease work on Saturday next, failing satisfactory consideration of their grievances, as set out in the petition.

MEDICINE MAN ATTACKED.

NEW ZEALAND EPISODE.

WELLINGTON (N.Z.), Tuesday.

Tohungaism is reported to be in evidence again at Whenuakura, between Patea and Waverley.

An epidemic, the nature of which is not yet known, recently broke out there, and three deaths resulted. It is alleged that a Maori man had been treating the patients, and the deaths raised doubts as to his "powers" being genuine, with the result that yesterday several fights, with the Tohunga as one of the principals, took place, and in most cases he had the worst of it. The matter is being investigated.

PLAGUE.

A STEAMER IN QUARANTINE.

THURSDAY ISLAND, Tuesday.

The steamer Taiyuan, en route from Hongkong, arrived here late on Saturday evening, and resumed her voyage south on Sunday morning in quarantine.

It is stated that after leaving Manila a man aboard was found to be suffering from plague. He was landed at Zamboanga. There was no further sickness amongst the passengers. The cargo for local consignees has been liberated after temporary quarantine.

RIFLE SHOOTING.

AUSTRALIANS AT BISLEY.

LONDON, July 27.

D. L. M'Alister (N.S.W.) secured third place in the Grand Aggregate at the annual meeting of the National Rifle Association at Bisley, with a score of 310. J. Jamieson (N.S.W.), with 310, was eleventh; A. L. Halliday (Q.), 307, thirteenth; C. Cross (V.), 307, fifteenth; L. E. Hubbard (Tas.), 302, fifty-seventh; and J. G. Harrison (N.S.W.), 301, sixty-fourth.

In the Service Rifle Championship Aggregate M'Alister, with 524, was fifth; Cross, 513, seventeenth; Harrison, 510, twenty-second; and Hubbard, 506, thirty-fifth.

M'Alister, with 282, was first in the Territorial Aggregate; Harrison, 269, fifteenth; Jamieson, 266, twenty-fourth; Cross, 266, twenty-eighth; L. T. Ryan (N.S.W.), 264, thirty-seventh; and Hubbard, 261, forty-ninth.

M'Alister and A. W. Parsons (N.S.W.), with 39 each, share the second prize in the Secretary for War's Match; and Cross shares sixth place with 38.

THE NEW CONDITIONS.

In reply to questions in the House of Commons this evening, the Premier (Mr. Asquith) said he had not received any protest from oversea as to the proposed alterations in the competitions at Bisley. The new conditions should be thoroughly tested, and the War Office should consult Australia and Canada before coming to a final decision.

SCULLING.

PADDON IMPROVING.

LONDON, July 27.

Paddon is improving in his training, and signs of staleness have almost disappeared. Accompanied by Sid Kemp, his trainer, he sculled eight miles to-day, the pace for the last four being hard and solid, on low water.

Paddon does not shape comfortably on the top of the tide, but he hopes to remedy this with his new boat, which will be ready next week.

Barry is in strict training, and is fit and well.

George Towns has invited Barry to compete in big handicaps in Australia, but if he goes Barry will not compete for the championship title.

[George Towns has the support of all rowing men in sending an invitation to Barry to visit Australia. It is hoped that he will accept, and make the trip with Paddon; and so soon as it is known that the Englishman has decided to make the trip a strong committee will be formed to give him probably the greatest reception that any sculler has ever had in Australia.

The present idea is that the Lord Mayor should receive both scullers, if they travel together, and that the Town Hall should be secured for the evening of their arrival.

An endeavour will be made to secure the attendance of every living ex-champion sculler of the world, excepting Jacob Gaudaur, who is in Canada. Those who will be specially invited include Edward Trickett, first world's champion; William Beach, unbeaten champion, who holds the record number of wins—7; Peter Kemp, who has completed successfully four times in a year, which is more often than any other sculler; John Maclean, James Stanbury, George Towns, Charles Towns, William Webb, and Richard Arnst.]

CRICKET.

GOOD WICKET-KEEPING.

Playing for Surrey against Sussex, H. Strudwick caught six men behind the wicket in one innings.

BOXING.

WELLS v BELL.

LONDON, July 28.

Bombardier Wells and Colin Bell are unable to agree to terms in connection with the £2500 purse that has been offered, though Bell offers a side stake of £500.

CAILLAUX TRIAL.

EDITOR'S LARGE FORTUNE.

A BITING RETORT.

PARIS, July 28.

The trial of Madame Caillaux for the shooting of M. Calmette, editor of the "Figaro," was continued yesterday.

M. Caillaux produced the will of M. Calmette, bequeathing £520,000. It was suggested that large sums had been obtained illegitimately.

Mr. Bernstein, the dramatist, in replying to the charges made by M. Caillaux, of shirking military duty, retorted that he now belonged to the army. He did not know if M. Caillaux would join the colours, but if he did so his wife would not be able to do the shooting for him.

WALL OF WATER.

TOWN PARTLY SUBMERGED.

DENVER (Col.), July 27.

The business district of the town of Telluride was partially submerged by a wall of water, originating in a cloud-burst, and two women were drowned, and many families rendered homeless.

The water broke a dam, and descended a canyon at terrific speed. The majority of the people were warned, and escaped; but they are now homeless.

AUSTRALIAN-CANADIAN TRADE.

OTTAWA, July 27.

The Canadian Trade Commissioner in Melbourne reports that trade between Australia and Canada shows a decline of £5000 during the past year, but there was a slight increase in Canadian imports from Australia.

Nearly 1000 Canadian motor cars were sent to Australasia during the past year.

GENERAL CABLE NEWS.

LONDON, July 28.

The conference convened for the settlement of the Kikuyu controversy opened at Lambeth Palace yesterday. A private statement was issued to the press at the conclusion of the session.

Mr. Henry P. Sturgis, chairman of directors, at a meeting of the shareholders of the Union Bank of Australia, Ltd., announced that the directors intend to submit to a special meeting proposals to subdivide the present shares into shares of a lower denomination.

The death is announced of Major Eustace Loder, the well-known owner of racehorses.

POVERTY IN AUCKLAND.

ATTRIBUTED TO STRIKE.

AUCKLAND, Tuesday.

Many cases of very grave poverty are reported in the city. The position is attributed directly to the recent strike, which disorganised unskilled labour. Many applications for relief are being received by charitable organisations.

STOLEN MAILS RECOVERED.

WELLINGTON (N.Z.), Tuesday.

The mailbags stolen from the train on the middle section of the main trunk line on June 25 were discovered yesterday in dense bush near the line. The bags had been rifled, but the loss has not yet been ascertained.

THE ELECTIONS.

ENORMOUS ENROLMENT.

BOTH SIDES CONFIDENT.

THE FARMERS' ORGANISATIONS.

Only two more days remain in which electors may make application for enrolment. At 6 o'clock on Thursday evening the time will expire for the rendering of claims, whether they be for new additions to the roll, for transfers from one roll to another, from one subdivision of an electorate to another, or from one address in a subdivision to another address in the same subdivision.

Qualified persons may be reminded that neglect to have their names enrolled not only deprives them of their citizen rights at the ballot box, but also leaves them liable to a fine up to £2.

Some idea of the activity of individuals and organisations may be gauged from the statement of the Commonwealth Electoral Officer in charge of the New South Wales rolls. Mr. M'Laren told a "Herald" representative yesterday that since the end of May over 200,000 claims for enrolment have been received in this State, and attended to. From this it would appear that, despite the deplorably backward state of the New South Wales rolls a couple of months ago, there is now every prospect of the election being fought out on one of the most complete rolls yet secured. Until the work of the electoral office is completed, the original rolls purged, and the supplementary rolls compiled, it will be impossible to say how the number of Commonwealth electors in New South Wales compares with that of the election last year, but there is every indication that the increase will run into many thousands.

This last fact serves to show how difficult it is to attempt to forecast the total result of the elections. In 1910 the Labour party secured a substantial majority of seats in this State. In 1913 they lost seven seats, viz., Calare, Hume, Nepean, New England, Riverina, Robertson, and Werriwa, while they won only one seat, viz., Illawarra. The difficulty of forecasting the result of the 1914 appeal to the country will be seen on a reference to the total majorities of the eight seats in this State which changed representatives last year. The total Liberal majority for its seven victories last year was 13,736 votes, while Labour's majority in the only seat it won (Illawarra) was 106 votes. Thus a total of 13,842 votes changed the fate of eight seats in this State alone a little more than twelve months ago, deposed a Ministry, and altered the trend of the political development of the Commonwealth. Yet it is safe to assume that 14,000 is an insignificant number to the total of additions to the rolls in this State since the last Federal election.

Both sides profess the greatest confidence in their ability to win. Those who are directing the Labour campaign make no secret of the fact that the work of their organisation in the enrolment of electors has been eminently satisfactory. And this has always been an essential feature of Labour organisation. "Get our people on the roll," has been the watchword of the organisers, "and we can depend upon their enthusiasm for the cause to bring them to the ballot-box." The Liberal campaign, on the other hand, is also vibrant with a ring of confidence. Never before has the organisation, it is stated, been so complete or so thorough, and the work of enrolment has been proceeding with much enthusiasm ever since the dissolution of Parliament. A feature of the Liberal organisation of to-day is the attention bestowed upon the young voter. Every effort is made to get in to touch with, and remain in friendly intercourse with, the just-come-of-age young men and women, who thus qualify for their first vote. The Liberal leaders, particularly Mr. Wade, have been pressing this point home very hard for some time, and it is believed the result will be felt at the ballot-box.

Another important feature of the Liberal organisation is the junction of forces with the Farmers and Settlers' Association. These two bodies are working wholeheartedly, side by side, in the effort to return Mr. Cook to power. The effectiveness of the F. and S. A. organisation may be gauged from the fact that it has no fewer than 434 branches throughout the State. The Prime Minister has frankly admitted that he draws the great bulk of his support in Parliament from the country districts, and particularly so with regard to this State, and his ready recognition of the F. and S. A., as a fighting force, has gained for him an influence over the rural vote, which has never before been exercised by the Liberal party.

"SOLID FACTS."

MR. HUGHES'S REPLY

TO LIBERAL LEADERS.

"The world moves. The spirit of progress is so far contagious that even the fusion and its supporters are constrained to assume a rôle that sits on them as ill as the clothes and mien of Falstaff upon the First Gravedigger.

"The fusion has taken to figures. The electors are invited to contrast the inspiring spectacle of Mr. Kelly and Mr. Watt proving their case by sober argument, and appeals to statistics with the frantic diatribes of the Labour party. And I am rebuked for that in my speeches I indulge in florid imagery and eschew argument, figures, and suchlike things. To those who know Mr. Kelly and Mr. Watt their method, their cultured, gentlemanly, and restrained style this statement must appear as the very pinnacle of unconscious humour.

"But I pass it by and come to those convincing arguments and figures aforesaid, merely breathing a silent prayer of thanks that mine enemy thus should have heedlessly left his safe vantage ground of vague generalities, of the beating of drums and the waving of banners to come down where he can be overwhelmed.

"The Liberal leaders are giving solid facts," says the 'Herald.' Good—here's at them! Take the 'solid facts' about the Beef Trust first. Here is the argument: Queensland is supposed to be the trust's headquarters; therefore, the price of rump steak in Brisbane should be dearer there than elsewhere, whereas it is 6½d in Brisbane, and 11½d in Perth, where the Labour Government has its meat shop. From this we are gravely invited to infer that all this talk about the Beef Trust is mere moonshine. Further, the Western Australian Government has lost £34,000 in two years in its venture into the meat business. Therefore, there is no Meat Trust. This is surely most convincing. Mr. Knibbs' figures, we are assured, are used. Mr. Kelly did not invent them. Nor did Mr. Watt. We are all glad to know this at any rate.

"Let us deal with these 'solid facts and figures.' First, as to the retail price of meat. I follow Messrs. Kelly and Watt's excellent example, and go to Mr. Knibbs, and on page 17 of No. 5 of the 'Labour Bulletin,' published in June, 1914, I find that Western Australia is the only State in which the cost of living so far as meat is concerned, has been reduced; while in Queensland it has increased more than in any other State. In Queensland the index number of 1000 for 1912 increased to 1078 in 1914; while in Western Australia it fell from 1000 to 974! So much for that 'solid fact.'

"As for the loss of £34,000 by the Western Australian Government by its venture in the meat trade, it would seem that someone is very careless over his 'solid facts,' for as Mr. Scaddan pointed out on July 7 (1) this shipping service was portion of the Liberal policy at the election in which the Labour party was victorious; and (2) his Government had gone on with it and reduced the freight on cattle from Wyndham from £4 to £2 10s per head, thus putting into the pockets of every producer—the man on the land—the poor farmer—£1500 for every 750 head of cattle he shipped.

"These are 'solid facts' which I invite Messrs. Cook and his lieutenants to contemplate. They completely demolish the so-called 'solid facts' presented by them.

"I come now to Mr. Watt's little contribution. Boiled down (and omitting his polite references to Mr. Fisher as a drunkard) his 'solid facts' amount to a statement that 'the Federal Labour Treasurer had twice as much money as the previous Treasurer.' From this profound, exhaustive and impartial analysis of national finance the electors are invited to believe that the deficit created by Mr. Cook is more creditable and more business-like than the surplus left by the Labour Government!

"I haven't time to deal with Mr. Watt as I should like, and as he deserves. For what he puts forward is not a statement of the facts at all. It is a mere juggling with, and garbling of, the facts. Here is the position: Labour was in office three years; it found a deficit—it left a surplus. Mr. Cook has been in office one year; he found a surplus—he has a deficit of £1,500,000 on one year's working. The Cook Fusion Government had practically the same annual revenue to handle as the Fisher Labour Government in its last year of office. Yet where the Labour Government provided a surplus, the Fusion Government shows a deficit!

"In other words, the Cook Government had a revenue last year of only £173,634 less than the Fisher Government in the preceding year, but spent out of revenue £1,439,883 more than the Fisher Government.

"Or put another way, while the Fisher Government saved at the rate of £100,000 per month, the Cook Government overspent its revenue at the rate of £130,000 per month, and finished the year with a deficiency of £1,500,000.

"These are 'solid facts' to which I invite the electors to turn their attention. They will bear inspection, which is more than can be said of those of some people. For the rest of the 'solid facts' they must stand over for another day."

NORTH SYDNEY.

CAPTAIN BRADLEY IN THE WARRINGA HALL.

Mr. G. M. Down was chairman at a meeting in the Warringah Hall, Neutral Bay, on Monday night, when the Labour candidate for the North Sydney seat in the House of Representatives, Captain Bradley, delivered an address.

Captain Bradley said he was not only carrying the Labour banner, but was also the representative of the Merchant Service Guild. People sometimes overlooked the fact that they owed such a lot to their mercantile marine in the British Empire. He therefore threw upon the people the obligation to see that the mercantile marine was represented in Parliament. It was time that these men who "went down to the sea in ships" were so represented, and given a chance against the ship-owners, who had had all the say. With the exception of Captain Toombs, the mercantile marine had no representation in the State or Federal Houses.

He was sure that the opposition to the Labour party arose from prejudice and ignorance. These objections were easily overcome. A glance at the Labour platform would convince anybody of the humanity of their aims. No other movement had achieved such reform or such emancipation as the trades union movement. It had been said that they were inclined to be tyrannical, but discipline must be maintained in any great movement; and if they looked at the other side, they would find organisations quite as tyrannical. There were no trades unions that he knew of to squeeze out those who did not belong to them. Opportunities were given to everybody to join.

Captain Toombs, M.L.A., and Senator Rae also spoke; and the meeting carried a vote of confidence in Captain Bradley.

WENTWORTH.

MR. CRUICKSHANK'S CANDIDATURE.

At Stratton's Hall, Waverley, last night, a large audience assembled to hear Mr. W. M. Hughes deliver an address in support of the candidature of Mr. R. W. Cruickshank. The meeting was enthusiastic throughout, and at the conclusion cheers were given for the Labour party and the candidate.

Mr. Cruickshank commenced his speech by denying that he had ever contested another election despite the statement that had been made to the contrary. Mr. Kelly had objected to Mr. Fisher calling himself a miner. It was only a few years ago that Mr. Cook described himself as a miner. Mr. Kelly was on the roll as "of independent means." There were two classes of men of independent means—Mr. Kelly's and the men in the domain. Both were parasites on the public. (Applause.) He had looked over all the Liberal candidates, and he had come to the conclusion that Mr. Kelly was the "saftest of the family." He was only the fourth of a Minister. With the assistance of Teesdale Smith he had muddled up the Works Department. Mr. Kelly had claimed that day labour was more expensive than contract, but in Queensland it had been proved that a huge saving had been brought about by day labour. Mr. Kelly received Teesdale Smith as a long lost brother, and gave him a contract at a sum three times the amount another contractor got for similar work.

Mr. Hughes, who was received with prolonged cheers, said that Wentworth was one of the few citadels remaining to be captured. He was glad to see that the tide of democracy was sweeping over the electorate. The Senate in rejecting the preference bill did not flout the will of the people, but carried it out. (Cheers.) This talk about flouting the majority was so much bird lime, which was so apparent that a man deprived of all his senses could see it, hear it, taste it, and smell it. (Laughter.) The Senate had set themselves to do the work they were sent there to do.

As regards day labour all he would say was that the attitude of the Government was to abuse it on all sides, and then take advantage of it. The only contract they dealt with was the Teesdale Smith contract. That seemed to settle the contract business. Now they were building the trans-continental line and the Federal capital by day labour because it was cheaper.

Referring to the question of the pensions, Mr. Hughes said that according to Mr. Watt the widows would get over £3,000,000 a year. Why, the place would have to be studded with widows. In N.Z. the widow pension was 6d per head of the population. Taking that as a guide, the Commonwealth pensions would cost about £150,000. Mr. Watt was therefore only about £3,000,000 out. (Laughter.)

Sir Wm. Irvine was against pensions, and proposed to substitute a national insurance scheme. That scheme was part of Mr. Cook's policy. After 12 months Mr. Cook had done nothing with the scheme except get actuarial calculations. There was no power under the Constitution to put this scheme into operation. The Liberals knew this, and were only talking to fool the people. They could bring in a voluntary scheme, but not a contributory one. Their attitude was not to interfere with the present pensioners, but to stop the present scheme and introduce compulsory insurance.

SPEECH BY MR. W. H. KELLY.

Mr. W. H. Kelly, Acting Minister for Home Affairs, addressed a largely attended meeting of women at Harkness's Hall, Bathurst-street, Woollahra, yesterday afternoon, in furtherance of his candidature for Wentworth Division, and was accorded a most attentive hearing. Dr. Lamrock presided.

Mr. Kelly said that the Labour party during its three years' tenure of office had shown a disregard for economy in the public finances, and the people had to pay the piper. This was reflected in the present high cost of living, for which their opponents blamed the Liberal party, but he contended that such was not the case, for the Cook Government had not placed a penny of taxation on the backs of the people, and had thereby set an example. He also said that when the present Government took charge of affairs it was faced by a large number of bills, which had to be met, but all the commitments had been paid off and the country had a surplus of £110,000 at the end of the year.

At the close of his remarks Mr. Kelly was accorded a vote of confidence.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS.

"I am somewhat puzzled," writes "W.M.S.," "as to whether it is possible for me and the members of my family to exercise the franchise at the coming Federal election. I have lived for the past 18 years in Forbes-street, Darlinghurst, but, having purchased a new house at Kensington, am going to reside there during the present week. Will you please say whether I shall have power to record my vote in the Darlinghurst electorate, on which roll my name appears."

[The Commonwealth Electoral Officer for New South Wales (Mr. M'Laren) states that "W. M. S." is entitled to record his vote in the Darlinghurst subdivision of the East Sydney electorate.]

SENATOR M'DOUGALL AND SENATOR MILLEN.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—I cannot allow Senator M'Dougall's efforts to succeed. My statement was, and is, that in spite of his denial he had, by assenting to the Address to his Excellency, protested against the dissolution of the Senate.

In refutation of this statement, he points out that the Address requested his Excellency to publish the correspondence passing between himself and the Government. It is quite true that the Address did contain such a request, but it also contained a protest against the Senate dissolution: portions of which protest I gave in my last communication on the subject. The mere fact that Senator M'Dougall, by assenting to the Address, invited his Excellency to publish the correspondence does not and cannot relieve him of the responsibility of having also, in the same document, protested against the dissolution in the following and many other words of similar strain:—"We (and this includes Senator M'Dougall) respectfully submit that the dissolution of the Senate ought not to follow upon the mere legitimate exercise of its functions under the Constitution, but only upon such action as makes responsible Government impossible . . . These conditions do not exist in the present case."

I am, etc., E. D. MILLEN.

STORY OF THE PAST.

ANCIENT EGYPT.

DOLMEN AND PYRAMID.

Dotted about the world, on the Mediterranean littoral, in Ireland, in Madras, Algiers, and Great Britain, one comes across curious monuments, the relics of some neolithic race, that have puzzled archaeologists for years past by the curious similarity of their structure, not to be explained by any theory of racial migration or kinship. "Giants' graves" in Sardinia, "fairy houses" in France, graves (so-called) of Thor and Odin at Upsala, these mysterious erections fall into two well-marked categories, the dolmen or megalithic monument of great masses of shaped stone, and the tumulus or "barrow" of earth. On the question of these monuments scientific opinion is still divided, but in Germany and among the younger generation of English archaeologists the consensus is in favour of Professor Elliot Smith's reading of the secret, which was explained in his third lecture last evening in the University Hall.

MEGALITHIC ORIGINS.

As Professor Smith previously pointed out, it was shortly before the beginning of the Pyramid era in Egypt that there appeared in the Nile Valley an alien race, whose traces are to be discovered all round the Mediterranean, and in Western Europe. The discovery of copper and the appearance of the megalithic monuments are practically contemporaneous, but the theory that they were alike originally introduced by this alien race breaks down, in view of the fact that in regions where this race has left traces, no megaliths are to be found.

On the other hand the same theory cannot be held to account for dolmens being found as far apart as Iceland and Samoa, and pyramids in Egypt and Peru. Professor Smith's view, therefore, based on careful and lengthy research, is that an impetus in the building of these monuments originated in Egypt not long before the Pyramid age, and was gradually extended; and he adduces in evidence the established fact that from the earliest times we have records of Egyptian expeditions by sea, which extended certainly to the fringe of the Indian Ocean, and in all probability, as early as 3200 B.C., to Western Asia.

THE RISE OF THE PYRAMID.

How these monuments first came to be built is another story, and one which unfolds simultaneously with the history of mummification. The invention of mud bricks, and their utilisation in the lining of graves, led by a mere accident of technique to the rectangular mastaba, the first right-angled buildings known, with the "sirdab," or "hidden place," as the Arabs call it, in which in process of time a statue of the dead was placed to receive the offerings of the living. These offerings at first took the form of actual food; later on, saucerlike cups, or paintings of food, were substituted as symbols to ensure a plentiful supply for the dead man in the next world. The exterior court, facing always towards the Nile, became in time a real temple of offerings. The rise to preeminence of the worship of Ra, the sun-god, over that of Osiris, brought a change in the orientation of the mastaba, which henceforth faced always towards the east, so that the mummy might be carried towards the west, whither the sun sank to rest, and where the souls of the dead were supposed to dwell in the halls of Amen. The custom of building royal mastabas on a series of terraces gradually led to the filling up of the terraces with stone or rubble. Hence the pyramid; and in the step-pyramid at Sakkara one sees an interesting example of the transition stage. But the pyramid is not a derivative from the fully-developed mastaba: it is a collateral branch, derived from the mastaba in its more primitive form, with the sloping staircase on the north or the east leading to the subterranean tomb. It was built of stone and not of brick; and, an important development, the usual temple of offerings, owing to the identification of the kings with the Sun-god, became a temple in which that deity was actually worshipped.

THE SECRET OF THE SPHINX.

It is interesting to note how, detail by detail, the method by which these vast structures were actually raised, and how by means of a spiral road, gently graduated, the huge stones of their composition were dragged into position on rollers made of logs. The annual inundation of the Nile made it necessary to construct a solid raised causeway from the Pyramids to the river, by which the materials might be conveniently conveyed. And here we learn the solution of a mystery which has teased human imagination for centuries. A huge mass of solid rock, during the building of the Pyramid of Chephren, compelled the causeway to deflect itself slightly to the south, and, for the greater glory of the monarch, the rock itself was hewn into the mighty portrait which is universally known as the Sphinx. The certain verity of this theory, only propounded six years ago, is proved by the peculiar manner in which the hair is treated, for the fashion of royal hairdressing varied continually from Pharaoh to Pharaoh. The marvel is really, not that the secret should have been discovered, but that it should have remained a secret for so long. An illuminating reconstruction of the scene, with the two great Pyramids of Chephren and Cheops, the Sphinx, and the lordly causeway with the temple at its head, was thrown upon the screen, as well as of the temple and obelisk of the Sun—the first obelisk in history—raised at Abusir during the sixth dynasty.

AMATEUR ORCHESTRAL SOCIETY.

The Sydney Amateur Orchestral Society gave the second concert of their twenty-third season at the Town Hall last night, when there was a splendid audience. A performance of Beethoven's Symphony No. 2 in D was the principal item of the evening. This symphony is particularly interesting, as representing the farthest point to which Beethoven reached before bursting into those wonderful new regions of his ultimate style, till then unpenetrated. It is the culminating point of the days of Haydn and Mozart. At times one is reminded of these composers, but towards the close indications of the glorious future are revealed. Also worth noting is the fact that, in this work, Beethoven is on his way to discarding the troublesome intermediate periods, thus giving the work unity, instead of separting all clauses in the Mozartian way, which Wagner compares to the "rattling of dishes at a royal feast." The performance of this work by the Sydney Amateur Orchestral Society was a praiseworthy effort, but a general fault that must be noted was a lack of animation, though this fault was less noticeable in the finale. However, Mr. Alfred Hill, the conductor, obtained some fine effects in the delightful Larghetto movement, with its indolent beauty, this portion of the work being possibly the best played. Good effects were also obtained in quaintly rolling crescendos of the third movement. The leader of the orchestra, M. Henri Staell, and all the players worked hard, and considerable applause greeted the performance.

The Rachmaninoff Concerto in C Minor, for pianoforte and orchestra, with Mr. Jaques Pintel as soloist, had to be abandoned after the first movement, owing to a defect in the solo instrument. Early in the movement it could be clearly seen by the pianist's manner that something was amiss. At the close of the movement Mr. Hill explained that the hammer of one of the keys had broken. Mr. Pintel explained to the writer afterwards that the hammer broke shortly after the opening, and that at the time he was not trying to obtain fortissimo. This was all the more disappointing owing to the reputation made here by Mr. Pintel during the Calve tour, but it will be sufficient to say that, in spite of the drawback of an almost overwhelming orchestral ensemble, he opened brilliantly. To the opening number of the programme, Goldmark's symphonic poem, "Sakuntala," somewhat the same statement may be applied. The exquisite harp part should have stood out, a thing it never did except in solo moments. However, the "Sakuntala" overture, together with Slavonic Dance of Dvorak, given at the close, were among the best items, the former, with its strongly-marked passionate element giving scope for fine work. The famous gavotte from Ambroise Thomas' "Mignon" was also on the programme, this item being encored. Miss Muriel Barton sang, with orchestra, the aria "O Mia Patria," from Verdi's "Aida," and later "Softly Sighs," from Weber's "Der Freischutz," in which she won justified applause.

PHOTOGRAPHIC EXHIBITION.

An exhibition of amateur photographic work was opened at the New South Wales Photographic Society's Rooms, 47 Elizabeth-street, last night. The prints hung were those with which the society was successful in winning in England this year the oversea amateur photographic competition. This is the third successive time that the New South Wales Society has carried off the honours. The exhibits comprised mostly scenic work, but a few excellent life studies were included. The exhibition will be open for about a fortnight.

CASUALTIES.

DEATH FROM POISON.

Before Mr. Hawkins, at the City Coroner's Court yesterday, an inquest was held concerning the death of Mary Johnson (33), which took place at Ranelagh, Darling Point-road, Woollahra, on July 20. A verdict of death from the effects of poison was returned, but whether accidentally self-administered or not the evidence adduced did not enable the Coroner to say. Norman Johnson, a mining engineer, said deceased was his wife. She told him she had taken poison instead of her medicine. He had never heard deceased express any intention of taking her life.

FELL FROM BALCONY.

William Anderson, a little boy, 3 years of age, fell 15ft from the balcony at his parents' residence, 7 Bellevue-street, Surry Hills, yesterday morning. He was admitted to Sydney Hospital, suffering from concussion.

FELL INTO THE WATER.

William Scott, 59, a Government inspector of works, was inspecting timber at Darling Harbour, when by some means he fell into the water. He was admitted to the Royal Prince Alfred Hospital suffering from a fractured leg.

RAILWAY FATALITY.

Early yesterday morning Walter Thomas Gibbs, 27, a bread carter, was killed near Summer Hill Railway Station. No one witnessed the accident. The stationmaster at Summer Hill found the body on the line shortly before 7 o'clock.

INFANT FATALLY BURNT.

DELEGATE, Tuesday.

The infant daughter of Mr. W. L. Roberts, of Craigie, was passing round a log fire near her home yesterday when her clothes caught fire. The child was badly burnt, and died a few hours later.

KICKED BY A HORSE.

BOMBALA, Tuesday.

A lad named Kilkenny, aged 13 years, while putting a rug on a horse last night received a severe kick in the temple. The boy became unconscious, and was taken to Bombala Hospital. His condition is critical.

KILLED BY MOTOR CAR.

PERTH (W.A.), Tuesday.

Leonard Edmiston, aged 10, was killed by a motor car at Subiaco last night.

THE WEATHER.

SNOW AT KOSCIUSKO.

A rapid easterly movement of the high pressure, or fine weather system, of about 1200 miles, in the past 24 hours, has enabled the extensive Antarctic disturbance to advance from the westward as far as our western districts. Excepting for cloud areas in this latter area, with light rain at Pooncarie, the weather at 9 a.m. yesterday was fine and clear generally.

The influence of the departing "high" has been responsible for frosts generally along the tablelands slopes, and at scattered places in coastal districts.

The winter cold was still rather pronounced yesterday morning, as most of the minimum readings were in the thirties (deg.), and many lower than freezing point of water. Mount Kosciusko reports still one foot of snow on the ground; and the lake surface was frozen 6in.

The lowest temperatures reported were:—Kosciusko 23 deg., Cooma, Rockley, Nimitybelle, and Bundarra, each 25 deg; and Bombala, Carcoar, Armidale, and Adelong, each 26 deg.; and Queanbeyan, Glen Innes, Murrumburrah, Molong, Coonabarabran, and Bowral, each 27 deg.

This cold should shortly be displaced for a short time by the warming influence of the northerly winds attending the advancing disturbance. Cloud and showers should work eastward over the State from western districts to the coast, chiefly over the southern districts.

The only rainfalls reported yesterday were 12 points at Gabo and 2 at Crookhaven Heads.

MOTOR CAR STOLEN.

A motor car was stolen from May Brothers' motor garage, 499 Parramatta-road, Leichhardt, early yesterday morning, and was later in the day discovered by Ranger Thompson, abandoned in Centennial Park. The thieves entered the garage through an open window.

SICKNESS ON A STEAMER.

THREE DEATHS.

TOWNSVILLE, Tuesday.

Whilst the steamer Limerick was in the bay on Friday, a child named Haywood died. On the arrival of the steamer at the jetty, the mother and two other children of the same family were taken to the hospital suffering from dysentry. The two children died on Monday. The father is in Brisbane.

ESCAPED PRISONER.

MARYBOROUGH (Q.), Tuesday.

James Roberts, the prisoner who escaped from the Bundaberg mail train on July 20, was recaptured at the rear of Newtown Park this morning. Two constables came upon him lying behind a clump of bushes, with a newspaper over his face.

BOILER EXPLODES.

A BUILDING WRECKED.

WELLINGTON (N.Z.), Tuesday.

The explosion of a steam boiler in a vulcanising shop at Timaru wrecked the building to-day. A piece of iron crashed through an adjoining roof. It appears that the proprietor had left a neighbour temporarily in charge of the vulcaniser, and he had replenished the fire. The fuel closed a tap which should have remained open, and the explosion followed. A man was found seriously injured, and was taken to the hospital.

MR. A. G. STEPHENS' LECTURES.

At the King's Hall last night Mr. A. G. Stephens gave the third of his set of "Evenings with Australian Authors," dealing with "Dreamers and Singers." He attempted to deal in two hours with six Australian poetical writers—Henry Kendall, Victor Daly, W. H. Ogilvie, J. B. O'Hara, C. H. Soutar, and Roderic Quinn, with the result that only Kendall was treated with some approach to adequacy. The other writers received only slight notice.

Mr. Stephens emphasised the childlike nature of Kendall. He spoke of the poet's innocence as one spoke of the innocence of Blake. With all the later rivalry, the lecturer declared that only one writer, Shaw Neilson, had composed verses of equal quality with those which showed Kendall's peculiarly single-minded emotion.

Among those present were the Premier (Mr. Holman) and Mrs. Holman. The Premier, in the course of a short address, dwelt upon the strong individuality and the talent of Mr. Stephens as a critic.

AUSTRALIAN WEATHER.

THE "HERALD" MAP.

The high pressure which on Monday was centrally situated about Bourke has since then moved very rapidly in a south-easterly direction, so that at 9 a.m. yesterday the centre lay over the Tasman Sea, between Lord Howe Island and Wellington (N.Z.).

Although the rear isobars of this high still cover the greater part of the eastern States, the easterly movement has enabled the extensive Antarctic disturbance to also make easting, from the western to the Eastern Bight. It now occupies the region between Eyre, Alice Springs, and Hobart, and the greater part of the Southern Ocean.

Due to its influence, cloudy to overcast conditions rule generally over South Australia, south-western New South Wales, and Victoria and Tasmania. Squally NW winds are favoured in our western districts, with increasing cloud and scattered rain, extending eastward over the southern half, and also affecting the other SE States. As the disturbance makes further easting, the squally and mild northerlies should give way before squally west to southerly winds. The centre of a new high of very little energy lies over the extreme SW corner of the continent. Monsoonal inclinations still persist over the extreme northern regions of Australia.

Ocean Forecast.—Squally weather over the Bight, advancing to the South Australian coast, and later to Tasmania and the Straits: smooth to moderate seas elsewhere.

STATE PARLIAMENTS.

QUEENSLAND.

BRISBANE, Tuesday.

In the Legislative Council, Mr. Barlow moved the second reading of the Interstate Destitute Persons' Relief Bill, to enable a person to be followed from one State to another, if he left behind a destitute person dependent upon him. Mr. Barlow said a similar measure had been passed in four other States, but the bill would not come into operation until similar provision had been made in all the States.

The second reading was agreed to.

THE TILIKUM II. FOUND.

BRISBANE, Tuesday.

Information has been received by the Portmaster at Brisbane from Thursday Island to the effect that Tilikum II., recently stolen from Townsville, has been recovered. The vessel, which had two white men aboard, had been disguised and repainted, and her rig had also been altered.

SHEEP KILLED.

TRAM RUNS INTO A MOB.

Twenty-four sheep were killed, and fifteen others injured, by a tram at Haberfield, on Monday night.

A flock of 600 sheep, owned by John Rogers, of Park-road, Paddington, were being driven along Ramsay-road, Haberfield, by Walter Sly, about 6.15 p.m., when a tram ran into them near the O'Connor-street stopping place. The tram, which was bound from Circular Quay to Abbotsford, was derailed, and a block occurred in the traffic for about 20 minutes.

Six of the injured sheep had to be subsequently killed.

AMUSEMENTS.

THE LOTUS PLAYERS.

At the Repertory Theatre last night the Lotus Players gave a programme of four playlets by Australian writers. The proceeds of the evening were in aid of the Civil Ambulance, and the enterprise was well patronised.

The first of the four was "Way Out Back," by Mr. C. Peterkin. The plot was woven round the wife of Dad Barton, a self-made farmer, who wished to put his boy to the test. It led to tears and recrimination, but all is happiness in the end, and Dad proved himself just the opposite to what everyone thought him to be. The plot was simple, and the play was somewhat verbose. Miss Millie Cole played the part of Mum confidently and pleasingly, and Mr. Horace Brodie did well as Choo Lee.

"Gertie's Glad Eye" was a comedy "in one visit," by Mr. J. Clarence Lee. It is a comedy that depends largely on witty dialogue, and Mr. Lee has done well. In addition to writing the comedy, he was called upon with an hour's notice to go on and play one of his own parts. His acting assisted in towards the success of the piece. The central figure was Maud Mary, a precocious child, who diffused Cooks advice in the atmosphere of the drawing-room. The result delighted the audience. Miss Rosie Patterson as Maud Mary was excellent. Her gestures were always appropriate, and she made the most of her dialogue.

In Venette the Dancer, Mr. V. Haldane-Coward was able to crowd a great deal of story into a very small space. The principal figure is Venette, who is on the stage all the time. As the impassioned woman of intense feeling, subject to violent contrasts, Miss Violet Haldane played a difficult part splendidly. It is hard to reconcile the author's making Venette so rapidly change her attitude towards Claude Beckwatte in her interview with the mother. Such an alteration of front should be managed more subtly.

In Wattle Tree Farm, Mr. Alfred Hill makes a venture into play-writing. The story is a simple one of a successful farmer's endeavour to interfere with his sons choice of a wife. The play moves easily, and was favourably received by the audience. Mrs. D. Hardie, who had the advantage of a good make-up, was real in her methods. Mr. Claude Hodgson as Sandy Pollock also did well.

FINANCIAL.

MORT'S DOCK.

The half-yearly report of Mort's Dock and Engineering Company, Ltd., which covers the six months ended June 30, states that the net profit totalled £12,288, which, with £11,351 brought forward, makes £23,640 available for distribution. Out of this the directors recommend a dividend at the rate of 6 per cent., absorbing £9000, and the placing of £1500 to the renewal fund, leaving £13,140 to be carried forward. The net profits of the company have been steadily increased during recent years, as the following table shows:—

June,	£7,948	Dec., 1910	£10,527
Dec.,	8,481	June, 1911	12,077

SILVER AND ITS DISTRIBUTION.

The greater part of the silver-mining output has been transhipped across the world for centuries, from west to east, says the "Financial Times." As the cost of transmitting increases in proportion to bulk and weight the purer the form in which silver travels the cheaper is the expense of carriage. For this reason silver is always smelted at the mine itself, provided sufficient labour and fuel be available. Electricity has been brought into use for refining during recent years, and by its means the quality of the silver refined has been raised to a remarkable degree. It is not uncommon for electrically refined bars to run 9997 or more parts fine in the 10,000. Silver after refining is melted, as a rule, into the form of what are styled bars, about 1100 troy ounces in weight, massive bricks measuring 12 inches long by 5 wide by 4½ deep. London is the world's silver centre, where the greater part of the refined silver output of the globe is brought to market. Here governments, with the exception of those in the Americas, obtain supplies they need for coinage. China and India have the most capacious appetites of all. The greater part of the silver imported into India is utilised by the arts, namely, for manufacturing jewellery and utensils, not for coinage. The average import for industrial purposes at the present time is about 50,000,000 ounces per annum. The vast bulk of this quantity is worked up into jewellery in the form of bangles, etc. In India the manufacture of silver utensils is confined principally to those intended to contain food.

"TWISTING" LIFE POLICIES.

Mr. George A. Vander (Brisbane) writes:—

Sir,—I read with interest an article in your issue of the 22nd instant, under the caption of "Twisting" in your "Monetary and Commercial" columns.

It is agreed that all well-conducted life offices set their faces rigidly against any interference with the existing business of a competing office.

This statement is open to very grave doubt, as several leading life offices issue comparative statements and place them in the hands of their agents with the result that these individuals attempt, and in many instances successfully attempt, to twist other companies' policies into their own company. Further, managing directors and others at annual meetings have so far forgotten business etiquette as to refer disparagingly to other offices, and even openly criticise a class of business done by these offices.

It is absolute farce to say that they are opposed to twisting when such tactics as the above are being adopted by Australia's old-established offices. Any management that obviously professes to oppose twisting tactics should not put literature into the hands of its representatives of an ambiguous nature.

So long as these comparative statements are issued by these offices, twisting will continue, and instead of friendly rivalry between the various offices great hostility will eventually be universal. It has been said that twisting is a mean and contemptible way of getting business, but in my opinion the people responsible for the issue of comparative statements are the arch-villains of life assurance, as they are undoubtedly responsible for the growing evil of "twisting."

AUSTRALIA'S INDEBTEDNESS.

Mr. N. Trevor Jones writes:—

Sir,—Referring to the information given under the head of "Australia's Loan Indebtedness," in the issue of the 22nd inst., during the visit of the Scottish Trade Commissioners, the president, I think it was, said in one of his addresses, which was reported in the "Herald," that during the last 10 years, which have been the years of Australia's greatest expansion and development, the national debt of Australia had not increased, and that consequently such development has been carried out with our own money.

Having no "Herald" file here, I regret I have not the reference to the report of the speech.

Is there any explanation which would reconcile those remarks with the information given in your column in the issue of the 22nd inst.?

No, except this, that during the last decade till quite recently the bulk of the money borrowed by the State Governments was locally raised. It is probable that the president was thinking of external indebtedness.

QUEENSLAND NATIONAL BANK.

"Shareholder" writes:—

Sir,—I notice an article in your issue of 24th inst., headed "Queensland National Bank—Its History." You might insert the following, which I take from the bank's report. At the meeting held on February 13, 1913, the chairman said: "Without committing the bank in any way, and unless something unforeseen occurs, we hope, and believe, we shall be in a position to pay a dividend in about seven years." As this meeting took place 18 months ago, readers will see that about five and a half years have still to run before a dividend is paid—not about four years as stated in your columns.

But it is generally believed that the chairman took a conservative view.

EMU PROSPECT GRAVEL AND ROAD METAL.

The report of the above company covers the half-year ended June 30. It shows a net profit of £6087, which, with balance brought forward, made £8988 available. A dividend of 1/ per share, and a bonus of 1/ per share absorb £4488, £1000 is written off for depreciation of plant, machinery, and buildings, £250 for depreciation of tramway, and £100 for depreciation of cottages, leaving £3130 to be carried forward. The report was adopted at the half-yearly meeting of shareholders held yesterday.

THE UNION BANK OF AUSTRALIA.

The inspector for the Union Bank of Australia, Limited, has been informed by cable that at a meeting of proprietors, held in London on Monday a dividend of £1 5s per share and a bonus of 10s per share together, equal to 14 per cent. per annum, were declared, and that about £45,000 is carried forward, and £30,000 added to reserve fund, bringing the total to £1,960,000 (which includes premiums received on new shares). The amount added to reserve fund has been invested in the business of the bank.

STAMP DUTY PROBLEMS.

DRAFTS AND P.N.'s.

"A.B." writes:—

Sir, 1. A Sydney merchant consigns goods to Brisbane, and draws on the consignee. What stamp duty, N.S. Wales or Queensland, is necessary on a draft 30 days after sight?

2. Is stamp duty, N.S. Wales and Queensland, or both, necessary on an ordinary P.N. payable in Queensland, given by the maker to the payee in Sydney?

(1) New South Wales duty of 6d for every £25 or part thereof must be paid before the draft is issued.

(2) The same applies to P.N.'s.

MORE ABOUT CONTRACTS.

"Perplexed" writes:—

Sir,—1. Must a contract for the sale of land and transfer of same land, both be stamped at the rate of 10s for each £100 of purchase money?

2. Can adhesive stamps be used for stamping the contracts of sale?

3. If it is imperative that the stamp duty must be by impressed stamp, will the value of adhesive stamps used in ignorance be allowed for?

(1) No. The contract must be stamped with ad valorem duty, and the conveyance on transfer may then be stamped from £1.

(2) Yes; in the case of a vendor who may stamp the contract under sub-section 4 of the Act No. 3, 1914.

(3) Yes.

BILLS OF LADING.

"H.J.S." writes:—

Sir,—I paid £11 1s 6d to a shipping company for freight on goods sent to Queensland, and on the counterfoil of the bill of lading the receipt of the money is acknowledged by a clerk of the shipping company by writing the word "paid" opposite the amount and his initials only.

1. Is this receipt binding on the company?
2. Would same require a duty stamp?

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual meeting of the Sydney Chamber of Commerce will be held at the premises, George and Grosvenor streets, to-morrow at 11 a.m.

The council's report for the past year is already in the hands of the members, and sets out fully the variety of interests covered, and the good work done during the year. In addition to the adoption of the annual report, the president (Mr. H. Y. Braddon) will deliver the usual address from the chair. The members will be called upon to decide as to the personnel of the council for the incoming year, the following nominations having been received:—

R. E. ALLPORT,
H. Y. BRADDON,
A. A. C. COCKS, M.L.A.,
J. RUSSELL FRENCH,
C. LLOYD JONES,
WALTER J. KEEP,
ARTHUR KIDMAN,
C. E. D. MEARES,
J. O. MEEKS,

The members are also to consider the proposal from the Master Retailers' Association that a retail merchants' sectional committee be constituted, to consist of the following first members:—S. Hordern, R. M. Clark, J. Chalmers, J. A. Murdoch, C. R. Crossman, J. McDowell, C. Lloyd Jones.

The annual dinner will be held to-morrow evening, at Farmer's Rooms, at 7.30 p.m.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Fred. Alderson and Williamson, Ltd., is going into liquidation. It will be succeeded by Fred. Alderson and Co., Ltd., who will continue the leather part of the business without a break. H. L. Norton and L. E. S. May, formerly of Fred. Alderson and Williamson, Ltd., will, in partnership, continue the business in hide and skins lately carried on by that company.

The half-yearly meeting of the Newcastle and Hunter River Steamship Company, Ltd., was held yesterday, Mr. John Hall presiding. The report was adopted.

COMMERCIAL.

THE MARKETS.

A fair business was done in all seasonable grocery lines yesterday. Prices in the distributing trade were practically without alteration, except in tinned meats, which were very scarce. Globe corned beef in halves was worth 9/ a dozen, and in ones 15/6. Sheeps' tongues were only available in Globe brand at 12/6. Other brands were quite off the market. Meats, soups, and tongues were being imported from Victoria. No canning operations are proceeding, because of excessive prices realised at the auctions. Inquiries for Scroll and Horseshoe salmon were strong. Only small parcels could be procured. One parcel of 75 cases of 1lb talls Scroll sold at 12/. Flats were practically unprocurable. Business was done in ½lb flats at 8/9, and afterwards 9/. Parcels of Alaska red salmon sold at 7/6 and 8/. Herrings were firm at the quoted prices. Morton's herrings in tomato sauce were particularly scarce. Dried fruits were going out well, and indications pointed to the demand growing as the warm weather comes on. Slight as the reduction in sultanas is, compared with prices ruling last year—⅛d to ¼d per lb—it seems to have had a favourable effect on the consumption. If a real reduction were made, say, a penny halfpenny per lb, the consumption would go up by leaps and bounds, and would bring a lot more country under vine cultivation. Apricots were selling readily, as well as dried peaches. Evaporated pears had some demand. Dates were cheap. Parcel sales were made at 2½d per lb. Distributing lots were quoted at 2¾d. The demand was good, and there were still large stocks to supply that demand.

A considerable business was done in tea yesterday, blenders taking advantage of the weakness of the market. A large quantity of tea had unexpectedly arrived, and vendors, believing that there was a danger of stocks accumulating, forced sales at prices which showed a loss on landed costs. Transactions included the disposal of 1200 packages of Ceylons. The market in producing centres was steady.

Black wires were easy at £7/5/ for No. 8, and £7/15/ for No. 10, ex store. For lots to arrive a little less was quoted, ex wharf. Supplies seemed again to be mounting up, and the position of No. 10 was easier than that of No. 8. Imported wire nettings of all descriptions were extremely difficult to find. Australian netting in place of doing the major part of the trade was consequently doing practically all the business that could be found. Heavy supplies of imported brands are due shortly. Other lines were without alteration. The oil market was firm, and full rates were being obtained. No advice was received of any further movement in the f.o.b. price of linseed oil. After a spurt of buying which took place on Monday, merchants here were awaiting developments in the international situation. Meggitt's Australian raw and boiled linseed oils were meeting with a fair demand, sales during the week including 4000 gallons. Whitelead had moderate sales, but not of Champion's, whose holders would not quit at any price. They wanted all they had and all in sight for their own distributing requirements, or to fulfil contracts. Sales of Johnson's included 20 tons of June shipment, cwts at £39, and quarters at £38/10/. Fuller's American lead, to arrive shortly, also had sales, 14 tons in all, at £38 and £38/10/. Turpentine was steady. Fish oils were strong, but high prices kept the demand down to bare requirements.

Cornsacks were slightly stronger. Melbourne resellers were offering, but not on such favourable terms as on Monday. Rain in South Australia and indications of rain in Victoria, had improved the position of the wheat crops, and it was thought that there might be some possibility of Victoria wanting the major portion of her heavy buyings of sacks. Houses generally quoted 6/7½ net for season's delivery. Calcutta came through at 6/6 c.i.f., which is considerably above the parity of the Sydney price, and still more above the parity of Melbourne. Woolpacks remained quiet. The demand was consistent, but in no way excited, and quotations were 3/4 less discount, both on spot and June shipment. Sales of ore pockets were made at 4/. Holders of branbags were putting their hopes on dry weather increasing the call on chaff. Spot lots were quoted at 5/3 net.

SALMON PRICES ABROAD.

The general opinion among the grocery houses is that salmon prices will open higher next month than they did a year ago. Everything points to a strong market, but competition reasons may cause the prices to be not quite so high as is at present expected. Abroad the position is just as strong as it is here. According to the "Produce Markets Review," that strong position continues to attract considerable attention in London, and all descriptions were very firm at the time the mail was despatched. "Although the 1913 pack was practically the largest known," the review continues, "consumption has increased to such an extent that even the enormous supply of 8,063,449 cases has not been equal to the demand, and since the opening of the season prices in London have advanced no less than 4s for red Alaska, 6s for British Columbia 1lb flats, and 7s per case for ½lb flat tins. Even now prices are several shillings per case below the rates indicated for the 1914 pack, which it is estimated will be 2,982,447 cases less than that of 1913. Holders of spot parcels are, therefore, not anxious sellers, as presumably prices will advance very soon. Apart altogether from the statistical position the intrinsic value of the commodity as a food is very pronounced. Exceptional value is obtainable in Siberian ½lb flat tins of pink and red, for the fish is well packed and of good appearance. The industry in that district is yet in its infancy, but it promises to become a very important source of supply."

It is interesting to note that local prices have advanced 7s a case since the commencement of the present season.

BREADSTUFFS.

SELLERS WITHDRAW.

The wheat market was not as excited yesterday as on the previous day, but sellers were more resolute. On the other hand, the buyers were of opinion that wheat was not worth more than 4/, and this was only for covering purposes by local speculators. The shippers would not go above 3/11½. These were closing bids, and prices fluctuated a little during the day round these quotations. Sellers at the last withdrew altogether from the market. For growers' lots shippers bid up to 3/6 at the stacks, equal to 3/10½ delivered Darling Island or Darling Harbour. Some sales of new wheat, January to March delivery, were made at 3/9, and later 3/9½, but when the price was advanced to 3/9¾ no response was made. In the overseas markets there were no buyers at equivalent quotations.

Cables from London advised the sales of cargoes near at hand at 37/ per quarter, an advance of /6. The markets started excitedly, but closing bids were /6 weaker on the day. Futures started in the morning at 7/1½ per cental, in the course of the day they touched 7/7, and closed at 7/1⅝, or one-eighth below the opening price.

Two factors complicated the situation. War, even if it is localised, if it is kept to Austria-Hungary and Servia, will mean a wasted wheat in those countries, and less acreage sown next season, which makes for higher prices. The local factor which makes for firmness is the absence of rain in South Australia and in Victoria. Yesterday there were fair prospects of rain falling in those two States, and if seasonable falls are experienced then the wheat operator, in deciding on his course, will have to pit the effects of war against the good prospects caused by the rain.

Flour, too, was made firmer by the probabilities of war. Against any increase in price may be put the fact that stocks are heavy, and that flour could still be bought below the present price of the association. The quotation, therefore, remained at £9 for bakers' lots delivered. Some flour of export quality, offering at the end of last week at £8/5/ f.o.b., was withdrawn. Bran and pollard had free sales at £5/5/ per ton.

RUSSIAN EXPORTS OF WHEAT.

Russia is one of the principal suppliers of wheat to importing countries. This year her exports have been heavier than ever before, so it will be perceived that if she is involved in war wheat prices in the world's markets must go upwards. A comparison of Russian shipments with the world's shipments are interesting, and may be made thus:—

August 1 to June 18.	Russia to rest of Europe and U.K. Qrs.	All countries to Europe and U.K. Qrs.
1912-13	10,890,000	64,725,000

ARRIVALS BY RAIL.

Wheat and Flour.—The receipts of wheat and flour by rail at Darling Harbour and the suburban goods yards for the week ended July 28 are as follows:—

	Wheat.	Flour.
Week ended July 28	11,554	1,258

The total arrivals to date for the statistical year, which commenced on December 1, compare with those of the corresponding period of the previous three years as follows:—

	Wheat.	Flour.
1912-13	419,456	31,673
1911-12	346,923	28,289

	Yesterday.	Last Year.	2 Years Ago.
Flour, per ton	9 0 0	8 15 0	10 0 0
Bran, per ton	5 5 0	4 5 0	5 0 0
Pollard, per ton	5 5 0	4 5 0	5 10 0

In the case of wheat, the price is the average given by shippers.

SILVER.

LONDON, July 27.

Bar silver was quoted to-day at 24 3-16d per ounce standard, a fall of ⅛d.

CONDITION OF MARKETS.

LONDON, July 28.

Most of the produce markets, except foodstuffs, were depressed on Monday, owing to war clouds.

METALS.

Closing quotations on Monday were:—

Copper, spot, £58/12/6 to £58/17/6 per ton (£1/2/6 down); at 3 months, £59/2/6 to £59/7/6 per ton (£1/2/6 down).

Steady business in tea was principally in medium Ceylons, jute quiet cornsacks spot 6/7½, branbags firm, 5/6, woolpacks 3/3. Cream of tartar was strong and scarce, with business at /11. Figs were scarce, dates were selling more freely.

LIVE STOCK MARKETS.

MELBOURNE, Tuesday.

In the live stock market to-day 24,210 fat sheep were yarded, consisting mainly of indifferent quality, comparatively few prime sheep being penned. There was a good attendance of local and outside trade, and interstate buyers were represented. Opening sales were brisk at fully late rates for all good to prime sorts, but later on competition slackened, and closing sales were very weak, with prime sheep fully 1/ below and other qualities 1/6 to 2/ below late values. Quotations:—Prime crossbred wethers, 23/6 to 28/, extra to 32/9, good 21/ to 22/6, seconds 17/6 to 19/6, inferior to 16/; prime crossbred ewes, 22/6 to 24/9, extra to 26/4; old ewes, to 28/6, good 19/ to 21/, second 15/ to 18/, inferior from 9/8; prime merino wethers, 21/6 to 24/3, a few extra to 27/, good 18/ to 20/; merino ewes, 12/ to 19/2, extra to 21/11; low-conditioned ewes from 5/.

Fat lambs.—13,650 were penned, including about 6530 of this season's drop, which consisted mainly of useful sorts, with a quantity quite unsuited to the trade. The demand at the opening was firm at late rates for prime lambs, both old and young, but later on the competition became concentrated on prime pens of young lambs, which were firm throughout. Other qualities and old lambs closed from /6 to 1/ below last week's level. Quotations: Old lambs, prime 16/ to 19/, extra 20/ to 23/, odd lambs to 26/, good 12/ to 14/, seconds 10/ to 11/6, inferior from 7/; prime young, 13/9 to 15/6, extra to 17/3, good 11/ to 12/6, seconds 9/ to 10/3, inferior from 3/.

COPPER AND TIN LOWER.

PROFIT TAKING.

Much interest attached to the cable quotations received yesterday morning, for they were expected to give a clear idea as to the tone of the London Stock Exchange on Monday, and thus reflect the views of the Continental Powers as to the possibility or otherwise of Austria and Servia coming to blows and precipitating a Continental conflagration.

The cable clearly showed that, for the greater portion of Monday, the London Stock Exchange was completely demoralised, due, largely, to the closing of the Continental Bourses, creating the impression that a crisis had been precipitated. Later on in the day, telegrams from the Continent were more reassuring, with the result that the House became less depressed, and values recovered somewhat.

As illustrating this, Broken Hill Souths (paid) at one period of the day were 16/3 down, but at the finish the price had recovered 6/3, so that they went to leeward 10/3. British Broken Hill (old) and Amalgamated Zinc also fell, but likewise recovered some of the lost ground. These incidents are mentioned to show that the trend of values was not downwards up to the closing hour. At the same time, London was undoubtedly badly shaken by the prospects of a European war, for the following declines were recorded:—Broken Hill Proprietary, British (old), and Hampdens each down 1/; Mount Morgans, Golden Horseshoes, and Zinc Corporations (pref.), /9 each; B.H. Block 10, Mount Lyell, Amalgamated Zinc, and Great Cobars /6 each; Gwalias 1/3, and B.H. Norths, Zincs (ord.), and Bullfinch Proprietary, /3 each. Curiously enough, Mount Elliotts were unchanged, at 52/6.

The above information was bad enough, but the broker's quasi-official cable announced that copper had fallen another 35/ to £58/5/, whilst a private cable stated that tin had dropped £4/7/6 per ton.

An examination of the considerable amount of business transacted locally showed that whilst the values realised indicated a slightly better feeling, such, in fact, was not the case. This apparently conflicting statement is explained by the fact that the major portion of the business was done by operators who, having bought cheaply during the previous day's slump, took advantage of the recovery in prices to sell at a profit.

The obvious deduction is that operators had no confidence in the stability of the market, with such a critical state of affairs existing on the Continent and in Ireland. Moreover, the London metal market gives operators cause for great anxiety. With the market jigging, the order of the day is small profits and quick returns. The result is that, although the sales board presented a crowded appearance, not much significance is attachable to that fact.

A casual visitor to the ante-chamber of the Stock Exchange seeing the crowded appearance of the sales board, especially towards the close of the day's proceedings, might be led into the belief that a very sound and solid market existed. It certainly was very solid as regards the volume of business transacted, but was not so sound as to the values realised. In many cases they were ragged, with here and there a tendency to recover a shade. It was certainly not as disheartening a market to scrip-holders as that experienced the previous day. Indeed, many of the scrip-holders began to take a more hopeful view of matters, and when the day closed expressed a hope that the following morning's cables would be of a more reassuring character.

Other metals were not mentioned, but a private cable stated that the price of tin had dropped £4/7/6 per ton.

MINING NOTES.

The Etheridge gold mines report for the week ended July 25:—"Queenslander, No. 3 level, east drive extended 3ft, total 528ft, reef 20 inches, one ton sample assayed 1oz gold, 3oz silver, and 5 per cent. lead; No. 4 level, east drive extended 7ft, total 238ft, reef 30 inches, one ton sample assayed 17dwt gold, 8oz silver, and 3 per cent. lead. Conducting trial runs in mill, and expect to produce concentrates on July 29."

Gold dredging yields:—Tewkesbury Amalgamated (3 dredges, fortnight), 72oz gold; and Ovens Valley, one dredge (fortnight), 40oz gold.

The manager of the Tyrconnell gold mine wires that the clean up for fortnight ended yesterday resulted in a return of 219oz of gold from 250 tons.

A dividend of 1/ per share, payable on August 17, has been declared by the Cathcart Central Company, Victoria.

BARRIER MINES.

Last week at the South Blocks the main west crosscut at No. 7 level in the zinc lode was carried 11 feet to 60 feet. Values for the last 13 feet averaged 2.7 per cent. lead, 1.1oz silver, and 6 per cent. zinc. The west crosscut in the main lode at No. 8 level was extended to 47 feet, the ore from 39 feet to 44 feet averaging 16.7 per cent. lead, 2.8oz silver, and 9 per cent. zinc. Developmental work was also accomplished in the upper levels.

MINING IN THE STATE.

LITHGOW, Tuesday.

A mining report from Trunkey states that Barmer and Gess have just put through a crushing of 38 tons of ore for 32oz 12dwt of gold. Their mine is about half a mile west of M'Kellar's, and is down 60ft. The reef is 3ft wide. They are now driving south, and stone there is much richer than that already raised. If the proprietors of this and M'Kellar's mine were to erect a battery on the ground it would be a good thing for both, as the two mines would be able to raise sufficient stone to keep a 10-head battery constantly at work for 12 or 18 months, or perhaps longer.

MOLYBDENITE MINING.

BATHURST, Tuesday.

Following the receipt of a number of complaints alleging the non-working of the areas recently entered upon near Yetholme for molybdenite, the mining warden, Mr. Burke, to-day held an inquiry, at which various claim-holders were called upon to show cause why their authorities to enter and search for molybdenite should not be cancelled. The respondents were W. H. Forrest and A. A. Holland, of Sydney, and H. C. Slade and F. Jennings, of Bathurst. The plea of Holland, Forrest, and Jennings was that bad weather had interfered with prospecting, and prevented the fulfilment of labour conditions. Jennings's authority was cancelled at his own request, while the others were allowed to continue. Slade was able to show that he had effected certain work. Jennings at one stage alleged that there was a conspiracy to defeat the present holders.

In giving his decisions, the warden remarked that the complainants had done quite right in informing him. He wished there were more such persons, as they would assist him in putting down the pernicious practice of grabbing every acre of land as soon as there was a find, and then sitting tightly upon it. Why, he asked, should a man be allowed to shepherd blocks which other people were willing to work? In the present case, he could not understand why such a hysterical rush for molybdenite areas was followed by restraint from work.

CARPATHIA TIN MINE.

GOOD ORE BODIES BEING STOPED.

The mine manager reports for last week as follows:—"No. 1 Shaft: Sinking 6ft, making 41ft, as conditions similar to last report, with the wall (previously reported) on the western side underlying at about the same angle as the shaft. Northern end: Stopes have been producing the usual values, from a width now measuring 29ft, showing no waste. Southern end: Still stripping eastern side of south drive, preparatory to placing the necessary timber.

"No. 2 shaft: Still winning milling values from this shaft, 4½ft wide.

"No. 3 shaft: Stoping off this shaft is producing the usual high-grade ore from a width of 19ft. Have advanced the level timber here, thus making the stope longer to the north.

"No. 4 shaft: South drive driven 12ft, making 59ft, and ore exposed for 61ft, at which point will temporarily cease operations pending the required level sets for stoping purposes.

BROKEN HILL MILL RETURNS.

Sulphide Corporation, Ltd. (Central Mine), weekly report:—Ore milled, 4132 tons; concentrates produced, 683 tons. Assay of concentrates: Silver, 33.1oz; lead, 60.4 per cent.; and zinc, 7.4 per cent.

Cockle Creek Works:—Bullion produced, 623 tons, containing 884oz gold and 44,996oz silver.

Junction North Broken Hill mine weekly report:—Treated crude ore 191 tons, purchased ore 881 tons, slimes 934 tons, and sandy tailings 302 tons. Produced lead concentrates 326 tons, assaying 59.8 per cent. lead, 31.2oz silver, and 10.1 per cent. zinc.; also 190 tons of zinc concentrates, assaying 7.2 per cent. lead, 12.8oz silver, 48 per cent. zinc. Also produced 394 tons of middlings. The mill run 144 hours.

North Broken Hill weekly return:—Treated 5400 tons crude ore, assaying 16.5 per cent. lead, 7.6 oz silver, and 13.1 per cent. zinc, producing 970 tons concentrates, assaying 69.5 per cent. lead, 22.6oz silver, and 5.4 per cent. zinc. The mill ran 120 hours. The stoppage was due to the miners and mill hands refusing to resume work for 24 hours last Monday, because of an accident to a surface labourer on the previous Friday, and which terminated fatally in the hospital on the following Sunday.

B.H. Block 10 Co.—Four weeks, ended July 22: Crude ore treated, 7983 tons; assaying 8oz silver, 11.1 per cent. lead, and 12.3 per cent. zinc. Concentrates produced, 1024 tons, assaying 20.3oz silver, 64 per cent. lead, and 6 per cent. zinc.

MANAGERS' REPORTS.

Great Southern Consols (Rutherglen): Lower level advanced to 255ft, rock very hard. No. 1 shoot: Three parties panelling and driving in about same value ground. Cock loft north off west drive extended to 64ft, payable and stopped; will hole through form No. 2 shoot. East drive off cock loft re-started and extended to 36ft, payable. No. 2 shoot: West drive extended to 27ft, stopped for a time, poor value. Opened south to 12ft, not payable as yet. Bottom workings in place for pumps.

The Mount David Company (week ended July 25).—South-east drive extended 6ft; total from crosscut, 174ft. Passed through a small lens of good-quality quartz, and in the present face there is a little lode material, and water between black slate walls. North-west drive extended 8ft; total from crosscut, 76ft. About 2ft of quartz in the face, carrying a little gold; black slate walls. No. 1 rise carried up 14ft; total, 45ft. Rising for the week through black slate, with a few small makes of quartz. No. 2 rise carried up 7ft; total, 19ft. Rising has been through solid quartz.

Duncan Options (fortnight ended July 25).—Eastern reef: The 750ft level south extended 27ft; total from starting point, 144ft. Reef, 6in wide, with values improving. Rise 186ft above level, and I am stoping from same. Reef from 8in to 8in wide, carrying good gold values. Western reef: At 62ft down winze a stage has been put in, and 6ft driven during past week. The reef 6in wide, and averages 3oz to the ton. Ore despatched to the smelters 10 tons, and have about 12 tons at grass.

LATE SPORTING.

THE TURF.

Pony and galloway racing will be the attraction at Rosebery this afternoon, and an interesting programme should provide good sport. The track is reported to be sound going, large fields are assured, and several races will have to be run in divisions. The traffic arrangements include special trams which land visitors at the racecourse gates, while the ordinary service to Botany will also be available. The sport commences at 1 p.m., and the results may be anticipated as under:—Fourteen Hands Handicap, Green and White, Queenie Soult, My Dove. Flying Handicap: First division, Stormcock or Miocene; second division, Blair or Yandon. Fourteen-two Handicap: Lady Sydney, Silver Havoc, Almafield. Maiden Handicap: First division, Midnight or Irish Minnie; second division, Gunlock or Metford Belle. Fourteen-one Handicap: Thelma C., Miss Persian, Native Rose. Rosebery Handicap: First division, Pomeroo or Postelite; second division, Dinard or Ayr Blend.

Mr. Francis Foy, who is now on his way to Europe, has given three prizes of £10 10s each to the "Sydney Mail" to handle a mating competition in connection with his stallion Something Irish. These three prizes are for the three best mares in the world to mate with Something Irish. The conditions governing this innovation in Australia appear in the current number of the "Sydney Mail."

The declaration of final forfeit for the Australian Hurdle Race, to be decided at Caulfield next Saturday, leaves 11 acceptances, and, should all see the post, the field will be equal to that of the corresponding contest last year, when Ballista was escorted home by Clontaft and Wimmera. Only two, Arquebuse and Wingarara, who took part in last year's race, figure on the list for next Saturday's contest. The malcontents include Clontaft, Wimmera, Widden, Hall Mark, Dust Cloud, Wisconsin, and Beccasine.

Kennymore's brother, Holsworthy, who was purchased in England recently for the Pinsett stud, arrived in Sydney by the steamship Runic on Monday last, and is now undergoing the usual term of quarantine. He is a handsome bay horse, and much of a Martagon in general appearance. He is by John o' Gaunt from Croceum, by Martagon from Flag, by Hagioscope.

What promises to be a valuable addition to the blood stock of Australia is Land of Song, who was purchased by cable last week at a high figure by Mr. Norman Falkiner, of Widgiewa, who has bought the horse to race in Australia. Land of Song was an excellent two-year-old. His first start was in the Windsor Castle Stakes, which he won in smashing style. About a fortnight ago he won the Wiltshire Handicap of £1000 from a good field, a performance that induced Mr. Falkiner to close for him. Land of Song, who is by Llangibby from Alicna, by Mackintosh, will probably be trained by James Scobie.

Mr. A. J. Morton reports the sale of Malt Flag, by Maltster from Red Flag, by Lochiel, to Mr. R. W. White, of Harbin Vale.

The thoroughbred stallion, Koonowla, recently imported to this State, has been selected by the Waverley trainer, E. Keys, for Messrs. Douglas Bros., of Maxwelton station, Queensland. The purchase of the horse has been effected through the agency of Messrs. H. Chisholm and Co., and he will be forwarded to his new destination on the 4th prox. Koonowla was foaled in 1907, and is by Cyllene from Handmaid, by Hampton from Barmaid, by Galliard from Loch Garry, by Blair Athol. Koonowla was placed in two-year-old company in England, after which he was purchased for India, where he won several good races during a season.

The following race meetings have been granted registration by the A.J.C.:—Eugowra Jockey Club (October 1), Finley Turf Club (September 2), and Peak Hill Jockey Club (July 31 and August 1).

The Menangle Park Racing Club has decided upon the following dates for meetings for the remainder of the current year:—Thursday, August 6; Tuesday, August 25; Tuesday, September 15; Thursday, October 1; Thursday, October 22; Thursday, November 12; Thursday, December 3; and Thursday, December 17.

None of the grass tracks was available to trainers at Randwick yesterday morning, and all the regulars did serviceable tasks on the cinder and tan tracks. On the former rink Miss Mooltan negotiated six furlongs in 1m 22s. Tatterley spurted half a mile in 55s. Simon Frisco covered a mile in 1m 53⅓s, while useful work was done by Ocean Blue, Floating, Idyla, Torone, Multifoil, Hartfell, Lochano, Moving Picture, Greyspear, Danaum, Azoic, Barnstormer, Master Penury, Psyttyx, Bimeter, Gigandra, Rovigno, Malthusian, Challenge Crosse, Endear, Imsht, and Indiscretion. North Woodleigh and N.G.E. cast six furlongs behind in 1m 24s, and Hobble Skirt ran a furlong further in 1m 37s, a journey over which Sir Vive took similar time. Embracer and Graftoline ran six furlongs in 1m 23s on the tan, and Limelight did serviceable work. Those that shaped well on the inside sand track were Feramorz, Balranald, St. Spasa, Secret Service, Mountain Blue, New Orleans, Hopoast, Nombi, Allingamite, Chid, Goldenia, Moonbria, Beragoon, Matouree, Golden Hop, Aurifer, First Toy, Aurofodina, Antho, Ravello, Silver Steel, Alured, Coradil, Valhalla, Royal Laddie, Nenna, Taunter, Woorak, and several others.

Major Claude Smith, who has for years been president of the Molong Jockey Club, writes our local correspondent, resigned office at the meeting of that body on Saturday. It was decided to make the major a life member, and present him with a life member's gold medal, in recognition of the generous support he has extended to the club over so long a period. Mr. L. N. Smith, of Boree station, was elected as the new president.

For some weeks past there has been some friction in trotting circles with regard to the measurement of hopples, and recently, after due deliberation, the New South Wales Trotting Club passed a resolution that "on and after August 1, 1914, all hoppled horses competing at meetings of the New South Wales Trotting Club and the Australian Trotting Club that have a winning record of 2.30 or better to the mile must register with the New South Wales Trotting Club, the exact measurement inside, the length of the hopples to be stated in the entry. After the length of the hopples has been registered no alteration will be allowed unless with the sanction of the stewards. The latter measurement will then stand as the registered measurement. Failing compliance with this rule, the stewards shall have power to disqualify, suspend, or fine the person or persons connected therewith, and may disqualify the horse concerned." This rule was framed with the view of protecting the public, bookmakers, and horse owners, and not in any way to harass horseowners. It only applies to seasoned horses that have records of 2.30 or better to the mile. Its object is to prevent a horseowner from manipulating the hopples so that a horse cannot do his best in a race; and it is well-known that hopples have been manipulated to such an extent that no amount of application of whip or spur could make the horse go faster than a certain rate of speed, the hopples practically anchoring him. A section of the owners entered a protest against the rule, and demanded its rescission, but the committee of the club refused to comply with the request. A deputation of three trainers waited upon the committee last evening, when certain suggestions were made, and which the committee was prepared to adopt. Subsequently an intimation was received by the secretary of the New South Wales Trotting Club from a representative of the Horse Owners and Trainers' Association that the suggestions met with approval, and the dispute has been amicably settled.

Since 1875, when "J. J. Miller's Sporting Pamphlet" was first published, its annual appearance has been a harbinger of spring, inasmuch as those interested in turf pursuits have been furnished through its pages with information bearing directly on the big handicaps of the spring at Randwick, Caulfield, and Flemington. The 39th edition, just to hand from the publisher, is fully up to the standard of its predecessors, and contains the fullest and most up-to-date information regarding the public form of the horses engaged in the A.J.C. Metropolitan, the Caulfield Cup, and the Melbourne Cup, together with their pedigrees, age, sex, and colour, the weights allotted to each, and their owners and trainers' names, and the riders' colours. The full pedigrees of all the youngsters engaged in the A.J.C., V.R.C., and W.A. classic events of the spring are also given, as well as particulars of the blood stock sales of the autumn at Randwick and Flemington, and a variety of other information that is essentially useful to all turf students. Another feature of the publication is the review of records in every branch of sport from horse-racing to aeroplaning. The work bears evidence of careful and accurate compilation, and no sportsman's library is complete without the "Pamphlet", which is published by the J. J. Miller Printing Company, Post Office-place, Melbourne.

The management of the Victoria Park Racing Club has provided 1200 sovs prize money for its spring meeting on September 30, distributed over seven events, the principal of which are the Commonwealth Cup of 500 sovs, 1m 3f; and the Spring Stakes of 200 sovs, 6f; while each of the other five races is endowed with 100 sovs. Entries for the Spring Stakes and Commonwealth Cup will be received by the secretary, Mr. H. Coberoft, up to 5 p.m. on Thursday, the 20th prox.

Our Mudgee correspondent telegraphs that the Spring Flat Race Club has appointed Mr. J. R. Atkinson, of Galambine, as delegate to the Western District Racing Association, and it was decided to apply for January 1 and April 21, 1915, as the dates for its race meetings.

FOOTBALL.

RUGBY UNION.

THE SEVEN A SIDE FRACAS.

SEVERE PENALTIES.

At the last meeting of the New South Wales Rugby Union, a report was received from the Metropolitan Union stating that an inquiry had been held into the incidents that led to certain players being ordered off the field in the seven a side competition final, and that one player had been suspended for life, a second for three years, and a third until the end of next season. The report will lie on the table for 14 days, pending an appeal, and unless such is received the suspensions will be made absolute throughout the jurisdiction of the union.

ROWING.

N.S.W. [illegible] ANNUAL REPORT.

[illegible] EXTRACTS.

The annual meeting of the New South Wales Rowing Association will take place this evening at the Sports Club, Hunter-street, at 8 o'clock, when the thirty-sixth annual report and balance-sheet will be presented to members for acceptance.

The report congratulates members on the keenness of the racing and the interest taken in the sport generally during the year. However, it further states that "it is to be regretted that the standard of oarsmanship of immediately preceding years has not been maintained, and in this connection it is intended to convene at an early date a meeting of the various club coaches, to see what steps can be devised with the object of raising the standard to its former efficiency."

Reference is made to the success attained by the associated clubs, which show a marked advance, both in racing and finance, and particularly refers to the regatta arranged by the associated clubs to assist in financing the interstate representation.

The Enterprise Club is congratulated on its victory in the championship races. By this success the Enterprise Club became the holders of the Q.-L. De Little Jubilee Cup.

In the Champion Fours five crews competed, Leichhardt No. 1 and No. 2, Balmain, Enterprise, and Sydney, Leichhardt No. 1 crew securing the victory.

The Amateur Championship Sculls was won by Alma Cox, Balmain Club.

The Tasmanian Rowing Association is congratulated on winning both the Eight-oar and Single-sculling Championship of Australia.

The association boathouse at Gladesville has been re-leased for another five years, and the report says that a new rule has been added to make the associated clubs proportionately responsible for the rent.

Leichhardt Rowing Club is congratulated on its success in the senior and junior premiership. Points scored by the various clubs were as follow:—Senior: Leichhardt 126, Enterprise 108, Balmain 96, Sydney 32, Mosman 28, University 8, Glebe 8, North Shore 0, St. Ignatius 0.

Junior.—Leichhardt 62, Sydney 16, Mosman 12, University 8, Glebe 8, Enterprise 4, Balmain 0, North Shore 0, St. Ignatius 0.

The report says that the balance-sheet and revenue accounts cannot be considered to be in a satisfactory condition. In a general way the system of obtaining the association's revenue has been unsatisfactory, and regattas have little more than recouped the expenditure. The method of obtaining the moneys necessary to finance interstate representatives is also unsatisfactory, and urgent steps should be taken to devise means of providing revenue of a more permanent and reliable nature.

LEICHHARDT CLUB'S ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual meeting of the Leichhardt Rowing Club was held in the local Town Hall last evening, the president (Mr. G. Nixon) occupying the chair. There was a large attendance of members.

The report, which revealed a very satisfactory state of affairs, stated that at the beginning of last year the membership was 89, from which number sufficient able crews were selected to place the club in the proud position of carrying off both senior and junior pennants. The keen interest displayed at the outset of the season was maintained throughout. Consideration had been given to proposals to add to the present club premises, but it was decided that a postponement of operations was advisable till enough capital was in hand to provide up-to-date buildings. The fleet of boats provided accommodation for no fewer than 80 members. Referring to the club's success achieved in the open races, the report stated that it was a unique performance for a club to be represented in every open race during the year, and the fact that two crews had entered for a great number of those events spoke volumes for the enthusiasm displayed. Twenty-five open races constituted the programme, the club securing 11 firsts, 10 seconds, and 7 thirds, among which was the champion fours.

Two regattas had been conducted on the canal during the year by associated clubs, and as the suitability of that stretch of water for the purpose had been demonstrated, it was not at all unlikely that, with suitable tides, operations might be enlarged during the coming year. The present membership of the club was 77. Through the generosity of the president, the club had been able to keep the members together during the winter months by a series of races for the president's trophy, which was won by Mr. Ken Burgess. The total receipts were £280, and the expenditure £239, leaving a balance in hand of £36. The balance-sheet showed an excess of assets over liabilities of £839, an increase of £50 over the previous year, after allowing for the depreciation of boats, oars, etc.

In moving the adoption of the report and balance-sheet, the chairman congratulated the club on its having secured the senior and junior pennants.

The motion was seconded by Mr. D. G. Bathgate, Mr. F. G. Baker, Mr. T. J. Hoskins, and others.

During the evening the retiring secretary (Mr. F. Bullen) was presented with a gold albert in recognition of his services to the club during the past six years as secretary, treasurer, and committeeman; Mr. Allen Ramsay, honorary coach of the club, with an enlarged photograph of the winning crews during the season, in recognition of his services; G. Parker and W. Hibble with gold medals, for their services as coxswains; and Mr. Ken Burgess with the president's gold medal for winning the winter competition.

The election of officers resulted as follows:—Patron, H. S. Brothwood; president, G. Nixon; vice-presidents, Hon. A. C. Carmichael, M.L.A., R. Stanton, C. G. Johnson, J. Skinner, H. Kerr, T. J. Hoskins, M.L.A., A. A. Lawson, A. A. Lawson (jun.), F. G. Baker, G. Barton, E. Kenny, W. E. Johnson, M.H.R., W. Hepburn, J. Wiseman, G. Henderson, A. Harris, J. Bernasconi, W. G. Bragge, and the aldermen of the Leichhardt Council; captain, W. F. Wheeler; vice-captain, J. M'Cabe; hon. treasurer, H. Kenny; committee, Allan Ramsay, A. V. Kenny, T. B. King, J. Cogle, J. W. Henre, F. G. Mison, L. Davies, F. Bullen; hon. auditors, F. V. Bullen and F. Davies; delegates to N.S.W. Rowing Association, W. F. Wheeler and W. Thompson; selection committee, W. F. Wheeler, Allan Ramsay, and A. Kenny; hon. coach, Allan Ramsay; hon. reporter and secretary, W. Thomson; assistant hon. secretary, R. Eve.

NORTH SHORE CLUB.

ANNUAL MEETING.

The thirty-fifth annual meeting of the North Shore Rowing Club was held at the clubhouse on Monday night, when the report and balance-sheet was presented. Mr. V. Horniman presided, and there was a fair attendance.

The report shows that the club experienced a very satisfactory year, although it failed to gain prominence in racing. The clubhouse is in a first-class state of repair; and the club's fleet comprises the racing and one practice eight, one best and best four, three regulation fours, two-pair oar, one convertible pair oar and double sculler, and four Gladstone skiffs. Two new pair oar boats, built by Edwards and Sons, Melbourne, also a fine pleasure skiff, presented by Mr. J. B. Craig, were added to the fleet during the season. The club is in a good financial position.

The following motion was unanimously agreed to, and will be dealt with by the incoming committee,—"That it would be in the best interests of the sport, and this club in particular, to establish a branch on Lane Cover River."

The election of office-bearers resulted:—

Patron, Mr. Donald Thomson; president, Mr. J. B. Craig; captain, Mr. V. Horniman; vice-captain, Mr. George Gunning; committee, Messrs. Alex. Thomson, N. Lethbridge, E. O. Moore, O. Hodgson, A. Turner, L. A. Hanlon, L. Davies; delegates to the New South Wales Rowing Association, Messrs. V. Horniman and Alex. Thomson.

SCULLING.

HANNAN'S CHALLENGE TO WEBB.

WELLINGTON (N.Z.), Tuesday.

With reference to the challenge issued to Webb by Hannan to row Webb for the championship of New Zealand and £100 a side, Webb announced that he is too busy to make a match for less than £200 a side. A smaller stake would mean a loss to him financially, even if he were victorious.

BILLIARDS.

LINDRUM v REECE.

AUSTRALIAN IN FINE FORM.

Yesterday afternoon's play in the "rubber game" between Lindrum and Reece at Heiron and Smith's tournament Hall, Billiards, Limited, presented varying features. When play was resumed Lindrum had a lead of 447, but for many innings he could do no good, and Reece, with a splendid run of 224 in his seventh visit, followed by 110 on three visits later, had wiped out most of his deficit. Reece was striking in his very best style, and grouping the balls in such easy position after each shot that he appeared to have Lindrum cornered. The 224 was a masterly performance, the majority of the strokes for which he is famed being brought into requisition, especially the pet runs along the top rail for the gentle nurse cannon. Then came a bout of safety play, which caused Reece to freeze and Lindrum to thaw, for in the fifteenth visit to the table the latter got into his best touch. All strokes came alike to him—whether slow screws, forcing hazards, gentle thin losers, in which the object ball was just flicked, being played with easy confidence.

This start put the Australian in great heart, and the very next visit, after Reece had failed on a difficult cross cannon, brought 181 to Lindrum, in less than nine minutes. Like Reece, he failed on his next trip, but the following one brought 115, and after leaving Reece a double baulk, he again got going. After running up 35, he had to pot Reece in the centre pocket, with a cross loser left on, from which he ran twenty-four red losers, mostly into the right top pocket, the centre pocket openings being only availed of in five shots. The end came in the usual way—miscalculation of contact by a hair's breadth. After Reece had made a dozen, Lindrum reached his points, after giving his best showing of the series. He made 857 inside two hours, with one break over 200, and three over the century, the scores being:—

Reece 2981

Play opened quietly at night, and for the first hour little of importance took place, except a well-played break of 132 by Reece. Lindrum ran his unfinished break into 56, followed by 67, before Reece got going on the break mentioned in his tenth stick. Lindrum then sandwiched in 71, and let Reece to the table to run up 54 by extra careful play, ending the run by holing the white and leaving his opponent a double baulk. A fine attempt to score was made by Lindrum, who just skinned the white, leaving nice position for his opponent, who took advantage of it by making a really fine run of 91, in which was a mixture of varied strokes. After a failure by Lindrum, Reece was in again with the luck of the evening. Playing with great care, Reece piled up the points by clever play, during which he brought off a skilful jump-over stroke. The three balls were in line close together against the top cushion. Reece lifted his ball to the top of the red; it then went on top of the cushion rail, and rolled to the top of the white, then to the cushion face again, and on to the table. After making 218 he mis-cued, so ending a meritorious piece of play, which created much applause from a good house. Lindrum tried for a run of red losers, but after half-a-dozen sticks jawed, Fifty-seven came from Reece, and Lindrum had bad luck in losing the white with the red on the spot when going nicely in an 81 break. An even hundred came from Reece, who had pulled up considerably on his afternoon deficit, having scored 760 during the session. When play ceased, Lindrum was in play with 87 unfinished, the scores being:—

Lindrum 4253
Reece 3741

Play will be continued this afternoon and evening at 3 and 8 o'clock.

N.S.W. AMATEUR CHAMPIONSHIP.

RUMBALL v BELL.

As neither player in last night's amateur championship would be classed as of the attractive order of billiardists, there was a distinct falling away in the attendance of the previous evening, when the bouts between Hooper and Fay commanded so much attention. The match was an unequal one, Rumball being much the better player, scoring 502 to Bell's 237. The ex-champion was in fine touch, and opened up with 84, followed by 35, 55, 27, and the highest break of the games so far, an exceptionally well-played 118. Bell's best run was 35, the closing scores being:—

H. A. Rumball 502
G. Bell 237

The best will be continued this evening at 8 o'clock.

BOXING.

AMATEUR TOURNAMENT.

The amateur tournament promoted by the Railway and Tramway Recreation Club was continued at the Olympic Stadium, Newtown, on Monday evening, before a small house. Mr. Les. Corbett was the referee. Details:—

Bantam-weight Division.—E. Dumphy (Erskineville) outpointed Dave Lee (Camperdown), after four hotly-contested rounds, and J. Fletcher (Marrickville) similarly defeated H. W. Barker (Newtown). Young Davis (Redfern) and W. J. Overton (Riverstone) showed up well for three rounds, when Overton was floored, and the referee stopped the bout in favour of Davis.

Featherweight Division.—H. Hamilton (Crow's Nest) very early showed his superiority over R. Hampton (St. Peters), whose towel was thrown in towards the end of the first round. Jimmy Clabby (Rozelle) and Billy Edwards (Dulwich Hill) put up a good full-term bout without a decision. Another round was ordered, and Edwards gained the verdict. Pat Conley (Mosman) beat S. Goodwin (Newtown) on points, after an uninteresting contest. A. Corkling (Marrickville) received a forfeit from G. Miller (Dundas).

Lightweight Division.—J. Martin (Surry Hills) was too good for Jack Belfield (Ashfield), whose towel was thrown in at the end of the first round. J. H. Kirkpatrick (Petersham) beat E. McArthur (St. Peters) on points. Snowy Frost (North Sydney) had so great an advantage in the first round of his bout with Hugh McKay (Enmore) that the latter's second threw in his towel. Billy Edwards (Dulwich Hill) forfeited to Sid. Goodwin (Newtown).

Welterweight Division.—Tommy Hassett (Redfern) was knocked out by F. W. Chalker (Roselle) in the third round.

Middle-weight Division.—J. A. Cune (Hunter's Hill) outpointed Dave Knott (Paddington). W. Hill (Botany) forfeited to Alick Evans (Leichhardt).

Heavyweight Division.—F. McCarthy (Newtown) saw B. Fitzsimmons (Meadowbank) counted out in the second round.

AMATEUR BOXING AND WRESTLING.

The semi-finals and finals of the tournament in aid of the Olympic fund will take place at the Stadium to-night, when some very interesting contests should be witnessed. The wrestling should also be interesting. Following is the draw:—

Boxing: 8st 6lb, A. Davis v C. Fitzjohn, F. J. Smith v C. Smith; 9st 6lb, S. Leaver v F. Brownlee, B. Bush v F. Conley; 10st 6lb, F. Summers, a bye; W. Rowles v F. Collo; 11st 6lb, L. Francis v W. Ross, R. L. Finley v J. James.

Wrestling: Heavy, L. J. Scott v F. Naylor, A. J. Pitt v H. Titchen.

EVERNDEN DEFEATS NAT. WILLIAMS.

At the Olympia Stadium, Newtown, last evening Arthur Evernden and Nat. Williams, both well-known English boxers, met in a contest billed for 20 rounds, but which lasted less than three.

There was an attendance of about 2000. Mr. Wally Weekes was the referee. The weights were announced Evernden 11st 5lb and Williams 11st.

In the first round both men showed an inclination to hit hard, but in the second Evernden did most of the striking, and had the better of matters, knocking his opponent down. In the third round Williams was floored no fewer than six times, and the referee stopped the contest, and awarded it to Evernden.

In the preliminaries Eddie Corrigan outpointed Reg. M'Grill after six uninteresting rounds, and Reg. M'Kay cried enough after four rounds with Boyo Reynolds, who was given the verdict.

RIFLE SHOOTING.

BERRY, Tuesday.

At the annual meeting of the Berry Rifle Club, the secretary's report showed that the club was in a flourishing condition. The annual gold medal, for the best aggregate of eight shoots out of 12, was won by Captain Jamieson.

ELLEN TERRY.

THE ACTORS' MATINEE.

SPEECH BY THE STAR.

The Actors' Association of Australasia contrived to contribute, by the enthusiasm of their united effort in honour of Ellen Terry, an historic occasion to the record of our stage. Everyone would have regretted the departure of that great actress without some active connection with the theatre of the Commonwealth. Yesterday afternoon, however, the body of artists in question tendered their august visitor a dramatic performance "as an appreciation of her genius, and their respect and love." Miss Terry depicted the crowning moment of Portia's life, in her hour of triumph in the Trial Scene, and in this way the famous English artist linked her name with Her Majesty's Theatre, on whose boards in 1891 Sarah Bernhard, her sister-queen of the French stage, presented many great impersonations with a wonderful French company. Other events enhanced the interest of the Shakespearian interpretation. Essie Jenyns (Mrs. J. R. Wood), whose farewell in the heyday of her youthful charm was as Portia at the Criterion Theatre on June 28, 1888, re-appeared in honour of Miss Terry as Nerissa; and G. S. Titheradge, so much of whose long career has been passed in this country, tried his mettle for the first time here as Shylock. The entire stage was crowded with well-known actors and actresses under the experienced stage-direction of Walter Bentley. A third veteran of credit and renown, Mr. William Holman, figured silently as Tubal, whilst the Duke was Robert Inman, the 'Romeo' of Essie Jenyn's final season before her early retirement.

No wonder the theatre was crowded. An unusually long matinee-programme preceded the great event of the entertainment, but at last the curtain rose upon "Venice, A Court of Justice," and as the action developed, Portia entered in her scarlet robes, and a whirlwind of applause formed her welcome upon the Australian stage. The beautiful Mercy Speech was most touchingly rendered as a solemn personal appeal to the flinty heart of the Jew. The actress was great in the significance of her gesture, where, after the proud allusion to "the dread and fear of kings," the hands were outstretched at the change of key, beginning "But mercy;" and another simple gesture thrillingly enforced was where the hands were piously clasped with upturned gaze at "we do pray for mercy." Mr. Titheradge, whose polished diction showed Shylock as a man of station and learning in his confident "stand for law," also moved the audience at the thrilling climax, "Come, prepare," and at the moment of his final exit. Mr. Walter Bentley, a dignified Antonio, the merchant of Venice, recited his lines with a pathos that was eloquent; Mr. Hugh Buckler indicated the generous warmth of Bassanio at the impetuous "tender of twice the sum." Mr. H. R. Roberts showed the explosive exuberance of the hot-headed Gratiano; with Mr. Roland Conway as Salerio, Mr. Harry Halley as Clerk of the Court, Mr. Arthur Cornell as Usher of the Court. A great reception was accorded Essie Jenyns, stately and sweet and clear of voice, as Nerissa.

When the Duke adjourned the Court, Portia endeavoured to leave the stage with the press of magnificoes and attendants, but Antonio and Bassanio pursued her to good purpose, and to the great delight of the audience at this "play within a play," brought the heroine back to brightly join in the comedy close of the scene with the episode of the ring. At the words, "Well, peace be with you!" the Portia made the swaggering exit of a jaunty young gallant; and the curtain fell to a burst of applause, which was renewed as flowers were profusely bestowed both upon her and upon Miss Jenyns. The cheering continued until, in response,

Miss Ellen Terry pronounced the words, "Thank you!" There was an almost breathless silence as she continued: "I am the Epilogue! And the epilogue is all 'Thank you,' thank you one and all. It seems to me I have been saying 'Thank you' all my life. I was never a speech-maker. I began to act when I was very young, but I did not begin to make speeches until I was very old, too old to learn, I am afraid. Although I am well-accustomed to public speaking, and cannot make the time-honoured apology for my deficiencies, I am none the less diffident about this task, the task of speaking to you in words of my own instead of in the words of William Shakespeare. No; I must give up trying. By this gathering, by this magnificent expression of their goodwill and friending, my dear comrades here around me have made me very happy, and 'I were but little happy if I could say how much.'" (Loud cheers.)

There was another round of applause when the great actress kissed Miss Jenyns' hand, who responded in like fashion. There was a similar exchange a little later between the star and Miss Grace Palotta.

Mr. Titheradge (president, Actors' Association) thanked the audience for their presence in honour of the chief ornament of the English stage. Some local writer had said that the matinee would be given by a party of "has-beens." (Loud laughter.) Whilst cordially agreeing with the remark, he was impelled at the same time to quote Miss Terry's dictum on a similar occasion that "At any rate, a has-been was better than a never-was." (Laughter.) There might be in that audience several who had had the good fortune to see Miss Terry in her flowery prime. He had been so privileged, having appeared on the stage as her lover 37 years ago, which was the only time he had been associated with her professionally until the present time. Miss Jenyns could hardly be honoured as a has-been, because she retired whilst still young, beautiful, and famous. (Cheers.) He once saw her for 15 minutes as Juliet in the Balcony Scene, and he saw quite enough to recognise what a great artist she was. (Cheers.) They did not claim to have put up an ideal Trial Scene that afternoon, but it should have afforded pleasure under the circumstances—(cheers)—and in conclusion he would present Miss Terry with a special souvenir programme as a memento of the occasion." (Cheers.)

The artists on the crowded stage then joined in "For She's a Jolly Good Fellow," and were so warmly supported by the orchestra, under Mr. Lewis De Groen's baton, that the trombone accompanied the melody with a running bass which suddenly flourished like a green bay-tree, whilst all the world wondered!

The matinee included three "first performances." "Little Sloe Eyes," by Frederick Ward, a young actor in the "Madame X" Company, presented a realistic scene from criminal life, and on that account depressing. Miss Katie Towers appeared as Mother Gurney, and the author as Joe Saunders. Liz, the sentimental, had fallen in love with the writer of a letter, who called her "little sloe eyes," and adored him as a hero and deliverer until he materialised as Flash Billy, a low-down burglar. The curtain accordingly falls upon her tears. All the hopeless misery of the character was vividly shown by Miss Mary Worth, and Mr. Eric Maxon, as Bill, and Miss Marjorie Soper as Em'ly, a slatternly waitress, joined in a strong ensemble.

"The Wedding Morning" was a paraphrase by Granville Barker for the English stage of one of a sequence of dialogues, by Arthur Schnitzler. The latter is a present-day Viennese dramatist, whose works are much esteemed on the Continent. Miss Muriel Starr here carried off the dubious honours of the scene as a "fille de joie," who wrecked the furniture in great style on learning that Anatol (Mr. Eric Maxon) was to be married in an hour! Mr. Reginald Wykeham, as a tactful "bon viveur," and Mr. Harry Sweeney, as a perfectly-mannered valet, formed a cast which kept the audience in fits of laughter.

Graham Moffat's Scottish comedy in one act brought on the author as John Snodgrass, the pawky, middle-aged admirer of the canny, elderly spinster, Janet (Mrs. Graham Moffat). There were also Miss Ella Young, the little Scotch actress, with music in her voice, as the ingenue in love with Erchie Dowie (Mr. John Campbell), and Mr. David Urquhart as the fifth wheel to the dramatic coach.

The third act of "His House in Order" was finely played by Violet Paget, Hugh Buckler, and the artists of their company, amongst whom Master Jack Buckler made his first appearance on the stage as Derek Jesson, and was heartily applauded. Mr. Joseph Blascheck, Mrs. Shaw-Meyer, Miss Grace Palotta, Mr. Jack Cannot (with the charming little Highland lassie, Janet Keith), Mr. Lawrence Campbell, Miss May Congdon, and Mr. W. F. Grant, all assisted with success. Mr. L. De Groen conducted, and Mr. M. J. Bloomfield was hon. general manager.

The Shakespeare Society was officially represented by the president, Mr. W. E. Hawkins, and members of the council, and among the floral tributes handed up to Miss Ellen Terry was a beautiful basket of violets, her favourite flower, with black and gold streamers (the Shakespeare colours), and bearing the inscription "What is best, that I wish thee." To Miss Essie Jenyns the society presented a mammoth shower bouquet of wattle and boronia, the ribbon inscribed "Our Shining Star."

At the conclusion of the performance the Governor-General went round to the back of the stage and chatted for a time with Miss Ellen Terry. A flashlight photograph of the full company on the stage was then taken.

Mr. Joseph Blascheck, who is directing the Ellen Terry tour, announces the farewell appearance of that artist for Saturday night at Concordia Hall.

NEWCASTLE.

ALLEGED SHOOTING WITH INTENT.

NEWCASTLE, Tuesday.

Andrew Douglas, 44, a plumber, appeared at the police court yesterday charged with shooting at Edward Sweeney, with intend to murder him, on July 20 last.

After evidence, the magistrate, Mr. M'Kell, committed accused for trial at the Quarter Sessions. The accused reserved his defence.

BERTHING FACILITIES.

A deputation from the coal and shipping committee of the Chamber of Commerce waited on Captain Cumming, deputy superintendent of navigation, yesterday, in regard to the necessity for additional mooring accommodation in the harbour for deep-draught vessels. Captain Cumming, in reply, said that he realised the necessity for the additional berthing accommodation for deep-draught vessels, and he would place the matter before the superintendent.

REPATRIATED.

AGED CHINESE AT DARWIN.

MELBOURNE, Tuesday.

A number of dilapidated houses in the Chinese quarter at Darwin were, with the approval of the Minister for External Affairs (Mr. Glynn) condemned some time ago. The question then arose as to what was best to be done with the homeless Chinese, some of whom were very old, and Mr. Glynn decided that the most humane course would be to send such of them as were willing back to their native land. Their passages were accordingly paid, and a sum of £3 was given to each. About 40 out of the old men took advantage of the offer.

The Minister stated to-day that he had received a great many letters from China appreciating the action which had been taken; and the Consul-General for China had personally thanked the Commonwealth authorities for the consideration which had been extended to his countrymen.

UNEMPLOYED IN NEW ZEALAND.

WELLINGTON (N.Z.), Tuesday.

In order to meet the unemployment difficulty, the Cabinet has authorised the Labour Department to despatch 400 men to road and railway works in various parts of the Dominion. Considerably over a thousand men have been despatched by the Labour Department since March 31 to various Government works.

GERMANY AND ENGLAND.

The first of the series of German lectures this winter, in connection with the Foreign Lectures Society, was delivered in the Royal Society's Rooms on Monday night. Dr. Storie Dixson presided, and introduced the lecturer, Herr Kiliani, Consul-General for Germany.

The lecturer took as his subject "The commercial and economic relationship between Great Britain and Germany." There were, he said, two problems confronting the world to-day—the search for knowledge and business activity. The geographical position of Germany had demanded protective tariff walls, whereas England's insular position and already-acquired ascendancy, demanded free-trade as her policy. England was the world's banker. One big asset that Germany had was her increasing population. In spite of the loss of 30 millions by emigration to North America during a century, Germany to-day had realised the economic importance of conserving her energetic forces. There had been such trade reciprocity between Germany and England that there was now an almost-adjusted equilibrium between the two countries. The solidarity of the German Empire had been aided not a little by the temperament of the German artisan, who gloried in his work. Herr Kiliani concluded by saying that when the biggest sea Power greeted the biggest land Power, it can only make for universal peace.

Mr. A. B. Piddington, in moving a vote of thanks, dwelt upon the mutual interests of the two great nations which were indeed near relatives.

POLICE COURTS.

THEFTS FROM THE RAILWAYS.

Joseph Francis Thiem, 25, was charged before Mr. Love, S.M., at the Central Police Court with stealing bundles of bags, valued at £6 and £8 respectively. He pleaded guilty, and elected to be dealt with summarily.

Mr. Love fined accused £10 or three months in the first case, and £15 or four months in the second. Accused was allowed a month to pay in each case.

SHOP-LIFTING.

At the Central Police Court, before Mr. S. Love, S.M., Annie Pearce (34) and Annie Walsh (32) were prosecuted for stealing a number of articles from the shop of Anthony Horderns and Sons, Ltd.

Both pleaded guilty, but Walsh added that she was under the influence of drink, and did not know what she was doing.

Senior-Sergeant Mankey stated that there were no previous charges against Pearce, who was a married woman. There were three previous conviction against Walsh.

Mr. Love stated that fines in such cases always fell on the unfortunate, hardworking husband.

Accused's husband then appealed on behalf of Pearce, and she was fined £15 or three months. Walsh was sentenced to six months' hard labour. Pearce was allowed to September 1 to pay £7 10s, and to October 1 to pay the balance.

SHOPLIFTING CASE.

On Tuesday last Hannah Smith, a woman of 34, was convicted at the Redfern Police Court of stealing a shirt from the State Stores, Limited, Regent-street, Redfern, on July 17. On that occasion Mr. Barnett adjourned the case, so that inquiries could be made before a penalty was inflicted.

Yesterday Smith was again before the court. The arresting constable stated that inquiries had been made regarding accused. The address she had given was not correct.

Accused was fined £5, in default three months' hard labour.

THE LIQUOR TRADE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Mr. Stooke does not consider that I made good in my statement that drink enormously increased the cost of government. In my last letter I gave specific evidence both official and expert, to prove that where no-license had been carried, crime had decreased. I feel sure your readers will agree that if there is an enormous decrease in crime then the cost of such crime is saved; and if the change from license to no-license produces that result it is unanswerably proved that drink was the cause of crime. However, in response to Mr. Stooke's challenge for proof, I herewith submit my evidence—first, by giving the statements of Government officials, and then from the "Statistical Register of N.S.W.," giving figures based on the opinions expressed. I will confine my case to the cost of crime, lunacy, neglected children, and the Government asylums of Rookwood, Liverpool, Parramatta, and Newington.

Re crime: Mr. S. M'Cauley, Comptroller-General of Prisons, says: "There can be no doubt that drink is responsible for a very large proportion of crime." Mr. W. H. Colls, when Governor of Darlinghurst Gaol, said: "Drink is the cause of a large and preponderating proportion of the people who come here." Sir Frederick Darley, late Chief Justice of N.S.W., said: "Seven-tenths of the crime in the country could be traced directly, or almost directly, to drink." I submit that I have justification for stating that at least half the cost is due to the liquor traffic. Say 50 per cent. of £89,712 on prison, £44,856; 25 per cent. of £159,384 on State and judicial expenses, £39,971; 50 per cent. of £551,649 on police, £275,823; total cost of drink-caused crime in the State, £360,650.

Re lunacy: The "Statistical Register" for several years has shown that about 20 per cent. of the committals to insane asylums are caused by "Intemperance in Drink." Page 99 for 1912 gives 233 commitments out of a total of 1018. 20 per cent. of £211,102 net cost of Lunacy Department to the State, £42,221.

Re neglected children: Mr. A. W. Green, of the State Children's Relief Board, says: "In 60 to 70 per cent. of the cases dealt with by the board the chief cause is drink." 50 per cent. of £110,770 on State children's Relief Board, £55,385.

Re Government asylums for the infirm: Mr. E. Henson, when director, said: "At Rookwood, Liverpool, Parramatta, and Newington, there are at present 2800 men and women. Drink is the largest contributing cause in bringing them here." 50 per cent. of £82,572 cost of the above institutions, £41,286.

These items give a total of £499,542 increase cost of government to the State of N.S.W., for which we receive about £100,000 in license fees. I recognise that the Commonwealth of which we are a part receives about £1,750,000 in Customs duties, but assert that the expenditure of the £7,000,000 saved from drink on other commodities, and the reproductive value of such diverted capital, and also conserved manhood, would more than compensate for any supposed loss of revenue should we be big enough and wise enough to abolish the liquor trade.

I am, etc.,
JAMES MARION,
General Secretary N.S.W. Alliance.

M. GUILLAUX'S TOUR.

M. Guillaux stated yesterday that he decided to undertake shortly a tour of North Coast district. He said that he [had] a strong personal desire to familiarise himself with the configuration of the country for reasons which he said he would announce at a later stage.

The airman intends to give a public exhibition in Sydney on Saturday, and to undertake his northern excursion immediately afterwards. He will proceed as far as Brisbane. M. Guillaux expressed himself as being very grateful to the Australian public for the way in which he has been treated, and he is determined to show the people to the full extent to which the aeroplane can be used in war. M. Guillaux regards the aeroplane as one of the principal arms of defence.

SMALLPOX.

One case of smallpox was reported to the Board of Health yesterday, the victim being a man residing at Moree.

NEW ZEALAND STEAMERS FREE.

The quarantine restrictions placed on vessels arriving from New Zealand, which have been in force since the last outbreak of smallpox, have now been removed, and steamers will not be held up at Watson's Bay for medical examination.

The Union Company's steamer Moeraki, which arrived from Wellington yesterday, was the first vessel to revert to the old order of things, and, on her arrival, was allowed to proceed up the harbour to her berth.

TAREE, Tuesday.

All the smallpox seems to have been stamped out here.

WILLIAM H. PERRY, F.C.P.A. } Auditors.
WILLIAM CRAIG, F.C.P.A.

AUDITORS' REPORT.

We have examined the above Balance-sheet, made up to 30th June, 1914, and report that we find the several items therein stated to conform to the Balances in the General Ledger, and the Balance Sheets of the respective Branches of the Bank collectively.

We have counted the Cash and examined the Bills held by the Bank at the Head Office in Sydney on the 30th June, 1914, and hereby certify that we have found them correct. We further certify that all Vouchers, Accounts, and Documents necessary for verifying the Balance-sheet have been submitted to us.

The Cash, Bills, and other Securities held at the Branch Banks in New South Wales and Queensland on the date of Balancing have been certified to as being correct by the usual documents, and the figures of the Balance-sheet of the London Branch have been received by cable.

In our opinion the above is a full and fair Balance-sheet, containing the particulars required by the Articles of Association of The Australian Bank of Commerce, Limited, and properly drawn up so as to exhibit a true and correct view of the state of the Company's affairs as shown by the Books of the Company.

WILLIAM H. PERRY, F.C.P.A. } Auditors.
WILLIAM CRAIG, F.C.P.A.

In moving the adoption of the Report and Balance-sheet for the Half-year ended June 30th, the chairman said:—

In considering the figures of the Balance-sheet, the most satisfactory comparison to make is with the figures of a year, rather than with those of six months ago; as the former is the more likely to reflect the real progress, in a country where the preparation for, and the results of, its seasons cause a certain ebb and flow in its finances as the year goes round. On either method of comparison being applied, however, satisfactory development is shown by the Balance-sheet.

During the year there has been an increase of over £500,000 in the total figures, which have risen from £5,735,000 to £6,237,000. On the liabilities side deposits have increased by £452,000, and now stand at £2,980,000; a feature which gives us considerable satisfaction.

The Reserve Fund is larger by £20,000 transferred out of profits; whilst other net increases are incidental to the growing business of the Bank.

Taking the Assets side of the Balance-sheet, the items of coin and their equivalent, in readily realisable items, such as: short loans in London, Government Securities, Australian Notes, Balances with other Banks, and Bills receivable, amount to the substantial figure of £1,770,000; and show an increase of £286,000 on the corresponding figures of a year ago; the strength of the Bank in this direction being thus fully maintained. The Bank's holding of coin, together with these readily realisable items, is equal to over 58 per cent. of our total liabilities to the public; or, in other words, for every pound of the public's money, we hold over 10/6 in cash, or its equivalent, and the position as a whole is one of great financial soundness.

During the year, the Bank's Bills Discounted, Loans, and other advances, have increased by £220,000 from £3,864,000 to £4,090,000; and it is satisfactory for shareholders to know that the real volume of new business is considerably larger than the figure of £220,000 mentioned—owing to substantial realisations of old Assets, the proceeds of which have been used in new advances.

Referring again to the item of "Government Securities," it may be noticed that these words now replace the words "British Consols," which appeared in the last and previous Balance-sheets. After due consideration, we decided to take the opportunity provided by a rise in the value of Consols, and realised our holding at a price slightly in excess of the figure at which it stood in the Bank's books. The money has been re-invested in other high-class Stocks, any of [illegible], all of which are repayable on a definite date, [illegible] larger proportion being so repayable within [illegible] few years. Greater stability in market value may therefore be expected, than is the case with Stocks [illegible] which no definite date of repayment has been taken.

We are alive to the necessity of extending the Bank's business. The opening of several new branches has been appreciated in districts where needed [illegible] facilities have been provided; and our general business tends to improve in consequence.

Turning to the Profit and Loss Account, you will note the amount provided during the six months [illegible] Graduated Land Tax and Income Tax—a fairly heavy item. During the past half-year we have not received the same rates of interest on our London [illegible] ances as we had obtained during the previous three or four years, owing to a fall in the value of [illegible] there. These items, together with the fact that extra provision for our staff, necessary under existing circumstances, has been made, account for the small reduction in the profits for the half-year. I am pleased to say the reports from our various branches as to the prospects for the coming season are of a favourable nature.

The motion was seconded by Mr. Mark Sheldon, and carried unanimously.

The retiring Directors, Dr. G. J. Sly and Mr. Mark Sheldon were re-elected to the Board.

Mr. William Craig, F.C.P.A., and Mr. G. Mason Allard, F.C.P.A., were elected Auditors for the ensuing year.

A vote of thanks was accorded to the Chairman, General Manager, and Officers of the Bank.

At a subsequent meeting of the Directors, [illegible] Manning was again elected Chairman of the Board.

ASK ABOUT DOUBLE COMPRESSED ASBESTOS.
Builders,—Here is a line worth your attention—CALMON'S DOUBLE-COMPRESSED ASBESTOS SHEETING.
Equal to the old-style Asbestos Sheeting in every respect, but with a further advantage—each side is finished smooth. Calmon's Double-compressed Sheeting takes paint or kalsomine readily on EITHER side—gives an excellent surface with enamel—and can be used with great success for all interiors. It is THE material for partitions in week-end and seaside cottages.

A MODERN MATERIAL.
"POILITE" ASBESTOS CEMENT, SHEETS AND TILES.
(Genuine British Made.)
For low first cost, quickness, cleanliness of erection, appearance, and serviceability, "POILITE" is the last word in building materials.
"POILITE" does away with the litter, delay, and confusion inevitable with lath and plaster. It is as serviceable as stone, yet as cheap as weatherboard.
"POILITE" Sheets for Walls (inside and out), Ceilings, Partitions, etc., are fireproof, ant-proof, non-absorbent, and do not crack or warp.

MACHINERY.

A BIG HARDWARE STOCK

PURCHASED BY DANKS.

We have purchased the whole of the Stock of T. J. Bown and Co., the old-established Plumbers' Supply House, of Bathurst-street.

We bought at a walk-in-walk-out price—our own price.

Now's the time for Special Bargains there, in lots to suit Plumbers, Jobbers, and others. We are making Big Reductions to clear immediately, and the balance of stock will be sold by Auction at an early date, at Bown's premises.

LATHES, DRILLING MACHINES, CHATWIN'S PIPE-CUTTING AND SCREWING MACHINES, PLUMBERS' MATERIALS AND TOOLS, PIPE, GAS GLOBES, GAS FITTINGS. MANY OTHER LINES THAT MAY SUIT YOU.

DANKS,

Otherwise John Danks and Son Propty., Ltd.,

The Plumbers' Supply House,

[illegible] PITT-STREET, near LIVERPOOL-ST, SYDNEY.

GET A "PIONEER" GRIP ON

and you'll get a grip on more Profits, too. "Pioneer" Leather Belting cuts out all slippery, half-time pulley runs. "Pioneer" runs slacker than ordinary Belting, and this means greater Power conveyance—Pulleys whirring at full speed ALL the time—and with less strain on shafting and friction on bearings.

"PIONEER" LEATHER BELTING

is made only by J. C. Ludowici and Son, Ltd., "Pioneer" Works, 117 York-street, Sydney, opp. Q. V. Markets. Every foot of "Pioneer" bears our trade mark, and is made from the centre cuts of a flawless Australian Ox Hide, which has been tanned in our own Tannery, and honestly built up in the big "Pioneer" Factory. "Pioneer" is the Belt that YOU need for more profits—ask us for particulars.

REDUCED WORKING COSTS

FOR WOODWORKERS.

Competition makes it extremely difficult to increase your profits by raising the price of your goods, but there is nothing to prevent you very materially increasing your profits by reducing your working costs. This can be easily done by installing T. and R. Lees' Woodworking Machinery. It will increase your output at no extra overhead cost. Their products have now set the standard both for quality and price.

HOMESEEKERS. LANDOWNERS.
If you are the owner of a Block of Land in any suburb we will help you to secure your own Home by building you a W.B. Cottage on our established system, viz., that for each £100 your home costs you pay us 5s 4d per week, which covers both principal and interest, and repays your debt in about 10½ years. We do the work with our own permanent employees, and guarantee you satisfaction. No initial expenses. Please call or write for full particulars.

READY MADE DAIRY FARMS.

FOLLOWING IS A SAMPLE OF ONE OF THE MANY FARMS FOR SALE:—

Contains an area of 381 acres 3 roods 15 perches, with complete boundary and subdivision fencing. Well built and substantial 4-roomed cottage, 5-stall bails and dairy, all of most modern type. Situated on a nice rise, and overlooking a magnificent lucerne flat of about 75 acres. This flat is protected from the west by a ridge, thus ensuring perfect shelter for the growing of lucerne seed, etc. The river runs through the farm, close to the house, providing a never-failing supply of water for irrigation, and the flat before mentioned could be utilised for this purpose to advantage. The grazing land is good, with ample timber for shelter. A magnificent opportunity for a good farmer. The whole 75 acres has been cultivated, and could now be planted with lucerne. Close to rail, school, store, post-office, etc.

PRICE £7 PER ACRE,
Including all improvements.

TERMS. £360 deposit, then no further payment for 2 years, and balance in 14 equal half-yearly payments.

Interest 5 per cent., payable half-yearly.

MENTAL EFFICIENCY.

Mental efficiency is superior to and governs physical strength and brute force. In social life, in the mart, in the office, in the class-room, in the world's work everywhere throughout the wide world, it commands respect, enforces admiration—and succeeds.

The Pelman System of Mind and Memory Training develops the memory, increases the power of concentration, strengthens the will, gives clarity of thought and self-possession in difficult situations, cultivates organising and directive capacity—in brief, it gives all-round mental efficiency.

The Pelman System is taught by post in 12 interesting lessons. It takes from eight to ten weeks to complete the course. Benefits begin with the first lesson, and the interest and attention are maintained throughout.

Write now to the Secretary for Book, "Mind and Memory Training," which is posted free.

PELMAN SYSTEM, 1 Gloucester House, Melbourne.

MOTOR DRIVING MEANS MORE MONEY IF YOU ARE TRAINED AT DOHERTY AND ADAMS' MOTOR SCHOOL.

Be convinced by those who are now heartily glad that they took our course.

Mr. W. S. Thomson, Beverley, Burrowa, writes:—"I have covered 10,000 miles on my car, and am making from £8 to £10 per week clear. I have always got a good word for DOHERTY and ADAMS' MOTOR SCHOOL."

Mr. R. Tunney, 804 Leichhardt-street, Brisbane, writes:—"I want to express the satisfaction I have after going through a course at your Motor School. One comes away feeling confident that any Motor Trouble can be found and rectified."

Mr. Thos. Smith, 316 Victoria-street, Darlinghurst, writes:—"I have already received the offer of a position as Motor Driver to Messrs. PETERS and CO., Redfern. I cannot speak too highly of the careful and painstaking manner in which you took me through the whole course of instruction."

Country Pupils find their Expenses Light, who attend our School.

MOTOR DRIVING AS A PROFESSION STANDS ABOVE MOST OTHER OCCUPATIONS. 100 Cars or thereabouts are sold in Sydney weekly. Drivers must be had at all costs. Why not you take it up. 100 Students have been trained in this School since January this year. Many of these hold the best positions in the Government and leading firms of this city. Police, Ambulance, Firemen, Tramway, and Railway come here for tuition. More licenses are obtained at the Traffic Offices weekly for my students than any similar business in Sydney. Forty-two licenses issued to students from this school in the past month. Ten out of 10 passed first try, June 28th. These are facts, and will stand verifying. Students are taught on several cars (six), each of different make, and each operates differently in change, speed, viz., Gate Change, Panhard, Quadrant, etc. If you wish to be really competent, you must have experience on many makes—one or two are useless. To obtain and hold a position, you must show your employer the number of cars you have driven. You are trained in 10 to 20 days to be expert Traffic Drivers, and go for the test in the city, not to a suburb. There are no failures. Your license, or money refunded. The largest school in the Southern Hemisphere. Fitted with electric power for Fitting, Turning, and General Engineering, thus giving the student a much greater chance of mastering the motor of to-day. Course, £1/10/ for Car and Services. THE SURREY MOTOR SCHOOL (Registered), 81 Campbell-street, near Elizabeth-street.

MOTOR Driving, Engine Parts, etc.—Expert individual tuition on late model 4-cyl. gate-change cars. I will make you competent in 7 to 10 days. Fee, £1 10s. License guaranteed. 77 Henderson-road, Alexandria, opp. P.O.

EVERYWHERE this winter—in City and Country—outdoors and indoors—people are eating

ARNOTT'S "GOOD LUCK" BISCUITS.

Thousands are learning how good they are—proving that these biscuits fulfil the demand for a light, delicious food, that can be served "comme il faut," at afternoon teas and other formal occasions.

These are the biscuits that delight everyone, because of their flavour—that satisfy everyone because they are so full of nutrition and absolutely wholesome—that do everyone good because they are so pure.

Arnott's "Good Luck" Biscuits come to you through every grocer, in tightly-sealed, airtight tins. Ask yours.

A GENTLE DENTIST

can work wonders with the most tender teeth. By careful, skilful work he can save you from pain, and you will have complete confidence in him. Through all my work, Gentleness is the prominent feature. Nervous ladies need not have the slightest fear in my hands. In fact, all who have been treated have been delighted with my methods. I have an apparatus, the only one in Sydney, with which I drill and fill the most sensitive tooth, quite painlessly. This wonderful invention enables the nervous patient to come to me with complete confidence, and then send their friends. What better proof could you have? My patients not only receive the most skilled work, but are also fully protected against risk. I guarantee my platework and fillings for five years. If any rare fault develops I remedy it free of charge. I specialise in absolutely painless extractions, and will put £5 on the table, and will give it to you if you feel even a twinge with the worst tooth. Even abscessed teeth I extract without pain.
OPEN TILL 6 P.M. DAILY (SATURDAYS INCLUDED), UNTIL 9 P.M. FRIDAYS.

FARMER'S, SYDNEY,

PITT, MARKET, AND GEORGE STREETS.

YOUR FURNITURE SHOULD BE YOU.

Cheap Funiture would lead your friends to proclaim you as sadly lacking in taste. Remember that when folks enter your home the first thing they criticise is the Furniture. If anything jars on them, the jar will rebound on you, because Furniture is regarded as an index of taste.

Yet there is no need to purchase expensive Furniture to do justice to your good taste. T. and C. Rileys' inexpensive prices provide well-made, modern Furniture planned on the best traditions of the trade. Every taste can be fully gratified except bad taste. You should see our splendid selection.

We also have many beautiful examples of Sheraton, Jacobean, and Louis XIV. Furniture that would grace the most elegant drawing-room.

FOY'S GREATEST FAIR!!

AGAIN TO-DAY AT FOY'S UNUSUAL FAIR VALUES

IN EVERY SECTION.

THE HUGE ATTENDANCE OF YESTERDAY SPOKE FAR LOUDER THAN MERE WORDS OF THE WONDERFUL MANNER IN WHICH THE REMARKABLE VALUES ABOUNDING AT FOY'S WINTER FAIR HAVE IMPRESSED THEMSELVES UPON A DISCERNING PUBLIC.

THE THRONGS AROUND THE FASHION SHOW ROOMS, LEAVING OUT ALTOGETHER THE STEADY PURCHASING TAKING PLACE IN ALL OTHER SECTIONS, PROVED BEYOND A SHADOW OF A DOUBT THAT THE WONDERFUL SUCCESS OF THE WINTER FAIR, 1914, IS DUE TO NO OTHER CAUSE THAN THAT ITS OFFERINGS ARE QUITE UNPRECEDENTED, AND ARE POSITIVELY GIGANTIC IN BARGAIN SIGNIFICANCE, AS WELL AS GIGANTIC IN COMPREHENSIVENESS.
AMONG TO-DAY'S ATTRACTIONS ARE:—

IN THE COSTUME SECTION.

SPECIAL TABLE OF LADIES' MODEL EVENING COATS, in "PEAU-DE-PECHE," FRENCH "AMAZONS," and a few SATINS, in good Pastel shades. They are made in the latest draped effects, and tremendously reduced in price. All to be cleared to-day at 24/11, 24/11.

FOY'S have decided to SACRIFICE FIFTY EVENING GOWNS TO-DAY AT LESS THAN HALF PRICE. These are all imported Models in a great variety of materials, and all in the latest styles. Foy's Clearing Prices are

FOY'S HAVE DECIDED TO CLEAR OUT the balance of their stocks of LADIES' TAILOR-MADE COATS AND SKIRTS at tremendously reduced prices. They are all this season's goods, and must be sold during the next few days. If you pay us a visit to-day you can select a very smart Costume at either of the following prices:—
13/11, 19/11, 24/11, 29/11, 35/.

IN ONE-PIECE ROBES we shall be pleased to show you something extraordinary in the way of value—in fact, they are marked much less than they usually cost. The materials are Serges and Tweeds. The prices are 8/11 to 12/11.
Ideal little House Frocks.

OUT GO ALL OF FOY'S TEDDY BEAR COATS AT FAIR PRICES—
Still a good range of colours and styles, but they are selling very rapidly.

SPLENDID LINE just opened in LADIES' BLACK ASTRACHAN COATS, in the very latest shapes. These are very late in coming to hand, and we have marked them for this reason at a very low price.

LADIES' FUR COATS.—Any Lady requiring a Fur Coat should pay Foy's a visit immediately, and see the big reductions we have made in these beautiful Coats. Prices from

WOOLLEN SPORTS COATS.—THREE SPECIAL "FAIRINGS" AT FOY'S, for this week only. All pure wool, and a big range of colours.

FINAL CLEARANCE OF 250 LADIES' FULL-LENGTH KNITTED WOOLLEN COATS, in Navy, Browns, Saxe, Cream, Greys, etc. These are simply given away at Foy's Clearing Price of 9/11 EACH, 9/11.
Order at once.

EVENING FABRICS AT FOY'S FAIR PRICES.

SEA-FOAM CREPE, DOUBLE WIDTH, in the most exquisite shades and colour combinations ever seen. Make delightful Evening and Street Frocks.
FAIR PRICE, 1/9½ YARD.

"POPLIN LUMINEAUX" and "CASCILLIS," DOUBLE WIDTH, in a magnificent assortment of colours. A soft, rich material that drapes with simplicity and elegance. They glisten like snow under sunlight.
FAIR PRICE, 2/3½ YARD.

"VENETIAN" EVENING CLOAKINGS, 44in WIDE, soft, exquisite blending of colour and richness of quality are the points that are making these cloakings so much in demand. Specially reduced.
FAIR PRICE, 2/6½ YARD.

"CRYSTALLINE," DOUBLE WIDTH. Come and see the charm of these smart fabrics. Their beauty and excellence are apparent at a glance, so artistically do they lend themselves to the new flowing line mode.
FAIR PRICE, 11½d YARD.
